CHINESE PREMIER SEIZED BY REBELS WHO DEMAND WAR AGAINST JAPAN

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and Other Nanking Military Leaders Detained at Sian-fu by Marshal Chang Hsiao-liang.

CAPTOR EX-GOVERNOR OF MANCHURIA

Government Deprives Him of Office and Threatens to Send Troops Unless Those Held Prisoner Are Freed Immediately.

By the Associated Press.

NANKING, Dec. 13 (Sunday.)—Chinese authorities unreservedly admitted today Gen. Chiang Kai-shek was held prisoner at Sianfu as a result of a military rebellion in the Shensi provincial capital. His detention by Marshal Chang Hsiao-liang, the Nanking Government declared, placed it face to face with one of the gravest crises in the history of China's Nationalist move. In an all-night session the Chinese Government authorities here dismissed Marshal Chang from all official positions in the Nanking administration.

They threatened a military campaign against the "young marshal," who was charged with treachery, unless he released his captive immediately and submitted unconditionally to Nanking's orders.

As emergency measures, Dr. H. H. Kung, Minister of Finance, took over leadership of the Executive Yuan (Premier), while Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, Minister of War, assumed direction of the nation's military affairs commission. Both of these positions normally are held by Gen. Chiang.

The capital is quiet. Armed soldiers who began patrolling the city last night, as soon as the crisis became known, were withdrawn at daylight.

Officials expressed the opinion that civil war was inevitable unless Marshal Chang immediately ceased his activities.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 13 (Sunday.)—The Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported from Nanking today that the Chinese Foreign Office admitted Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, Premier of the Chinese Nationalist Government, had been seized by mutinous troops.

The agency said the Nanking administration declared the soldiers, under the command of Marshal Chang Hsiao-liang, held the Government leader at Sianfu, Shensi province. It said the troops demanded that the Chinese Government immediately declare war against Japan.

For some time, the agency said, it had been known that Chiang Kai-shek wanted to eliminate Marshal Chang, who once was Governor of Manchuria, now Japanese-sponsored Manchoukuo, and is said to have sworn to get it back.

Other Leaders Detained.

Marshal Chang, the Domei Agency related, likewise seized Yu Hsueh Chung, governor of Kansu, and other Nanking military leaders, including Shao Li-Tzu, Chu Chua-Hua, Chang Tso-Ping, former Ambassador to Tokio, and Chen Chien, generally considered Chiang's right hand man.

Then he issued a circular telegram, which the Domei Agency said demanded: 1—Immediate military operations against Japan. 2—Restoration of Manchaukuo to China. 3—Restoration of Sun Yat Sen's policy of recognizing Communism.

On receipt of the telegram, the Chinese National Government at Nanking was said by Domei to have replied:

"The National Government fully appreciates the young marshal's proposals, but the National Government first desires the immediate release of Chiang Kai-shek, after which it will discuss emergency measures in connection with the young marshal's demands." (Chang, though 38 years old, has been known for 20 years as the young marshal to distinguish him from his father, a famous war lord, Chang Tso-lin, killed in the bombing of a train.)

SPANISH SUBMARINE SUNK WITH 44 OF CREW; REBELS PLAN TO STARVE MADRID

Captain and Two Men Picked Up After Torpedo Attack by Another Undersea Boat, "Evidently Foreign."

By the Associated Press.

VALENCIA, Spain, Dec. 12.—The Ministry of Marine of the Spanish Socialist Government issued a communique tonight, saying its submarine C-3 had been torpedoed and sunk by another submarine, "evidently foreign," off Malaga, seaport on the southern coast of Spain, near the Straits of Gibraltar.

The Spanish submarine was said to have gone down with 47 of its crew aboard. As far as known, officials said, only the captain, Agustin Garcia, and two seamen were saved. They were reported picked up later by the vessel Artabro.

The C-3 was built at Cartagena, chief naval arsenal of Spain, in 1928. Her displacement was 915 tons on the surface and 1290 tons submerged. She was 247 feet long.

With two sets of eight-cylinder Diesel engines delivering 2000 horsepower, the vessel had a speed of 16 knots on the surface and 8½ knots when submerged. Her armament consitsed of one three-inch anti-aircraft gun and six 21-inch torpedo tubes, four in the bow and two in the stern.

JUDGE PREACHES TO DRUNKEN DRIVERS OVER VICTIM'S BODY

Hales 77 of Them From Pittsburgh Jail Into Church Where He Lectures Them.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 12.—Judge M. A. Musmanno haled from jail into church today 77 convicted liquor-drinking automobile drivers and preached a funeral sermon over the body of a penniless victim of an alleged drunken driver's automobile.

"When Wasco Bombar left his home in turbulent Europe to come to the land of peaceful America, he did not realize he was coming to a place where in many ways the highways are as dangerous as a no man's land of war," the Judge said.

"He did not know every year 36,000 lose their lives on those highways. No one told him every year more than 1,000,000 are injured and crippled on our thoroughfares. Had he known all of this he would have preferred to remain on his little farm in Poland, where one lives not so excitedly as in America, but a little more securely."

POPE PIUS HEARS MASS RECITED IN PRIVATE CHAPEL

Sits in Armchair for Several Hours and Is Gradually Regaining Strength.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 12.—Pope Pius XI, stricken eight days ago by partial paralysis of the legs, was able to spend several hours in an armchair today and to hear mass recited from the private chapel adjoining his sick room. It was said he was very gradually regaining strength, and now may be considered out of immediate danger. He is 79 years old.

For the first time since his illness there was today no official bulletin on his progress, and the Pope transacted some business with Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Secretary of State, during the day.

Driver and Five Children on School Vehicle Victims; Three Others Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

GALLUP, N. M., Dec. 12.—A fast Santa Fe mail train crashed into a light truck at Zuni crossing, six miles east of here today, killing six Navajo Indians and injuring three others seriously.

Tully Pugh, fireman of the westbound train, said the truck bearing the adult driver and seven boys, all under 15 years of age, apparently stalled on the track.

The driver and five of the boys were killed, and the other three were taken to a hospital. The truck was attached to the Indian day school at Canyon City, and was taking the children to see a basketball game. A Coroner's jury fixed responsibility on the dead driver.

300,000 IN CAPITAL ARE EVACUATED

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Dec. 12.—Fascist insurgents have abandoned efforts to smash their way through Madrid's defenses and have resorted to an encircling movement intended to starve the city, the capital's military leaders said tonight.

Nevertheless, Madrid officials rushed the evacuation of women and children. The evacuation committee estimated 300,000 persons had been taken from the metropolitan area and that 200,000 more would go shortly. The normal population is nearly 1,000,000, but this figure has been increased by refuges from other parts of Spain.

Despite isolated pushes in the University City suburban region which were repulsed, indications were that the Fascists' main objective was to surround the city and cut its communications with the south toward Valencia.

Ten Killed by Shells.

Ten persons were killed today and 20 wounded by insurgent artillery bombardment, but this was regarded mainly as a screen for the more important attempt to enforce a siege which would cut off food supplies.

To accomplish this, Fascists began strong offensives near Aranjuez on the southeast; Guadalajara on the northeast, and in the Pozuelo section near Madrid.

"Each day appears to confirm more and more the idea the German-Italian general staff of Gen. Francisco Franco's army has renounced a frontal attack in view of the strength of our defenses and is planning an offensive which will permit isolation of Madrid from its rear guard," the newspaper Juventud said.

Enemy planes have been noticeably absent from the capital the last few days, confining their bombardments chiefly to sections where armed defenders of the city are stationed. One man was killed, however, by shrapnel in the so-called neutral zone 300 yards from the American Embassy today.

Firing in Moncloa District.

There was a brief exchange of rifle and machine gun fire in the Moncloa district at dawn, but no important changes in positions resulted.

Cloudy skies grounded aviation forces.

Newspapers displayed prominently reports attributed to Moscow that 6000 Germans and 2500 Italians had reinforced Gen. Franco's army and cited this as proof the insurgent leader was running short of troops.

The press charged also that German volunteers were receiving 1000 marks ($400) as an enlistment bonus and a salary of 800 marks ($320) monthly.

Juventud reported workers in mountain regions behind the Fascist lines were in revolt, thereby causing the insurgents much difficulty.

WHEAT HIGHEST IN 7 YEARS

Rises to $1.28¾ on Chicago Board of Trade.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—The highest wheat prices in seven years were recorded on the Board of Trade today after the market shot up almost 3 cents a bushel. December wheat sold at $1.28⅝ to $1.28¾, passing the highest price established in July, 1933, the previous peak since 1929 when wheat reached $1.63.

Traders attributed today's sharp rise to heavy buying stimulated by reports indicating a shortage of next year's crop in the United States and the rush of European countries to buy in the face of war gossip.

KEEPER FOUND SHOT TO DEATH IN HIS TAVERN

Body of Alvin Yakictis With Bullet Wound Below Heart Behind His Bar.

SIGNS OF FIGHT BUT NO WITNESSES

Proprietor at 1701 Cass Avenue Had Been Involved in Recent Row — About 35 Years Old.

Alvin Yackictis, proprietor of a tavern at 1701 Cass avenue, was found shot to death in his tavern at 11:30 o'clock last night. He had been shot below the heart.

A revolver was found near the body, but police were unable to determine whether it was Yakictics' or belonged to the man who shot him.

Yakictis was about 35 years old and resided at 3230 Bailey avenue.

When police arrived, they found Yakictis' body on the flood behind the bar, and no one in the place. They were unable immediately to find anyone who had witnessed the shooting.

That there had been a pistol fight, however, was indicated by the discovery of a number of bullets embedded in the walls and ceiling of the place.

Yakictis, police said, had been involved in a shooting previously, and they expressed the opinion that the fight last night may have been an aftermath of the first affair.

ROOSEVELT CATCHES 34 FISH; SEES A MUSICAL COMEDY

President Works on Two Pouches of Mail; Due at Charleston, S. C., Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AT SEA, Dec. 12.—President Roosevelt caught 34 fish in three hours, including pompano, barracuda and other varieties, today in a spot close to tiny Bird Island in the Caribbean, about 350 miles north of Trinidad. He put over the side of his cruiser Indianapolis in a small boat to try his luck.

The fishing expedition, four small boats in all, carrying other members of the presidential party, left the Indianapolis and the Chester, its convoy cruiser, after an early breakfast. The fishermen could see "those that got away" swimming on the ocean floor under 25 feet of clear blue water.

The presidential flotilla steamed northward again tonight on the return trip from the South American voyage, through the Mona passage between San Domingo and Puerto Rico. Its course then was to be by way of the Bahamas to Charleston, S. C., where it was due Tuesday morning.

A musical comedy was given tonight on the Indianapolis, with the President and his party in the audience.

MISSING BOY FOUND MURDERED IN CELLAR OF UNUSED BARN

Body Discovered Four Miles From New Hampshire Home; Gash on Head.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H., Dec. 12.—Police found the body of 10-year-old Armand Nadeau, missing since Nov. 12, hidden in the cellar of an abandoned barn here late today. Sheriff Stephen W. Scruton of Stafford County said his theory was the boy either had been killed by a degenerate or by a motorist.

Scruton said the body bore a severe cut over the right eye extending well into the hair. There was also a "bad scratch" along the right side of the face, he said.

SITDOWN STRIKERS LOCKED IN Chicago WPA Office Closed and Guarded.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Thirty men and women carried on a sit-down strike tonight behind guarded doors of the Chicago District WPA Headquarters in protest against a reduction in WPA personnel.

The strikers, seven young women and 23 men, included several who were discharged this week from the WPA theatrical art project. They were confined in a small, windowless room at the rear of the offices. Earlier about 70 persons had engaged in the protest, but many of them left before the offices were locked and guarded.

LONDON STREETS THRONGED WHEN HERALDS HAIL NEW MONARCH

DAY OF CORONATION REMAINS MAY 12

Dispatching of Messages to Fighting Services of Empire and Approving Title for Edward Among King's First Acts.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Under dreary skies Britain proclaimed George VI King today, while Edward VIII, who abdicated Thursday, sought solace in a foreign land. As gold-uniformed heralds moved through foggy London streets in medieval pageantry—which twice within a year has heralded a new sovereign—the British peoples camly accepted the change of sovereigns and turned from the Prince-King to the tall brother George—but with deep sympathy and a godspeed to him who found the burden of kingdom too heavy without "the woman I love."

Before the musty battlements of St. James' Palace, heralds hailed the new King. Trumpets shrilled as throngs watched the pageantry of centuries ago re-enacted. The King took the oath in St. James' at 11:45 a. m.

Sir Gerald Wollaston, the Garter Principal King of Arms, proclaimed "our only lawful and rightful liege lord, George VI, by the grace of God, King of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, to whom we do acknowledge all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God, by whom kings and queens do reign, to bless the royal Prince George VI with long and happy years to reign over us."

So tonight the British people were anchored in new allegiance to the second son of George V and his Scottish commoner wife, as a result of Edward's love for the American-born Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Centers of Pageantry.

London's day of splendor to pay homage to George VI centered at Charing Cross, at Temple Bar, at the Royal Exchange, and at each place the proclamation was read. And, as in London, so in other Empire capitals—Dublin belatedly—George's accession was officially announced. Parliament has sworn fealty to the new King. And already two golden throne chairs grace the dais of the House of Lords, where for the past 10 months there had been only one—for the bachelor ruler.

Through the blue gray mists blanketing London, 4000 troops marched to line the route from old St. James to the Royal Exchange, in the heart of the city, where the pageant of heralds moved amid cheers and cries "God save the King." It was a repetition of the ceremonial Jan. 22, when Edward was acclaimed and the woman he loves went unobserved by the crowds into St. James to peer through an ancient window at the scene.

Today's was a different crowd. Last winter there was visible mourning for George V, dead but two days. Today there may have been sorrow in the hearts of the crowds but it was the new King's day, and everywhere Britain closed her ranks in answer to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's appeal to Commons when Edward's abdication became known and rallied around the second son of Queen Mother Mary.

BALTIMORE HOME OF MRS. SIMPSON MAY BE MUSEUM

Purchasers Incorporate and Will Convert House Into "Local Attraction."

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12. — The unpretentious Biddle street house where Wallis Warfield Simpson spent her childhood has passed into the control of a corporation and may be turned into a museum to attract those interested in the woman for whom a King left his throne.

J. Elmer Weisheit, attorney, disclosed that his brother, Allen Weisheit, who bought the house a year ago, had sold it to a merchant, Samuel J. Schleisner.

Three employes of the law firm of Weinberg & Sweeten, representatives of Schleisner, formed the 212 East Biddle Street Corporation. The incorporators are Miss Catherine Stewart, Miss Edna M. Steedman and Everett L. Buckmaster. Representatives of the owners said the house would be converted into a "local attraction."

Bert Nevins, of New York, had made inquiries as to whether the house could be removed to an amusement park on the Hudson River Palisades.

Mrs. Helen Hartman, who rents the house, said a few days ago she was charging 25 cents admission to the room which Mrs. Simpson once occupied.

FRANCE LAUNCHES SECOND OF ITS BIG BATTLESHIPS

"Only for Defense," Cabinet Officer Says at Laying of Plate for 35,000-ton War Vessel.

By the Associated Press.

SAINT NAZAIRE, France, Dec. 12.—France launched its second 26,500 ton battleship today and began work on the largest warship ever to be constructed in France.

After the Strasbourg, a sister ship of the Dunkerque, slid down the ways, the first plate was set for the hull of the 35,000-ton battleship Jean Bart.

Four more battleships, equal in tonnage to the Jean Bart, are planned in France's new program to match the German and Italian navies.

LONDON, Dec. 12.

KING GEORGE VI's speech to the Accession Council today follows:

"I meet you today in circumstances which are without parallel in the history of our country. Now that the duties of sovereignty have fallen to me, I declare to you my adherence to the strict principles of constitutional government and my resolve to work before all else for the welfare of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

"With my wife as helpmeet by my side, I take up the happy task which lies before me. In it I look for the support of all my peoples.

"Furthermore, my first act on succeeding my brother will be to confer on him a dukedom and he will henceforth be known as His Royal Highness, the Duke of Windsor."

CORONATION SOUVENIRS SOLD AS MEMENTOS OF EDWARD

Fears of Heavy Losses Fading; Stamps With Ex-King's Likeness Also in Demand.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Official announcement that the British coronation would be held on schedule next May 12 brought great relief to industries busy with manufacture of souvenirs and other needs for the ceremony.

Although unofficial estimates were that Lloyds had paid out approximately $500,000 on policies covering the possibility of postponement of coronation festivities, business dealers said fears of heavy losses due to scrapping of coronation souvenirs bearing Edward's portrait or initials were disappearing. The public is buying them rapidly as souvenirs of the first English King ever to leave the throne voluntarily.

Likewise there was a business boom today in stamps bearing Edward's picture. Postal officials said the government would go on printing the Edward stamps for several months and that demand for them had skyrocketed far above the usual 20,000,000-a-day figure. The stamps will be printed until King George VI approves his official portrait.

Food Supplies Arrive in Alaska.

SITKA, Alaska, Dec. 12. — The government-chartered U. S. S. Boxer arrived today with food supplies, relieving an acute shortage. It was the first ship to bring food since Oct. 25. Stores had been without butter, eggs, vegetables and other necessaries for a month, as a result of the maritime strike in the United States.

FORMER RULER LEAVES SHIP AT BOULOGNE AND BOARDS TRAIN

Destination Remains in Doubt — Austrian Chancellory Says He Is Expected to Arrive at Innsbruck, Austria, Today.

WAVES TO CROWD AT FRENCH DOCK

Appears at Door of Special Car After Striding From Destroyer With Heavy Guard — Mrs. Simpson Still at Cannes.

By the Associated Press.

ABOARD ZURICH EXPRESS, France, Dec. 12.—Former King Edward of Great Britain, now, by courtesy of his successor, merely Duke of Windsor, was speeding toward Switzerland tonight.

There was no indication of his ultimate destination. The train on which he is traveling will stop at Zurich, but railroad executives said the former King's immediate destination was Vienna. Under last-minute instructions, they said, Edward's car will be switched to another train at Zurich.

The Austrian Chancellory at Vienna said he was expected to arrive at Innsbruck tomorrow, perhaps for the winter sports season of the Tyrol.

Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, the American divorcee for whom he renounced the throne, remained at Cannes. She indicated today she and Edward had no plans of meeting soon. Her divorce will not be final until April.

There were rumors at Vienna that Mrs. Simpson might go to Enzersfeld, Lower Austria, where Edward was a guest on his vacation last summer.

Gendarmes Guard Stations.

The railroad car in which the former King is riding is divided into eight compartments. Edward and his party of five are occupying two compartments in the center. The others are vacant or are being used by detectives.

The former King ate his evening meal from dishes set on stacked-up suitcases. There is no dining table in the compartment. The dinner was prepared in the regular dining car. There was especially cooked meat for Edward's dog.

During a brief stop at Amiens, the former King remained in his car, the curtains of his compartment drawn shut. Detectives of the French Surete barred the corridors leading to the car from either direction. As at all stops in France, gendarmes guarded the station.

The train passed through Laon after 11 p. m. After the stop at Laon Edward remained up, smoking a cigarette and chatting with his companions in apparent good spirits.

One of the English detectives exercised the dog on a leash at each station.

Ex-King Leaves Destroyer.

Wearing a long black overcoat with brown fur collar, and a soft hat, he strode quickly across the 50-yard dock and boarded the Zurich train at 8:10 p. m. His dog trotted behind him.

Troops and Mobile Guards encircled the dock and the railroad station to hold back a crowd of about 100. The former King was escorted by the British Consul and a French police official who boarded the destroyer to receive him.

Boarding the special car with Edward were his aid, Col. Piers Legh, his secretary, his valet and two Scotland Yard detectives. The car previously had been switched to the front of the train. All its blinds were down.

After the former King entered the car, Scotland Yard men and

LEAGUE SUPPORTS BRITISH - FRENCH MOVE TO MEDIATE SPAIN'S CIVIL WAR

Council Adopts Resolution Recommending That Non-Intervention Committee at London 'Take Appropriate Measures.'

DECLARES CONFLICT ENDANGERS PEACE

Without Mentioning Italy and Germany, Diplomats in Effect Uphold Loyalists' Protest Against Recognition of Rebels.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Dec. 12.—Unanimously backed by the League of Nations Council, France and Great Britain will join in seeking to put a quick end to the Spanish civil war, it became apparent tonight.

The impression among League officials, after the Council's adoption of a resolution urging a halt to the war because it endangers international peace, was that all nations concerned, including Italy and Germany, would agree in principle to a new non-intervention accord designed to keep foreign soldiers and munitions out of Spain, and perhaps to the French-British mediation proposal.

The Spanish Government, which appealed to the League after Germany and Italy recognized the Fascist rebel junta, got the satisfaction of having the Council uphold its appeal. While avoiding mention of Germany and Italy, the resolution declares the present situation indorses the French-British mediation proposal to the European Neutrality Committee at London.

The League resolution emphasizes that good understanding ought to be maintained between nations, irrespective of internal administrations of states, and observes the duty of every state is to respect territorial integrity and political independence of other states—a duty recognized by the League Covenant.

The resolution affirms that every nation is under obligation to refrain from intervening in the internal affairs of another state and urges the Non-intervention Committee to spare no pains to make its "undertakings as stringent as possible, and to take appropriate measures to insure forthwith that fulfilment of said undertakings is effectively supervised."

"Recognizing that for reconstruction which Spain may have to undertake, international assistance may also be desirable," the resolution authorizes the League secretary-general to make available technical services of the League, "should suitable opportunity occur."

Foreign Minister from Spain, Julio Alvarez del Vayo, announced he would reserve the right to put the question again before the Council if the French-British plan for mediation fails.

Valencia Newspapers Oppose Plebiscite in Spain.

VALENCIA, Dec. 12.—Newspapers supporting the Spanish Government here expressed opposition tonight to French-British proposals for holding a plebiscite on the type of government desired by the majority of the Spanish people.

The syndicalist newspaper Fragua Social declared such a plebiscite would mean "conceding the status of belligerents to an enemy recruited in three or four countries to crucify Spain. Enough of jokes!

"It would be stupid and absurd to attempt such a thing. Much as the people want peace they are not willing to take it at that price."

The Communist organ Verdad said, "The plebiscite is not necessary and not desirable. One was taken in the general election of Feb. 16 which expressed the popular will. A new one would mean disowning the Government."

El Pueblo, newspaper of the Left Republican party, said, "There is only one solution; recognition of the right justice of our cause and granting aid to enable us to crush forever the menace hanging over humanity."

German Answer Handed to French and British Envoys.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—The German answer to French-British proposals for mediation of the Spanish civil war was made tonight. Baron Konstantin von Neurath, German Foreign Minister, gave his nation's reply to the French and British ambassadors. The Foreign Office refused to disclose the nature of the answer.

Proclaiming the New King

Associated Press Radiophoto.

Text of Accession Council's Proclamation of New King

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The text of the Accession Council's proclamation today announcing George VI as the new British King follows:

Whereas by an instrument of abdication dated the 10th day of December, his former Majesty Edward VIII did declare his irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for himself and his descendants, and the said instrument of abdication has now taken effect whereby the Imperial Crown of Great Britain, Ireland and all other of his former Majesty's dominions is now solely and rightfully come to the high and mighty Prince, Albert Frederick Arthur George,

We, therefore, the lords spiritual and temporal of this realm, being here assisted with these of His Majesty's privy council, with numbers of other principal gentlemen of quality and with the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and citizens of London, do now hereby with one voice and consent of tongue and heart, publish and proclaim that the high and mighty Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George is now become our only lawful and rightful liege lord, George VI, by the grace of God, King of Great Britain, Ireland and the British dominions beyond the seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, to whom we do acknowledge all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God, by whom kings and queens do reign, to bless the Royal Prince George VI with long and happy years to reign over us.

Given at St. James's Palace this 12th day of December in the year of our Lord 1936. God save the King.

be made for the coronation and that it will be held as scheduled May 12. Another was to approve the title of Duke of Windsor for Edward. Thus the association with the ancient castle of Windsor, from which Edward last night made his historic farewell, will accompany him in his present exile.

So, too, will special prayers. The Bishop of Chichester appealed to the clergy of his diocese to offer a special prayer tomorrow:

"Almighty and everlasting God, who doth dispose and turn hearts of Kings as seemeth best to thy godly wisdom, receive our humble prayers for thy servant Edward our late King and Governor, that through Thy most mighty protection both here and ever he may be preserved in body and soul through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen."

New King's Day Begins.

The new King's day began at St. James, where the deed which proclaimed him ruler was drawn up by 300 resplendent accession councillors, and heralds and pursuivants cried out the new monarch was at hand. Then he dispatched messages to the fighting services now at his command. To the navy, in which he was trained, he pointed to his service with naval units during the World War. To the air force he recalled he had served with the independent squadrons in France in 1918. To the Army went a similar greeting.

Prime Minister Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain and other Cabinet Ministers were present with their King at the procedure of accession from St. James, each wearing the official uniform of black and gold with a plumed hat. Sir Austen Chamberlain, the blue ribbon order of the garter emblazoned across his chest, came next; then Sir George Broadbridge, Lord Mayor of London, with his sheriffs and aldermen, all in civic robes over court dress. The Archbishops of York and Canterbury as representatives of the English Church completed the assembly.

King George wore the uniform of Admiral of the fleet, and went from his 145 Piccadilly home by automobile, accompanied only by a police sergeant and two patrolmen.

Slowly the new King walked to his place before the great crimson and gold throne as Queen Mother Mary watched the scenes outside the palace from an upstairs window in Marlborough House.

George's brothers, the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent, were with him inside, and, after the proclamation of his accession, he received the greetings and expressions of loyalty from representatives of the Dominions.

At the conclusion of the council meeting, King George VI walked down the grand staircase, out the palace door, and, to the cheers of the crowd, departed for Buckingham Palace.

The representatives of the Irish Free State were not among the dominion envoys presented to the new King, because of the Irish Parliament's delay in enacting legislation accepting the succession. The Free State became the last dominion to accept the new King—but only in the conduct of foreign affairs. (A measure passed last night established the Free State's independence of Britain in the conduct of internal affairs.)

In the House of Commons, when members assembled to take the oath of allegiance, each member was sworn individually. Likewise, the House of Lords pledged fealty for the second time within a year.

Downtown London Jammed.

Traffic was diverted from the route of the proclamation procession, but downtown London was literally jammed as the proclamations of kingdom were read at St. James, Charing Cross, Temple Bar and the Royal Exchange.

The little Princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, who are next in line for succession to the throne, made their first public appearance in the afternoon in a drive with their father-King, down Constitution Hill. Smiling and excited, they were cheered enthusiastically. The King lifted his hat and the little girls waved greetings.

Only once during the day was there disorder, and that because of the crowds' exuberance. Several thousand watchers at St. James's burst police cordons. Mounted police reinforcements rushed up to clear the roadway.

England, by his request, will not celebrate the forty-first birthday of George VI Monday. Business will go on as usual, with markets open.

Course of History Changes for the Empire.

A few weeks ago Edward toured to South Wales mining areas to view for himself the poverty brought by depression and to devise plans for aid. Ever-charming and friendly to his subjects, he gathered around a piano to join impoverished miners in song, then hurried back to London to urge legislation for the miners, perhaps a public works program.

But a country Bishop turned the course of history. Succinctly, to his diocese, he lamented Edward's apparent lack of religious fervor, his need of God's grace, but without indication he was aware of that need.

The British press, long silent on the rumors of Edward's friendship for Mrs. Simpson, took up the cry to indorse the Bishop of Bradford's criticism. The rumors grew to open statement of the King's affection for the American-born, twice-divorced woman. Baldwin went before Parliament and announced Edward's wish to make Mrs. Simpson his morganatic wife and the Government's refusal to grant this. To Downing street, to Edward's country place, Belvedere, to talk with Queen Mother Mary, Baldwin scurried for a harried 10-day period.

On Thursday last he arose in the Commons and announced the King's decision to abdicate, rather than give up the woman he loved. Edward's abdication was read. Friday at 1:52 p. m., Parliament had accepted the renunciation of throne. George Albert Windsor became King—George VI, after his father who, in adherence to tradition and in appearance, he so closely resembles. And last night Edward bade farewell to his people by radio.

"I did not forget the country or the empire," he said. "You must believe me . . . I have found it impossible to carry on the heavy burden of responsibility . . . without the help and support of the woman I love. . . . The decision I have made has been mine, and mine alone. . . . And I lay down my burden. . . . God bless you all! God save the King."

He then said good-by to his mother and brothers. His car left the gates of Belvedere. In the foggy night he boarded the British destroyer Fury and turned across the sea toward France.

EX-KING LEAVES SHIP AND TAKES TRAIN FOR VIENNA

Mobile Guards posted themselves on the steps at both ends.

Four big trunks and 26 pieces of hand luggage were transferred from the destroyer to the train.

Wave for the Crowd.

Five minutes before the train left, Edward came to the door, waved a friendly greeting to the crowd and chatted with the British Consul. The crowd watched in silence.

Earlier, at 5:20 p. m., a passenger resembling the former King had taken a brief stroll on the dock, walking slowly back and forth between tight lines of Mobile Guards, accompanied by a man in a brown overcoat. He led a small gray dog by a leash.

The British destroyer Wolfhound convoyed the former King's ship from Portsmouth, England, where he embarked early this morning.

Newspaper men and others were kept at a distance of 100 yards from the ship by troops and Mobile Guards. The French torpedo boat Frondeur and a French submarine stood by in the harbor.

Mrs. Simpson Remains in Her Room Most of Day at Cannes.

By the Associated Press.

CANNES, France, Dec. 12.—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson remained in seclusion in a villa here tonight.

Referring to reports that former King Edward might join her a spokesman said:

"There is no reason why the former King should come here; there is every reason why he cannot come."

His reference was to the fact that Mrs. Simpson's divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson is not scheduled to be made final before next April 27.

Mrs. Simpson and her host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers of New York, listened to Edward's farewell address to his empire over the radio last night.

Lord Brownlow, gentleman-in-waiting, who escorted Mrs. Simpson from England to Cannes, took his leave of her tonight, but denied he would join the former King. He took a train for Paris, saying he would return to London, possibly stopping off en route for a holiday.

The staff at the villa said that Mrs. Simpson remained in her room today until well in the afternoon, and that her whole day was "very quiet."

IRISH FREE STATE DAIL ACCEPTS KING GEORGE

Declares His Power Is Limited to Foreign Affairs, Only.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Dec. 12.—The Irish Free State acknowledged the accession of George VI to the throne of the British Commonwealth today after declaring his power in Irish affairs was limited to representing Ireland abroad.

Frank Fahy, Speaker of the Dail Eireann, signed a bill recognizing the abdication of Edward VIII and the enthronement of his brother, a measure which President Eamon de Valera shoved through Parliament.

The fact that it was the Speaker who signed the act into law symbolized the loosening of ties with Great Britain. Yesterday the King's representative, the Governor-General, who would normally have signed the bill, was removed under a hurriedly-enacted change in the Free State Constitution.

His elimination cut the last control Britain had over Irish internal affairs, and the accession bill ended the practice of conducting internal affairs in the Kings' name.

Former Attorney-General Costello declared passage of the new legislation "seems to leave the country with half a crown or perhaps no crown at all."

The vote on the last reading of the abdication and accession measure was 81 to 5, the Labor (opposition party) members siding with the Government. On second reading the count was 93 to 6.

Governor-General Donal Buckley himself signed the act which abolished his office. De Valera said that the formal elimination of the King's name in domestic matters merely recognized an existing fact. "As long as the King is the symbol of the empire and is recognized as such, he will be recognized by the Free State," the President said.

Under the Irish Constitution approved by the British Parliament in 1922, "all powers of government and all authority, legislative, executive and judicial, are derived from the people of Ireland." The Governor-General was authorized to signify the King's assent to bills passed by the Irish Parliament, acting on the advice of the Irish Executive Council of Cabinet.

ANARCHISTS FORCE OUT BARCELONA'S PREMIER

Tarradellas Quitting, Unwilling to Assume Further Responsibility for Their Acts.

By the Associated Press.

BARCELONA, Spain, Dec. 12.—Premier Joe Tarradellas of Catalonia, which is autonomous, announced today the breakup of his Government because of its inability to control anarchist and labor syndicate groups. Tarradellas said his Cabinet, loyal to the Spanish Socialist Government, would hold its last meeting Monday. He refused to accept further responsibility for "the action of irresponsible, uncontrolled groups."

Anarchists' demands for increased representation precipitated the breakdown, the Premier indicated. "It is useless to deny the general political problem has come to a head," he said. "This situation must be cleared up since every day it becomes more insupportable in its aspect of no discipline and in its sense of responsibility. "As Premier I must say I am not disposed to continue with this state of affairs, since I cannot, nor will I ever, consent to take the responsibility for acts of Government which often are carried out by irresponsible persons and those who now call themselves uncontrolled."

Meanwhile, Minister of Economy Jean P. Fabregas sought to create an international zone in the Port of Barcelona, which Fascist Gen. Francisco Franco seeks to blockade. The proposed zone would be near refrigerated warehouses and the railroad, distinguished by special flags and lights at night to spare it from bombardment. The objective was to assure preservation of food supplies.

Is Depression Over? Administration Still Doesn't Know How Much of It There Was or Is—LaGuardia Foresees 10 More Years of Work Relief.

By Paul Y. Anderson,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.

ACCORDING to Chester M. Colby, president of the National Manufacturers' Association, there is not much left of the depression—it's just about over. This, if true, is the most important news of the week, not excluding the abdication. That is to say, it is the most important news to Americans. We may take more or less interest in the emotional problems of David Windsor, but when it comes to the depression—that, as an earlier generation of St. Louisans would have said, is something else again. It strikes closer home. If we are reaching the end of the depression the tidings should be broadcast in clear and ringing tones.

In the first place, what is—or was—the depression? To many persons, the central and distinctive characteristic of what we have called "the depression" was the fact that a terrific number of people had no jobs, and couldn't get jobs, and hence were unable to buy the necessaries of life. Has that condition ended? Have those people now got jobs, and gone back to buying what they need?

Such official figures as are available are imprecise and unsatisfactory. Actually, they are estimates rather than data. It is true, as has so often been remarked, that, in the face of all the billions the administration has spent to combat the depression, it still has failed to ascertain its extent. Some persons have been suspicious and mean enough to hint that the administration didn't care to learn those figures while the election was pending. Be that as it may, some statistics are available.

Fewer Wage Earners.

THE Department of Labor calculates that in May, 1929, the number of wage-earners in the United States, not including agricultural workers or domestic servants, was 35,978,000. That is the department's top figure. That represents the peak of prosperity, as we knew it. (The fact is, of course, that at least 2,000,000 and perhaps 4,000,000 persons able and willing to work were jobless at that time.) The date of the department's latest figure is September, last. The department estimates that, in September, the number of wage-earners in the country, excluding agricultural workers, domestic servants and persons employed on Federal emergency work relief projects (but not excluding those on PWA projects), was 31,683,000.

It will be seen that the figure for September, 1936, is 4,295,000 less than the one for May, 1929. Moreover, the smaller figure includes persons employed on PWA projects—and certainly the population has increased in seven years. As to what change there has been in the number of agricultural workers and domestic servants, there is no official or reliable information, but common knowledge and observation of the increased productivity of farm machinery, and the curtailed consumption of farm products by city dwellers would hardly prompt anyone in his right mind to suppose that the farmers are short of hired hands.

The glad shout that "prosperity is back" has been louder and commoner during the present year than at any time since 1929. The Department of Labor has fairly dependable statistics on employment in 17 different categories of business, including such lines as mining, petroleum, the wholesale and retail trades, electric power production, the telephone, telegraph and trolley services; hotels, laundries, insurance and private building construction. They constitute a very large and diversified segment of American business. Last February, according to the department, these industries, services and trades employed approximately 14,800,000 persons, and last month they employed approximately 16,000,000. It is a gain, to be sure, but does it justify any one feeling that the depression is over—that "prosperity is back"?

Postscript on Tugwell.

A GREAT many unkind things have been said and written about Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, former Under-Secretary of Agriculture and head of the Resettlement Administration. In the course of recording the news as it happened, this reporter probably wrote his share of them. Nevertheless, now that "Tug" has gone off into the molasses business to make a lot of money, certain facts should be set forth to keep the record straight.

The facts about Tugwell are these: He is an extremely attractive young man (well, to be exact, he is 45), with an acute sense of social and economic injustice, who happened to get the power and the opportunity to do something about a lot of things that had been burning him up for a long time. As might have been expected, he turned out to be the world's worst administrator—and no politician at all. The waste and mismanagement in Resettlement were simply incredible. The hard-boiled knife-wielders on Capitol Hill couldn't be expected to like anyone with the name of Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, and when they saw he looked like a movie star, their deepest prejudices were confirmed. Worse still, he had only contempt for them, and took no pains to conceal it. The marvel is that the Senate ever confirmed him.

In justice to him, however, the fact should remain of record that all his purposes were beneficent and humanitarian. His desire was to use the Governmnet to help those who were unable to help themselves. One trouble was that he believed the end justified both the means and the expense, and some of his altruistic dreams were costly.

La Guardia's View.

MAYOR LA GUARDIA of New York, one of the sanest and shrewdest public officials in this—or any country, protests against the administration's plan to scale down work relief, and declares that it will be at least 10 years before the results of Federal and State social justice legislation can justify the elimination of Federal work relief. And he emphasizes, when he says it, that he is giving such legislation, both present and prospective, the benefit of every doubt. WPA funds will be exhausted Jan. 20. President Roosevelt has estimated that about $500,000,000 more will be required by July 1. La Guardia urged the Mayor's conference to fight for $750,000,000, and the head of a relief workers' union is demanding that the appropriation be $1,250,000,000.

One may hope—or, better still, pray—that Mr. Colby is correct in believing that we are just now emerging from the depression.

As to Ex-King Edward.

IN Washington, naturally, are many newspaper correspondents who have served long periods in London. Among some of those men the belief is very strong that what caused the Conservative Government to force the abdication of Edward VIII was not so much his determination to marry Mrs. Simpson as his continuous encouragement to, and sympathy with, the underprivileged classes of Great Britain. To state it another way, they feel that his devotion to the Welsh miners had more to do with costing him his throne than his devotion to Mrs. Simpson.

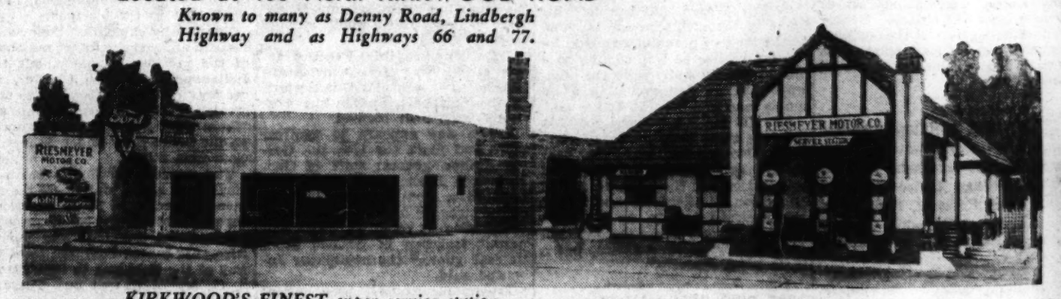

For a long time, these experienced observers say, the conviction had been growing among members of the ruling classes in Great Britain, that Edward's instinctive antagonism to injustice and suffering, plus his independent habits of mind, constituted a real threat to the caste system. The caste system is one under which its beneficiaries enjoy all the comforts and securities of life without being under the necessity of performing any useful service in return. And, since self-preservation is the first law of nature, it dies hard.

"New York Cleaner" Becomes "Texas Cattleman"—Defense to Rest Tomorrow or Tuesday.

Presentation of defense evidence in the trial in Federal Court of Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench and three co-defendants on a charge of mail fraud in the Muench baby hoax, will be completed tomorrow, the sixteenth day of the hearing, or at latest by Tuesday, defense lawyers said yesterday.

Since the defense began, Friday afternoon, the case has moved more briskly, due largely to the fact that the cross-examination of witnesses by District Attorney Harry C. Blanton has been much shorter than similar questioning, by defense counsel, of Government witness produced in the first 14 days of the trial.

Co-defendants with Mrs. Muench are her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, Attorney Wilfred Jones, the baby broker, and Mrs. Helen Berroyer. They are charged with being parties to the use of the mails in a scheme to defraud Dr. Marsh Pitzman, wealthy physician, by convincing him falsely that he was the father of a child which they claimed, also falsely, had been born to Mrs. Muench. The trial is before Judge George H. Moore.

Less Than Two Hours on Stand.

Mrs. Berroyer, the only defendant to take the stand so far, completed her testimony, including cross-examination, in less than two hours yesterday and Friday afternoon.

On cross-examination yesterday the District Attorney, inquiring in a calm voice, with a pad of note paper in his hand, first directed Mrs. Berroyer's attention to telephone calls she had testified she received from Grace Thomasson, Government witness and self-declared participant in the mail fraud plot. The witness recalled she had testified she received two telephone calls after Nov. 15, 1935.

Blanton then pointed out, reading from a transcript, that at Kahoka, Mo., where the same defendants were convicted and fined for conspiracy in the baby case, she had testified she did not recall receiving any such calls after Nov. 15. Confronted with this discrepancy in testimony, the witness conceded that her answer at Kahoka was correctly reported, but went into a voluble explanation to the effect that "since this matter has become more serious," she had searched her memory more thoroughly.

Cattleman or Cleaner.

Next, the District Attorney recalled that she had testified on direct examination that Mrs. Thomasson had told her she (Mrs. Thomasson) took the Ware baby from its mother, Anna Ware, to "fool a boy friend, a wealthy cattleman from Texas." Then, reading from the Kahoka transcript, the prosecutor asked Mrs. Berroyer if she had not then quoted Mrs. Thomasson as saying she took the Ware baby to fool, not a cattleman from Texas, but a Mr. Taglibeau, a dyer and cleaner of New York.

The witness said that if that was in the transcript she must have said it in Kahoka, but gave no explanation of the change in her testimony.

On direct examination Mrs. Berroyer was not asked by her counsel to tell where she was on the evening of Aug. 17-18, 1935, when the child of Anna Ware was taken to the Muench home. In previous trials Mrs. Berroyer had told a strange yarn of being in the Muench home, of hearing Mrs. Muench in the agonies of childbirth, of being told later by a mysterious man, who she presumed was a physician, that Mrs. Muench had given birth to a baby.

Defense Strategy Works.

The obvious strategem in the omission of this testimony by the defense was to block cross-examination of the story by the Government under the rule that cross-examination may not go beyond the scope of examination-in-chief. It worked.

Blanton asked if she had seen a newly-born baby the night of Aug. 17. She replied that she had, before counsel had time to object. Blanton then asked her where she was that night, but defense objections that he was going beyond the direct examination were sustained.

Friday, Mrs. Berroyer had testified that her first husband, with whom she lived for 11 years in Haiti, was "an officer in the Marine Corps." On cross-examination, Blanton asked her if he was not a non-commissioned officer. She first said she did not know just what he was, then said he was a lieutenant in the Haitian gendarmerie (which was commanded by Marine non-commissioned officers) and that she did not know what his rank in the Marine Corps was. She said she thought it was a gunnery sergeant, "or something like that."

Mother Supports Story.

Mrs. Mayme Hawker Meyers, mother of Mrs. Berroyer and close friend of Mrs. Muench, was also a witness. As in previous hearings growing out of the baby case, Mrs. Meyers, an invalid, was wheeled into court on a cot, which was placed in front of the jury and raised so that she was in a sitting position.

In a quivering voice, she testified she lived at 5769 Westmintser place, but in the summer and fall of 1935 lived at 5559 Pershing avenue. Her first testimony was in support of Mrs. Berroyer's statement on direct examination that she was not with Jones when he took to Jewish Hospital on July 11 the Price baby, predecessor of the Muench baby in the hoax. For that statement and other testimony in the habeas corpus suit in which Anna Ware recovered her baby from the Muenches, Mrs. Berroyer has been indicted on a charge of perjury in State court.

Mrs. Meyers testified that on the night of July 11, her daughter was at home between 7 and 9 p. m. Previous evidence had been that the Price baby was taken to the hospital, where it died later, about 8 p. m.

Phone Call at "8:03 P. M."

On that evening, she continued, Harold Meyers, a friend of her daughter and herself, and not a relative, was at the apartment. She said she was able to fix the time because she recalled that at 8:03 p. m. she received a telephone from a friend, Charles Gruet, about the result of an operation performed on a relative of his.

On the night of Aug. 17 (when the Ware baby was taken from its mother and moved to the Muench home), Mrs. Berroyer left home at 9:30, she testified, and returned at 12:50 a. m. She did not relate what her daughter had said to her when she returned. It was in this period, Mrs. Berroyer had related in other trials in the case, that she was in the Muench home, and, so she said, observed evidences that a baby had been born to Mrs. Muench.

Mrs. Meyers also testified that she was present when Mrs. Thomasson visited the Berroyer apartment on Nov. 15, 1935. She quoted Mrs. Thomasson as saying she had taken the Ware baby, and that she could return it for money. She quoted Mrs. Thomasson as saying on a later occasion that she had taken the baby to "Shake down a friend."

The witness also denied Mrs. Thomasson's testimony that meetings, in which the scheme to defraud Dr. Pitzman was discussed, were held in Mrs. Berroyer's apartment. Cross-examination by the District Attorney disclosed no new evidence.

Two Support Alibi.

The next two witnesses were called to support the alibi for which Mrs. Meyers had laid the groundwork. Charles Gruet, whom she had mentioned, testified he telephoned the Berroyer apartment on the evening of July 11, 1935, to tell about the result of an operation on a relative.

Harold Meyers, now a boarder at the Meyers home, testified he was present when Mrs. Berroyer answered the phone. He denied being present at a defense council in the Muench home the night of Oct. 20, 1935. On this occasion, Mrs. Thomasson had testified, defense testimony in the habeas corpus suit was "rigged," and in a quarrel, Mrs. Muench took down an ornamental sword from the wall and cut Jones on the hand with it.

The final witness of the day was Dr. Simon Levey, X-ray specialist in the Arcade Building, who told of taking two X-ray photographs of Anna Ware when she was taken to his office by Jones before the birth of her baby. The Government contends one of these was given by Jones to Mrs. Muench and that she in turn exhibited it to Dr. Pitzman as proof of her assertion that she was to become a mother.

Defense counsel attempted to show that one of the films taken by the physician was a side position, but he said he could not recall that he had taken such a view and given it to Jones. The purpose of this unsuccessful line of questioning apparently was to show that only a side view was taken, since Dr. Pitzman previously had testified that the photograph he saw was taken from either front or back.

BOND POLL INQUIRY HELD UP AT LEAST UNTIL FEBRUARY

December Grand Jury Thinks River Front Memorial Is "Good Thing," So It Won't Investigate.

The December term grand jury, which decided not to investigate the riverfront bond issue election of September, 1935, will not be asked to investigate any phase of the election fraud situation, Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller announced yesterday.

Miller had made preparations to submit evidence of fraud in the bond issue election to the grand jury, and at three conferences with the grand jury strongly urged that it undertake that investigation.

A majority of the grand jurors, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday, were unwilling to go into the matter because they felt that the riverfront memorial would be a "good thing" for St. Louis. They had in mind that the injunction suit filed by riverfront property owners, seeking to block construction of the memorial, will be considered next month by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Washington and preferred not to do anything which might prejudice the case in favor of the memorial at that hearing. Another factor in their decision was their reluctance to undertake an intensive investigation because the Christmas holidays fall in their period of service.

New Jury in February.

A new grand jury will be impaneled in February and Circuit Attorney Miller said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he would submit to that, or to a subsequent grand jury, the evidence of fraud in the riverfront bond issue election. The Post-Dispatch has exposed gross fraud in the election, practiced in every one of the 19 wards which gave the bonds the necessary two-thirds majority and in at least one other ward. Test canvasses by Post-Dispatch reporters disclosed fraud in 23 precincts in the 20 wards. The official "no" vote in these wards on the bond proposal was 330, but reporters found 543 persons who had voted "no," and in their canvasses they reached fewer than half the voters.

The investigation of the 1936 primary, begun by the September term grand jury, which indicted 66 precinct officials and two other persons on felony charges, is not yet completed.

There remains also the interrupted investigation of the 1934 primary, delayed for nearly two years by the Supreme Court's failure to reach a prompt decision on an application for a writ of prohibition to prevent the grand jury from opening the ballot boxes. On the eve of the last primary, however, the court decided to deny the writ.

For Dropping 1934 Inquiry.

Miller is inclined to believe that the 1934 investigation ought not to be revived because of later and more impressive disclosures of fraud. The delay would be an obstacle to successful prosecution, he said. He expects that the indictments which will be returned in the riverfront bond issue election inquiry, with those which have been and will be returned in connection with the 1936 primary, will give his office about all the cases that it can handle. "About the same crowd" would be involved in any indictments which resulted from investigation of the 1934 primary, Miller said.

Patrick R. FitzGibbon, a tax consultant who was City Registrar during the administration of Rolla Wells as Mayor, is foreman of the December grand jury. He lives at 5619 Bartmer avenue. The other members are Robert H. Brock, 4418 West Pine boulevard; George F. Cassidy, 3910 Connecticut street; William A. Federer, 3863 Holly avenue; Nathan Feinberg, 5600 Rosa avenue; George W. Jerrold, 5600A Greer avenue; John J. Kaske, 3827A West Bowen street; Henry J. McNichols, 4724 Westminster place; William C. O'Connor, 2914 Sullivan avenue; Edward Rosenthal, 5855 Maffitt avenue; Charles F. Stuart, 5318 Bartmer avenue, and Jacob Wuerz, 4135 Hartford street.

The jury was impaneled last Monday by Circuit Judge Eugene L. Padberg, who gave only routine instructions. He told reporters at that time he was sure that Circuit Attorney Miller would advise the grand jury as to what course it ought to follow in the election fraud investigation.

STAY-ABOARD STRIKE SPREADS TO SECOND FRENCH LINE SHIP

Departure of Champlain and San Francisco Held Up; 1515 Passengers on Latter.

By the Associated Press.

LE HAVRE, France, Dec. 12.—The stay-aboard strike, initiated by the crew of the French liner Champlain this morning, spread to another French ship, the San Francisco, tonight.

About 560 strikers aboard the Champlain held up the liner's departure, as did the 60 aboard the San Francisco, already loaded with a mixed cargo of merchandise.

The San Francisco had 1515 passengers aboard and the Champlain 305 passengers. The San Francisco's cargo, totaling 5000 tons, was destined for Pacific ports.

The Champlain's crew demanded bonus agreements on three points. (1) If the Champlain makes a holiday cruise to the West Indies after reaching New York, (2) If the ship sails less than 24 hours after reaching its home port, (3) For additional hours caused by the change in schedule.

Officers of the line asserted the Champlain's voyage would be canceled unless the sailors resumed their duties in time tomorrow for the ship to sail Monday.

New Grand Jury in Oil Cases.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 12.—The Federal Government will convene a new grand jury Tuesday to forestall further delay in the trial of oil conspiracy cases involving 23 companies, 58 individuals and three trade journals. The announcement by the United States District Attorney John J. Boyle that a new jury will start hearings was interpreted by court attaches as a Government move to issue new indictments replacing those challenged by counsel in the oil cases.

TRAIN KILLS TWO MEN ON TRUCK NEAR BELLEVILLE

William Ridgeway and Peter Hefti, Each 67, Riding With Load of Coal, Struck at Crossing.

William Ridgeway, 67-year-old florist, of 6300 Missouri avenue, St. Clair County, and Peter Hefti, also 67, residing with Ridgeway, were killed when a coal truck, in which they were riding, was struck by an Illinois Central passenger train at the Old Freeburg road, two miles south of Belleville, at 3:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The truck, northbound, was carried about 150 feet by the train and then hurled 50 feet to the right, almost to the shoulder of State Highway 13, which parallels the railroad at that point, near its junction with the Freeburg road.

Both men were thrown clear of the truck and were dead when found. The train, traveling about 60 miles an hour, stopped, then proceeded on to Belleville. There were no witnesses except members of the crew.

The truck apparently was hit as it was about to clear the crossing. There is no bell or other protection there except a warning sign.

Maurice Mulconnery of East St. Louis, was engineer of the train and John H. Allen, St. Louis, conductor.

Ridgeway and Hefti were on their way home from the Midway Coal Co. mine, a mile south of the intersection, when the accident occurred.

Their bodies were identified by William Ridgeway Jr., the only surviving member of the family. He said Hefti, a bachelor, had resided with and worked for the Ridgeways since coming here from Switzerland 12 years ago.

Ray Sterthman, a Belleville motorcycle patrolman, suffered bruises when he was struck by an automobile driven by Roy Rockwell, 600 St. Clair avenue, Belleville, when he was escorting an ambulance containing Ridgeway's body at Third and Lincoln streets, Belleville.

Police alleged that an automobile driven by her struck another car at Riverview boulevard and West Florissant avenue Nov. 15. She was fined $100 on a charge of driving while intoxicated and $50 on one of careless driving. She gave notice of appeal.

500 FIGHT WITH FISTS IN UTAH MINE STRIKE

Women Cheer Pickets in Clash Caused by Attempt to Reopen Workings.

By the Associated Press.

PARK CITY, Utah, Dec. 12.—Strikers, fighting with fists, repulsed about 100 miners who sought to reopen silver mines closed by a walk-out Oct. 12.

About 400 strikers had massed at the lower end of Main street—closing the highway entrance to this canyon-walled mining town in North Central Utah.

A fierce fight developed when 17 automobile loads of men from nearby Heber City answered an operators' call for workers to reopen the mines. Strikers dragged the strikebreakers—who previously had been searched for weapons by Sheriff's deputies—from the truck.

No pistols or clubs were in evidence. The strikers used fists and heavy shoes, while women on the sidelines shouted encouragement.

After half an hour the outnumbered strikebreakers withdrew. Several appeared to have been beaten seriously.

The strike has tied up most of Utah's metal mines. Park City miners turned down an operators' peace proposal last night. They seek higher pay and shorter hours.

'BOY' PUPIL FOUND TO BE GIRL

MONTROSE, Colo., Dec. 12.—"Joe Coberly," high school sophomore who earned school expenses by digging ditches and mending fences, was disclosed today to be a girl, Helen Coberly of Trinidad, Colo.

LABOR LEADER TO GET SCHOOL BOARD PLACE

Mayor to Appoint Thomas F. Quinn to Succeed Judge-Elect Joseph J. Ward.

Thomas F. Quinn, president of the Building Trades Council, a Democrat, will be appointed by Mayor Dickmann, probably tomorrow, to fill a vacancy on the Board of Education. He will succeed Circuit Judge-elect Joseph J. Ward, the Mayor announced yesterday. Labor interests had favored choice of Quinn.

The Mayor received formal notice of the vacancy from the board yesterday. Ward, who was elected to the board in 1935, resigned, effective last Wednesday, because of his coming entrance in Circuit Court.

In naming Quinn the Mayor will preserve the bipartisan balance of the board required by law. He will serve until April, when the place will be filled by election for the balance of the unexpired term, ending in 1941. It was expected that Quinn would file as a candidate for election. Four other members of the board will be elected at the same time for full six-year terms. The board has 12 unsalaried members.

Dickmann told reporters he had been acquainted with Quinn for some time and was favorably impressed with Quinn's attitude in labor dealings. Quinn and other labor leaders have had frequent discussions with city officials over questions arising in the PWA improvement program. It apparently has been Quinn's policy to avoid strike delays through seeking to reach satisfactory agreements.

He is secretary of Steam and Gas Fitters' and Helpers' Local Union No. 562. In this capacity he set up a school of instruction for union members at the headquarters, 3309 Olive street. He has been president of Building Trades Council since July, 1934. At the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor at Tampa, Fla., he represented Central Trades and Labor Union. During the recent presidential campaign he was president of the Missouri Committee of Labor's Nonpartisan League, supporting President Roosevelt.

Quinn was a candidate for the Board of Education in the election of April, 1935, in which two Democrats and two Republicans were elected. He ran third among the Democratic candidates, receiving 58,658 votes, or 5605 fewer than Ward and 12,005 fewer than polled by John J. Sheahan. Members of the Democratic City Committee had said before the election their support was about evenly divided among Sheahan, Ward and Quinn, but apparently at the last minute some of them scratched Quinn from their slates. He had the indorsement then of the Citizens' School Board Committee, a new nonpartisan group.

Quinn has three sons and a daughter and resides at 5206 Thrush avenue.

Another appointment to the board, that of Mrs. Haymer Lowenhaupt, was made by Mayor Dickmann recently. She took the vacancy expiring next April caused by the death of Mrs. Elias Michael.

ARRESTED IN AUTO DEATH FOLLOWING TWO-WEEK SEARCH

Joseph Raggio, Peddler, Admits Owning Machine in Collision That Killed Woman.

TRACED THROUGH EIGHT PERSONS

Prisoner Denies Charge, but Shows Where He Had Car Hidden, in Which Victim Rode.

Police perseverence in the tedious task of tracing ownership of a 1928 model automobile through eight persons resulted in the arrest yesterday of a 54-year-old peddler who was ordered held for the Circuit Attorney pending a grand jury investigation of the death of Angelina Elliott, Negro. She was injured fatally two weeks ago when an automobile in which she was riding at Ninth and Carr streets was struck by another machine, the driver of which fled.

The peddler, Joseph Raggio, 805 Carr street, admitted ownership of the automobile but said he was asleep at his home at the time of the accident, police reported. Except for denying any responsibility, he refused to make any statement about the accident.

Car Found in Swamp.

However, Raggio did clear up one perplexing feature of the case for Lieut. Robert Antram, who was in charge of the investigation. The machine which struck that of George McDonald, 1021A O'Fallon street, in which the woman was riding, although known to have been damaged, could not be found. It was removed from the scene of the collision before police arrived.

Raggio, police said, directed them to a swamp near the northern city limits where he had ordered it taken by a Negro he had employed to tow it from Ninth and Carr streets. It bore evidence of having been in a collision.

Although at the beginning of the investigation police were without the license number of the machine which so quickly disappeared after the crash, a taxicab driver was found who had noted the number after witnessing the accident.

Tracing the Auto.

Registration records showed it had been issued to an applicant describing himself as Samuel Evola, 803 Carr street. At that address it was said no such person was known.

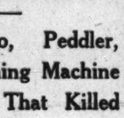

But the license number made it possible to obtain a record of the title. And the title provided the motor number. The motor number, sent to the factory at which the machine was made, enabled police to establish the identity of the first purchaser.

The first owner named the person to whom he had sold it and so, link by link, often with great difficulty, the chain of ownership was established. It reached Joseph Missler, 1328 Franklin avenue, who said he had sold it to Raggio.

Confronted with this statement, Raggio directed police to the swamp where the automobile had been abandoned.

Chinese Dictator and His Captor

CHINESE PREMIER TAKEN PRISONER BY ARMY REBELS

and deprived of all posts in the Government. It was said his dismissal was announced by the Government at dawn in a communique ordering his arrest and trial before the National military council on charges of violating military discipline by incarcerating a superior officer.

The agency said extreme precautionary measures were taken in Nanking to prevent any outbreak.

President Lin Sen of China, Domei stated, had boarded a ship at Fuchow to return to Nanking. The agency said grave fears were expressed for the safety of Gen. Chiang's life, despite pledges of safety from his captor, unless he should be able to escape by private airplane.

Domei dispatches stated the mutineers first seized control of the Sianfu rail and traffic communications, disrupting rail service on the Lunghai line to the west. Then they marched on the Sianfu military headquarters and "detained" Chaing Kai-shek and his aids.

Quoting Ho Chen-chung, pacification commissioner of Hupeh Province, Domei said only a part of Marshal Chang's forces—those under Yang Fu-Chang—were involved in the mutiny.

These troops have been operating as anti-Communist forces in Shensi and Kansu provinces of Northern China.

The Premier, realizing the men were showing signs of joining with the Communists against Japan, had been planning to move central Government troops to positions which would have cut off Marshal Chang and his men from the northwestern Communist armies. The necessity of reinforcing Chinese armies who are fighting Mongolian invaders east of Suiyuan caused postponement of the plan, however.

The Premier's wife left Shanghai hurriedly for Nanking on being informed of the mutiny. She was accompanied by H. H. Kung, Minister of Finance in her husband's cabinet.

Rebel Chief Disgruntled.

Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, former Governor of Manchuria and one of the most powerful of Chinese warlords until the Japanese army in 1931 evicted him from his domains, has long been known to be dissatisfied with the minor role allotted him by Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek in the Chinese military machine.

After his expulsion from Manchuria, where the Japanese replaced his government by one of their own creation, the empire of Manchoukuo, Chang was put in command of the troops in the relatively rich and important middle Yangtze Provinces. However, he was moved by Chiang to the bleak northwestern provinces, with headquarters in Sianfu, ostensibly in charge of operations against Communist bands which established footbholds in Shensi and Kansu.

It was chiefly for the purpose of directing operations against troops threatening to add Suiyuan Province to the Manchoukuoan Japanese sphere of domination, that Chiang Kai-Shek recently visited northwestern China for conference with local Chinese military leaders. Dispatches indicated that the Chinese had repulsed this invasion, at least temporarily.

TURKEY IN DISPUTE WITH FRANCE ON SYRIAN FRONTIER

Both Want League of Nations to Handle Controversy Over Clashes Along Border.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Dec. 12. — A serious dispute between Turkey and France over Turkish-Syrian border clashes became known today as the League of Nations Council agreed to try to isolate the Spanish civil war. While the League Council dealt directly with the Spanish situation, correspondence between the Turkish and French governments was published at the instigation of Turkey.

The idea that the League of Nations might handle the dispute first came from France but was made urgent by Turkey.

The immediate cause of dispute was a reported attack by Turkish manifestants on the Deputy of Alexandetta. Syria, under French mandate, has been promised independence in 1939, but Syrian affairs still are of direct concern to the French Government.

The correspondence disclosed complaints by French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos against Turkish press criticism, and emphasized reports that armed bands have formed on the Turkish-Syrian frontier.

Turkey in reply demanded an international inquiry to determine on which side of the frontier the armed bands were established and described the situation as "extremely alarming and likely to have unhappy consequences."

GLASS MUST CHOOSE BETWEEN TWO MAJOR COMMITTEE POSTS

Can Be Senate Chairman on Appropriations or Banking, but He Can't Hold Both Jobs.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Senator Carter Glass of Virginia will have to choose between two powerful committee posts for the incoming Congress. Whether he wants to continus as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee or succeed to the chairmanship of the Banking and Currency Committee. He cannot hold both.

The banking chairmanship was left vacant by the death of Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida. Should Glass give up his precedence in the banking group, he would yield to Senator Robert F. Wagner. Should Glass give up the Appropriations chairmanship, he would be succeeded by Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee. Both Wagner and McKellar, especially Wagner, are more pro-Roosevelt than Glass.

Friends say Glass has not made up his mind.

TVA ASKS COURT TO EXEMPT PROJECTS FROM INJUNCTION

Makes Plea for 35 in Application of Private Power Companies to Halt Its Work.

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 12. — The Tennessee Valley Authority asked Federal Judge John J. Gore today to exempt about 35 projects in case he should issue a temporary injunction sought by 19 private power companies to halt the TVA power program.

The projects were described by James L. Fly, general solicitor for the TVA, as the most essential now under construction or consideration. Included are transmission and distribution lines and substations.

Judge Gore asked for the list after Fly said that "in no circumstances" should work be stopped on certain projects.

"If I grant an injunction," he said, "I want it to do the least injury that it possibly can to the defendants."

Ringling Will Bequeaths Art Museum to Florida

Valued at $20,000,000—Million-Dollar Home Also Offered State—Divorced Wife Gets $1.

By the Associated Press.

SARASOTA, Fla., Dec. 12.—The will of John Ringling, filed for probate today, leaves his home and the Ringling Museum of Art to the State of Florida.

The circus man, who died last week in New York, stipulated the residence should become a museum of Venetian art and be a part of the John and Mable Ringling Museum of Art—the name of which must remain unchanged.

Should the State fail to accept the gift, valued as high as $20,000,000, and including many recognized art treasures, it would become the property of Sarasota.

The will bequeaths $1 to Mrs. Emily Haag Ringling, his divorced wife. One-half the estate, other than museum and home, including Ringling Circus Corporation stock, the value of which was not disclosed, goes to Ringling's sister, Mrs. Ida R. North. The remainder is bequeathed to John and Henry North, nephews, and Randolph Wadsworth, Cincinnati, husband of Salome North, a niece, to be held by them in trust to "pay over the net annual income therefrom in quarterly or other convenient payments to the representatives of the State."

These trustees are authorized to advance any principal sums required for enlarging the museum or adding to its contents. Mrs. North and John Ringling North are named executors.

The museum, established seven years ago, contains what is reputed to be the world's largest collection of Rubens works. Rembrandt, Titian, Velasquez and scores of others are represented on its walls.

The million-dollar home was erected 10 years ago.

None of the contents of the museum may be sold or otherwise disposed of, the will stipulates.

TRUCK DRIVER FOUND DEAD BESIDE WRECKED AUTOMOBILE

Albert Meyer Presumed to Have Lost Control Near Foot of Long Hill.

The body of Albert Meyer, truck driver for the Nighthawk Freight Service, Inc., 811 Clark avenue, was found yesterday beside his wrecked automobile in a ditch on Illinois Highway No. 13, about six miles west of Belleville. Apparently he had lost control of the car near the foot of a long hill, about 200 feet east of a railroad underpass, and had left the road.

The accident occurred sometime Friday, authorities surmised, as Meyer had failed to report for work when due at 4 o'clock that afternoon. His body was found about 10:30 a. m. by youths who saw the wreckage while hunting in the neighborhood. He was 30 years old and lived at 640 North Sixth street, East St. Louis.

PACT TO PRESERVE PEACE AGREED ON AT BUENOS AIRES

Delegates of All of the 21 Countries Represented at Conference Give Advance Approval.

NATIONS TO CONSULT ON ANY WAR THREAT

Arbitration, Conciliation Called For—Accord Covers Any Menace From Outside the Americas.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 12. — A plan for maintenance of peace in the Americas, bearing the unanimous approval of representatives of 21 American Republics, was approved by an inter-American conference committee today and will be laid before the full conference Tuesday.

The unanimity in sponsorship before the plan reached the floor of the conference was described by Pan-American union officials as unprecedented in the history of inter-American conferences.

The advance approval was obtained quickly after the United States, Brazil and Argentina got the project under way last night following long, secret conferences.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, chief of the United States delegation, declared it gives "the strongest guarantees for peace the continent has ever had."

The committee decided, meanwhile, to end the conference Dec. 23, with a plenary session at which final signature would be given to all agreements reached.

The last plenary session for transaction of other business was fixed for Dec. 21 and the last committee meetings were set for Dec. 19.

Second Proposal Approved.

The committee also unanimously reindorsed the resolution of the 1933 Pan American conference, for non-intervention by one nation in another's affairs. This carried also a Mexican amendment for consultation if intervention appears necessary.

Observers pointed out the amendment gives Latin-American approval of the plan advocated by President Roosevelt and Hull, under which intervention, if necessary, would be by joint action after consultation.

Before the peace plan was approved in the committee, its members decided to send Roosevelt a message of thans kfor proposing the parley.

Hull said in a radio address the existing inter-American peace treaties had not been functioning with complete effectiveness. The new machinery, he said, would smooth and co-ordinate the existing peace instruments.

He disclosed he would offer next week a modified draft of a previously-submitted neutrality proposal for joint co-operation in case of an American war, with the signatories agreeing to consider prohibiting sale or shipment of munitions, or loans to belligerent nations "but only through operation of domestic legislation." This qualification was made because of objections of some Latin-American delegations to pledging, in advance of a war, what action they would take.

Provisions of Peace Plan.

The peace and security project provides:

1. If the peace of American republics is menaced, American governments will hold consultations to arrange for peaceful cooperation in an attempt to prevent war.

2. In case of war or a virtual state of war between American countries, the American republics will hold mutual consultations to prevent the spread of the struggle.

3. In case of international war outside America which menaces the peace of American republics, consultations will be held to determine the manner of inter-American co-operation toward maintenance of peace.

4. If American disputes are not settled by direct conversations they will be submitted to conciliation or arbitration proceedings.

Observers believed the unanimous sponsorship of the plan assured quick approval Tuesday. Then it would go to the various legislatures for ratification. For the United States ratification by the Senate is necessary.

Seven nations followed the United States, Argentina and Brazil in signing the project last night. They were Mexico, Cuba, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Chile, Peru and Uruguay.

This morning these nations signed: Haiti, Dominican Republic, Panama, Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras, Colombia, Venezuela, Ecuador, Bolivia and Paraguay.

Miguel Soler, chief of the Paraguayan delegation, made one reservation in signing the project, declaring Paraguay's existing commitments must not be affected. His statement was interpreted as referring to the Chaco peace protocols, signed at the conclusion last year of the three-year war between Paraguay and Bolivia.

Informed persons expressed the opinion the peace project would not affect the protocols. The plan would be operative, however, if either Bolivia or Paraguay should send forces across the present line of separation between their two armies, a line supervised by a neutral commission.

In other words, it was felt the consultative machinery proposed in the plan could not be used to speed settlement of the Bolivian-Paraguay territorial dispute, but could be applied if they attempted to renew hostilities.

FIRST DINOSAUR PARK IN U. S. TO BE AT RAPID CITY, S. D.

Five Giant Reptiles to Be Fashioned by WPA Workers Under Curator of Fossils.

By the Associated Press.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Dec. 12.—A $25,000 WPA project will give Rapid City what is described as "the only dinosaur park in the United States."

From steel and concrete, WPA workers are constructing reproductions of five giant reptiles that lived millions of years ago—triceratops, triconodon, brontosaurus, stegosaurus and tyrannosaurus rex.

Dr. Barnum Brown, curator of fossil reptiles of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, is assisting with technical advice. Fourteen WPA employes will have 15 months' work on the project.

Situated on a hill above Rapid City, the "dinosaur park" is expected to be a tourist attraction. Completion next fall is scheduled.

The framework of the dinosaurs is formed of steel tubing. This is covered with heavy steel mesh which form a foundation for the concrete. The reptiles will be painted with oils in "natural colors" as determined by paleontologists.

The center of the group is the brontosaurus, measuring 80 feet from end ot end. From the crown of its snake-like head to the ground is 28 feet.

LORD MARLEY SAYS PRESSURE ON EDWARD WAS POLITICAL Opposition Whip in Parliament Thinks Marriage Law Could Have Been Changed.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.—Lord Marley of England, Deputy Speaker in the House of Lords and chief opposition whip, was quoted today as saying that a serious failure was made in dealing with the King Edward crisis. He spoke before the Philadelphia branch of the Foreign Policy Association.

Saying that King Edward apparently suggested the possibility of the modification of the marriage act, Lord Marley said there was no inherent difficulty in carrying out such a suggestion.

"The Government refused," he said. "They based the refusal on the party decision to be made as to whether the marriage of the King is a public or private act. If it is a public act, the King is bound to take the advice of his Ministers. The alternative would be the Ministers' resignation and a general election. The King would have had to follow results. There are large numbers of people who believe that the marriage of a man, whether he be King or a crossing sweeper, is private. I am one of those. There is no need for this indecent haste, indecent pressure on the King. Its explanation has a political aspect."

Truman's Auto Plates Alike.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Senator Truman (Dem.), Missouri, has obtained three auto license numbers all the same—999. One plate is for Missouri, the second for the District of Columbia and the third is his congressional plate. "Any multiple of three is a lucky number," Truman said today.

FATHER WHO TOOK BOY HEIR FROM GRANDMOTHER UPHELD

Texas Supreme Court Awards Custody of Hubert J. Jenkins Jr., 14, to Parent.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 12.—Custody of Louisville's richest boy, Hubert Johnston Jenkins Jr., 14 years old, has been awarded to his father, whom the boy's grandmother once had indicted for kidnaping him.

The boy, now a student at Kentucky Military Institute, will receive from now on the income from a $552,993 trust fund and revenue from one-fifth of the $1,500,000 estate of his grandfather, the late T. L. Bradford, Dallas (Tex.) insurance man.

Joseph S. Lawton, lawyer for Jenkins Sr., announced today the Texas Supreme Court had ruled the father was within his rights when he took his son from Mrs. Addie K. Bradford, his step-grandmother, who had been appointed guardian by a Texas court. "That he did so surreptitiously," the court observed, "does not under the circumstances militate against his rights."

The boy's mother was killed in an automobile accident in 1927, after having been divorced from Jenkins in 1924.

SPANISH CIVIL WAR INVOLVED IN SUIT BY ST. LOUIS FIRM

Tea Company Seeks to Avoid Double Payment on Imports From Espinardo.

An echo of the Spanish civil war was sounded in Circuit Court yesterday when the James H. Forbes Tea & Coffee Co. filed suit to prevent the First National Bank in St. Louis from forwarding to Spain for collection a draft for $2845 drawn last June by Juan J. Albarracin of Espinardo, Spain, a paprika exporter, and accepted by the tea company for purchases from him.

John V. Lee, representing the tea company, said the suit was to protect his client against the possibility of being compelled to make double payment on the draft, in view of the fact that the Spanish Government had confiscated Albarracin's property, including bank accounts, after the draft was honored.

Albarricin, he said, had recently directed the tea company to pay $2416 of the amount due him to one of his creditors. If the draft should be forwarded and should fall into the hands of the Spanish Government, Lee explained, the Government might confiscate it and enforce collection and in that event Albarricin could hold the tea company responsible for the amount due him since he had directed payment to a third party. The tea company says it will not carry out his instructions as to the $2416 without a court order canceling the original draft.

Circuit Judge John W. Joynt issued a temporary restraining order and set a hearing for Thursday.

$30,000 BUILDING DEDICATED

City Garage and Shop at 2322 Clark Avenue Opened.

A new $30,000 Sewer Division garage and shop at 2322 Clark avenue, erected by city employes with funds from municipal revenue, was dedicated yesterday. Workers in the division gave a party at the establishment, with Assistant Sewer Commissioner Ernest Paffrath as host. There were about 400 guests, most of them city employes. Mayor Dickman attended.

The one-story structure replaced inadequate old buildings on the same site. The walls are of brick and the floors of concrete. Some of the timbers had been on hand for years, intended for use on the Municiple Bridge but not required there. The garage, housing 60 automobiles, measures 60 by 120 feet and the shops 27 by 90 feet.

FRANCE TO FIGHT AUTONOMY FOR SPANISH MOROCCO

Statement by Gen. Franco That He Will Give Territory Self-Government Causes Alarm.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Morocco, where a French-German war was nearly started 30 years ago, again threatens to become the center of European rivalry.

Gen. Francisco Franco's reported intention to give Spanish Morocco autonomy in reward for its soldiers' aid has alarmed the French Government. Officials have declared that France will fight the move, lest unrest spread to the French protectorate and German influence becomes dominant in the Spanish zone.

Officials said privately that German influence in Morocco, constantly growing since the Spanish revolt started, was "inacceptable" to France. They said they feared Gen. Franco would give Germany liberal concessions there in return for Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's "friendliness" during the civil war.

Says Status Is Fixed by Treaty.

France holds that the status of Morocco cannot be changed without the consent of the European nations, since its government was fixed in the pre-war international treaties.

For years France and Germany battled for supremacy in Morocco. French interests were recognized by international agreements in 1906 and 1909.

In 1910, tribes in French Morocco revolted and a war was fought by a French expeditionary force before order was restored. The fighting ended in French occupation of Fez after due notification to other world Powers.

Spain, however, was angered by French occupation of Fez and occupied two towns with her own troops. Germany, joining in the "indignation," sent the gunboat, Panther, to Agadir, announcing that it would protect German lives and property.

Armies Near Mobilization.

France, seeing the German move as a challenge to its influence with the Sultan, made a protest. Armies of both countries were near mobilization and for a time war was expected.

Great Britain, however, threw its influence on the side of France, condemning Kaiser Wilhelm's action and denying his right to equal status with France in the North African Empire. The fear that Germany, its strongest sea rival, would camp near Gibraltar and threaten the old route to India, was largely responsible for England's action.

French officials think today that England will again stand out against any move by Gen. Franco to give Germany great influence in Spanish Morocco for the same reason.

BUS LINE LOSES FRANCHISE BECAUSE OF FLINT STRIKE

May Be Reinstated, However; Drivers Vote Today on Ending Walkout Disapproved by Union.

FLINT, Mich., Dec. 12.—Striking bus drivers of the Flint Trolley Coach, Inc., will vote tomorrow morning on whether to continue a walkout, disapproved by their union, that has left this city of 165,000 without a transportation system for five days.

The company's franchise to operate its lines was revoked today, although the City Commission may reinstate it. The drivers' union, (the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes) has threatened to suspend the strikers unless they return to work at 8 a. m. Monday.

The coach company prepared tonight a proposal to the striking drivers who are seeking 75 cents an hour, instead of the existing 55 cents, a demand the management has termed "impossible."

WORKERS' ALLIANCE OFFICER FINED FOR DISTURBING PEACE

Policeman Says He Arrested Joseph Hoffman for Distributing Leaflets to Relief Applicants.

Joseph Hoffman, secretary of the St. Louis Workers' Alliance, an organization of the unemployed, was fined $200 and costs in Police Court yesterday when found guilty of disturbing the peace at the relief application office, 2309 Locust street.

Hoffman offered no defense, contending, through counsel, that the testimony of the policeman who arrested him and who was the only witness showed that there had been no disturbance of the peace. Judge James F. Nangle overruled this contention. Hoffman appealed.

The policeman testified he arrested Hoffman because he was distributing leaflets and talking to persons standing in line at the relief station. Hoffman said he had gone there at 4 o'clock on the morning of his arrest because of many complaints that applicants had to stand in line for hours unless they arrived very early. He was arrested about 7:30 a. m.

"SIT-DOWN" STRIKE TRUCE

Kelsey-Hayes, Detroit, Workers to Return Pending Negotiations.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 12.—Officials of the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Co. announced today 4000 workers at its two plants, which were occupied for a time by "sit-down" strikers, would resume work Monday under a truce agreement providing a minimum hourly rate of 75 cents for men and women. Negotiation on the union's demands for increased wages would be resumed with employe representatives, the officials said.

Anti-CIO Steel Workers Parade.

By the Associated Press.

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 12.—Mill workers paraded today through Hancock County mill towns distributing literature advising employes of the Weirton Steel Co. to "shun John L. CONFESSES MURDER

WILLIAM A. KUHLMAN

TELLS OF KILLING RETIRED FIRE CAPTAIN

Prisoner to Testify Against Man at Brookville, Ind., He Alleges Hired Him.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 12.—William A. Kuhlman, 28 years old, met two Indiana officers who arrived today to return him to face murder charges and retold the story of the murder and mutilation of Harry Miller, retired Cincinnati fire captain.

Kuhlman, who was caught with Sam Chapman, 26, Morgantown, W. Va., following a theater robbery Thursday, told Sheriff George Pulskamp, Brookville, Ind., and John Barton, Indiana State detective, he was ready to aid in clearing up the crime.

Tomorrow the officers expect to leave by airplane for Indianapolis, driving to Brookville late Monday.

Sheriff Pulskamp said the State would call Kuhlman as a witness in the trial of Heber L. Hicks, charged with hiring Kuhlman, Frank G. Williams and John Poholsky to kill Miller.

The Sheriff said Kuhlman's story checked, with few exceptions, with that related by Poholsky, in custody at Brookville.

Heber L. Hicks, on trial at Brookville, Ind., confessed paying $6600 to three men to kill Miller. It was from Hicks that Kuhlman told officers he received his share of the securities. In the confession he said he got $15,000 in stocks and bonds belonging to Miller.

Kuhlman said he shared in a division of $5100 in securities as his pay for the killing, bought an automobile and drove West. One of his companions, Frank G. Williams, he said, went as far as St. Louis with him, robbed him of $200 and his clothes and disappeared.

Kuhlman said Miller was hit on the head with a pipe, placed, unconscious, in an automobile. There Kuhlman and Poholsky shot him. Near Eminence, Ky., the body was removed from the automobile. Kuhlman went away and when he returned it had been dismembered. Part of the body was placed in a culvert. The head and hands were thrown into a lake 75 miles away.

Neither the crew of the engine which was backing the car onto a siding nor the watchman on duty at the crossing saw Tallman before he was struck. The watchman said the crossing gates were down.

GIRL ACCUSED OF KILLING MAN

Charged With Clubbing Miner to Death at Oswego, Kan.

OSWEGO, Kan., Dec. 12.—Fourteen-year-old Mildred Baker was charged with second-degree murder in Juvenile Court today, accused of clubbing Ed Littlejohn, 25-year-old coal miner, to death at Chetopa last Sunday.

Juvenile Judge C. S. Carlton said that after investigation the charge would either be dismissed or he would set a date for a hearing. John DeMott, reported to have been fighting with Littlejohn was held as a witness. Investigators said they were told the fight started over DeMott's attention to the girl, and that she intervened for him.

HOMESTEAD PLAN IS PROPOSED FOR SHARECROPPERS

Arkansas Farm Tenancy Commission Makes Recommendations Based on Survey.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 12. — In a summary of conclusions reached after weeks of study, the Arkansas Farm Tenancy Commission recommended today that a new homestead policy be established in the United States to give sharecroppers the opportunities of farm and home ownership.

Copies of the report were sent to members of President Roosevelt's new National Committee on Farm Tenancy and to governors of states with a high percentage of tenancy.

Paying tribute to the more than 50 members of the State commission which Gov. J. M. Futrell appointed last summer to work out a program for State and national action, Chairman C. E. Palmer, publisher, termed the summary of findings "sane, comprehensive, feasible."

"This program translated into prompt action by the Federal Government and the states, will end all dangers from Socialist and Communist activities in rural sections," said the chairman.

The feature of the report was a recommendation that the Federal and State governments collaborate in making available for purchase by tenants lands sufficiently productive to permit the purchaser to pay for them, from his produce, over a long term, at low interest rates.

The Commission proposed that lands used in such a homestead policy be dedicated for all time as homesteads, subject to no encumbrance except as the Federal Government might specify.

In addition, the Commission proposed a broad accompanying program for improvement of health and educational facilities in tenant areas and for standard contracts between landlords and tenants.

"With present birth rates, America will not be a great nation by the end of the century unless she preserves a healthy rural life," said the report. "The cities can no longer keep themselves alive; they must be steadily replenished by the country. This need not be harmful, providing we see to it that the country people are strong, free and well-nurtured."

HEARING ON CHANGES IN BLIND PENSION ACT

Legislators Investigating Revision Necessary to Qualify Missouri for Federal Aid.

Suggestions for legislation enabling Missouri to share in Federal funds allotted under the National Security Act for State pensions for the blind were heard yesterday by a subcommittee of legislators meeting at the Missouri Commission for the Blind headquarters, 4342 McPherson avenue.

After two and a half hours of argument between two groups, one favoring and the other opposing relaxing of pension requirements, O. K. Armstrong, State Representative from Springfield, announced he would recommend passage of legislation leaving intact present blind pension laws, but attempting to extend aid to more persons.

Difficulties and arguments of the hearing centered around attempts to suggest a definition of blindness that would satisfy Federal authorities and still restrict applications enough to preserve the present law. Under terms of the national act, the Federal Government matches state blind pensions dollar for dollar, when certain requirements are met.

Present pensioners, who must be totally blind, were represented by A. J. Myer, an officer of the Cultural and Service Club for the Blind, who maintained that any broadening of the definition of blindness would destroy the present pension system, termed by him the best in the United States.

There are now listed on the pension rolls 4380 persons who are completely blind and who qualify for a pension of $25 a month. Almost an equal number are classed as "industrial blind," meaning those not completely blind, but with sight so defective they cannot be gainfully employed in regular industry.

Their spokesman, Jack Leach, 5241 Delmar boulevard, contended requirements for pensions should be made less strict to include his group.

Among those attending the hearing were eight blind persons: Mrs. Mary E. Ryder, director of the Missouri Commission for the Blind; Prof. W. W. Burke of Washington University, and Mrs. Rose Ohaus of Kansas City, committee members.

Armstrong is one of 14 members of a committee hearing suggestions for changes in State laws that will allow Missouri to participate in all phases of the Social Security Act. He said he would make a report for his subcommittee Monday at Jefferson City.

INDIANA'S NEW DEVICE FOR SAFETY ON ROADS

State Tries Out Three Types of Highway Ridges to Separate Traffic Lanes.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 12. — Indiana, worried by a rapidly mounting death rate on its highways, is experimenting with something new in safety devices—ridges separating lanes of traffic moving in opposite directions.

Three different types of the ridges are being tested on U. S. Highway No. 31, a four-lane road, between South Bend and the Michigan line. The lanes for one mile are separated by a low, rounded concrete curb; another mile has its lanes divided by a low, half-moon shaped strip of corrugated metal, and a third mile has short, transverse corrugated metal strips which cause a bumping sensation when a vehicle passes over them.

"We are desperate and willing to try anything," said Chairman James D. Adams of the State Highway Commission. "We must get away from those traffic tragedies some way. The riding public must help." The State's highway death list for the first 10 months of the year rose to 641, or 64 more than in the corresponding period of 1935.

One of the leaders in Indiana's safety campaign is a man whose business is speed—T. E. Myers, general manager of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. He believes that there should be a speed limit of 50 miles an hour, whereas there is no limit under the present law.

A few months ago the Highway Commission, in co-operation with an electric power company, installed lights on a main highway in Northern Indiana to reduce night driving hazards. Accidents on the highway declined immediately.

In the present lane-separation experiments, a fourth mile will be divided by the "cat-eye" reflectors such as now are used on curves. If the separation of lanes proves successful, similar installations are planned for other important highways.

INFORMATIONS SIGNED IN BLANK DISCOVERED

Assistant County Prosecutor Says He Tore Up Three in Magistrate's Possession.

Three informations signed in blank, one by Prosecuting Attorney C. Arthur Anderson of St. Louis County and two by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney John McNatt, were found by McNatt yesterday at the office of Justice of the Peace Peter J. Walsh, 6404 Page avenue, St. Louis County.

Anderson and McNatt said Justices of the Peace appear with affidavits in careless driving cases, and that often, when they are too busy to fill out the informations, they sign them in blank and hand them to the magistrates, who are expected to fill them in themselves before leaving the Prosecuting Attorney's office. No informations had been issued in careless driving cases to Walsh in the last month, McNatt said.

McNatt went to Walsh's office after receiving a report the blank informations were there. Walsh said he had forgotten to fill out the informations and then neglected to destroy them.

On finding the blanks, McNatt said he tore them up, nolle prossed eight pending charges of careless driving on which there were affidavits but no informations, and instructed Walsh not to issue affidavits or seek information on other traffic cases during the remainder of this year. Anderson's term expires Dec. 31.

Four Hurt in Strike Clash.

By the Associated Press.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Dec. 12.—Four persons were cut by shattered glass today when strike sympathizers broke windows in three automobiles and a bus near the John Morrell and Co. packing plant. A crowd, estimated at from 50 to 70, demonstrated in protest against the discharge of 29 workmen at the plant during labor troubles nearly two years ago. A detail of 20 policemen dispersed the crowd.

SECRETARY TO STARK

J. D. JAMES

GOV.-ELECT STARK CHOOSES JOPLIN MAN AS SECRETARY

J. D. James, Attorney and Head of Democratic State Speakers' Bureau, to Have Post.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 12.—Appointment of J. D. James, an attorney, of Joplin, as secretary to Gov.-elect Lloyd C. Stark, was announced here this afternoon, to be effective on Jan. 11, when Stark will be inaugurated as Governor.

James, 39 years old, was manager of the speaker's bureau of the Democratic State Committee headquarters during the 1934 and 1936 political campaigns. The announcement stated James was not an applicant for the position, and that he accepted the appointment at Maj. Stark's request.

James now is a member of the State Bar Advisory Committee appointed by the Missouri Supreme Court to supervise administration of the court's rules as to the practice of law and conduct of attorneys. He formerly was Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of Jasper County, and has been associated in the practice of law with an uncle, Grover C. James of Joplin, member of the Democratic State Committee for many years, and chairman of the Jasper County Democratic Committee.

$5667 OWED HOWARD COUNTY BY OFFICIALS, AUDIT SHOWS

Clerk Says He Has Followed Predecessor in Matter of Handling Fees.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FAYETTE, Mo., Dec. 12.—A story of misinterpreted fee statutes and careless bookkeeping is revealed by the report of the audit of Howard County offices announced here yesterday.

A total of $5667.21 is listed by the report as due the State, county and others from 13 officers. The audit shows a total of $4108.86 due the county from J. R. Gallemore, county clerk. Of this amount $3688.86 is classified as excess fees paid to Gallemore in the years 1934 and 1935 covered by the audit. The remaining $420 is cited as an excess charge for the preparation of the county financial statement.

"I have followed in the footsteps of my predecessors," said Dr. Gallemore concerning the fee charge. "Any mistakes that may have been made are honest mistakes due to the changing interpretations of the laws of Missouri." Omer Foley, county superintendent of schools, is listed as having drawn $500 more than is allowed by law for his salary. Dr. T. C. Richards, Coroner, is alleged by the report to have been paid $232.55 in excess fees. Dr. Richards, however, cites a ruling from the Attorney-General of Missouri to support his fee rates. County Assessor Foley is charged with $153.71 excess fees due the County.

10 MILES OF WIRE FENCE TO TEST WEATHER EFFECT

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Dec. 12.—Ten miles of wire fences are being set up in nine states, from coast to coast, to find out just how long a wire fence can withstand rain, wind, heat and cold.

The experiment starts out with 10,886 test specimens of wire. Each one bears a number, but no other identification of its make or materials. There are about six miles of plain wire, more than a mile of barbed wire, about half a mile of strand wire, about two miles of farm fence, and one-third mile of chain link fence, the type of mesh surrounding tennis courts.

The tests are sponsored by the American Society for Testing Materials. They are made as a result of facts learned in 20 years of bare iron and steel sheets and metallic coatings.

One of the experiments is assigned to Purdue University. Here the fences have been set on top of a wind-swept hill, bare of shade trees. The fences run north and south, placing them crosswise to prevailing winds.

WPA WORKERS GIVE PENNIES FOR CHRISTMAS FOR THE POOR

Voluntary Contributions Made to Help Those Not So Well Situated as Themselves.

St. Louis WPA workers, to show "their appreciation of the fact that they have been taken out of the so-called 'unemployment column'," have contributed small sums of money to provide Christmas baskets for needy families in the city and county, it was announced yesterday by Harry Simmons, in charge of arrangements.

The contributions, which averaged about 3 cents a man, were voluntary, Simmons said. The plan is being carried out in conjunction with Radio Station WIL, which will broadcast this week, beginning today, requests for the names of needy persons in this district. The broadcast today will be from 4:30 to 5 p. m. and from 4:45 to 5 p. m. the rest of the week.

The names of the prospective recipients will be checked to determine whether their needs are legitimate. It was announced that 500, possibly 700, baskets would be distributed. Simmons said the workers made the contributions to show the general public their appreciation for their employment and for the chance they have been given to earn their own living.

Government Case at Muench Trial: Support Given to Some Phases Of Mrs. Thomasson's Testimony

Prima Facie Case of Plot Made by Prosecution, With All Four Defendants Involved in Evidence.

The case of the United States against the four defendants in the mail fraud trial growing out of the Muench baby hoax rests primarily on the testimony of Mrs. Grace Thomasson, self-declared participant in a plot by which Dr. Marsh Pitzman is alleged to have been defrauded by the false representation that Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench was the mother of a child and that he was its father.

Because of the lurid career of Mrs. Thomasson, nine times married to seven husbands and an undoubted participant in many a shady deal, United States District Attorney Harry C. Blanton offered the rest of the Government's evidence in support of various phases of her testimony. The Government's case, carefully and methodically presented, was concluded before the noon recess Friday in the fourteenth day of the trial before United States District Judge George H. Moore.

In addition to Mrs. Muench, the defendants are her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, Attorney Wilfred Jones, the baby broker, and Mrs. Helen Berroyer.

Two Things to Be Proved.

Proof of the charge against the defendants involves two elements: First, that there was such a plot as the Government sets out in its indictment, designed to make Dr. Pitzman part with money, and, second, that the mails were used in furtherance of the fraud. Because of the very nature of the charge, which involves an alleged conspiracy among the four defendants, evidence of the evil deeds of any one of them in furtherance of the plot is binding on all, provided the primary connection of each of them with the scheme to defraud has been shown.

Preceding the appearance of Mrs. Thomasson on the stand, the Government introduced two classes of witnesses: First, six whose statements were designed to show that Mrs. Muench falsely represented to Dr. Pitzman that she was the mother of a child of which he was the father and that a child was procured in furtherance of the plot; and, second, a parade of witnesses whose testimony was designed to document and confirm Mrs. Thomasson's story of her movements in various phases of the baby hoax.

Next Mrs. Thomasson was placed on the stand, giving an account which specifically stated that the purpose of the baby hoax was to defraud Dr. Pitzman. She involved each defendant in it. The closing phase of the Government's case was the testimony of witnesses subpenaed in an effort to substantiate her story by proving that various phases of it were correct, but not by proving it in every detail.

Dr. Pitzman's Story.

The first witness, Dr. Pitzman, gave his now familiar story of how Mrs. Muench told him he was the father of a child to be born to her as a result of a meeting in O'Fallon Park in 1934, when they resumed a relationship which previously had been intimate. As a result of Mrs. Muench's representations that they were to have a child, he testified, he gave her about $4000, ending his contributions when he discovered he was the victim of a hoax.

Dr. Pitzman also testified that as a result of her representations he changed his will by a secret codicil, to set up a trust fund of $250,000 for the child he thought was to be born to her. Prior to the meeting in O'Fallon Park and before any representations of impending maternity, he had given her $10,500 to be used for the most part in her defense in the Kelley kidnaping case.

The Government then went into the procurement by Jones of the so-called Price baby, which died in Jewish Hospital July 16, 1935, after it had been taken there five days before by Jones and Mrs. Berroyer from the Muench home.

Christine Krout, masseuse, told how Jones procured the child the night of July 10 from its mother, Estelle Oberg, unmarried waitress, whom Miss Krout had befriended.

Price Baby to Hospital.

Dr. Aaron Levy, children's specialist, told how he was called to the Muench home by Dr. Muench on July 11 and there found the Price baby in critical condition from an intestinal ailment, so that he recommended it be taken to a hospital. While at the Muench home, Dr. Levy testified, he was introduced by one of the Muenches, he did not remember which, to Carl Auer, crippled musician who resides with them. "This is our other baby," he quoted either Dr. Muench or Mrs. Muench as saying.

Miss Florence Shaw, nurse in the children's division at Jewish Hospital, and Dr. William Berman both identified Mrs. Berroyer as Jones' companion in taking the baby to the hospital this night. Subsequently a handwriting expert identified the signature "Helen Meyers" on the Price baby's clothing receipt, as in the same handwriting as known signatures of Mrs. Berroyer.

Next, the government produced Mrs. Lily Giordon, wife of the man who was the father of the child of Anna Ware, unmarried Pennsylvania housemaid, which was procured by Jones as the successor to the Price child in the hoax. Testifying reluctantly, Mrs. Giordon identified various letters passing beween her and Jones through the mails. Her testimony definitely established that it was Jones who arranged for Anna Ware to come to St. Louis to have her baby and that Jones was to persuade Anna to give up the child for adoption by unidentified clients of his.

Prima Facie Case.

At this stage of the testimony the government had made a prima facie case of a plot, as a result of which Dr. Pitzman had parted with some $4000, and that two babies had been procured in furtherance of the plan, the second by use of the mails. In its evidence it had involved all four defendants.

The thread of direct testimony on the plot was then interrupted for the parade of witnesses, hotel clerks, telegraph and telephone company employes and the like, who gave advance documentation of Mrs. Thomasson's movements in the plot, and of the use by her and the defendants of the telegraph and long-distance telephone.

Mrs. Thomasson was on the stand six days, a total of 29 hours, of which more than 18 was under a grilling cross-examination by defense counsel.

Summary of Testimony.

Highlights of her testimony were:

That in March, 1935, she was summoned to St. Louis from Florida by Jones, "that he had a deal on and wanted me to help him out."

That after she arrived, she was told by Jones, and later discussed with all the defendants, a plot by which Dr. Pitzman was to be convinced that he was the father of a child to be represented falsely as having been born to Mrs. Muench.

That the purpose of this plot, specifically expressed in many meetings with the defendants, was to get money from Dr. Pitzman, and that the amount $250,000 was mentioned.

That Mrs. Thomasson was to get $5000 for her help in procuring a baby, and that later an additional $2000 was offered by Mrs. Muench.

That because of illness she had to remain in her apartment in Chicago and could not help in procurement of the Price and Ware babies and that Mrs. Berroyer took her place, according to the subsequent statement of the various defendants.

That on the night of Aug. 30-31, 1935, she assisted Dr. Muench in a midnight surgical operation on Mrs. Muench, the purpose of which was to give evidence that Mrs. Muench had borne a child, as she had publicly stated prior to that time.

That after Anna Ware had sued for custody of her child, then held by the Muenches and represented as their own, the plot entered a third phase, in which Mrs. Thomasson was commissioned to get a third baby, to be palmed off as the true child of Anna Ware, so that the Muenches could keep the baby then in their home and later taken from them by the St. Louis Court of Appeals for restoration to its mother.

That the purpose of this phase of the plot was to re-establish the conviction in Dr. Pitzman's mind that Mrs. Muench had given birth to a child. Dr. Pitzman had testified he had abandoned his conviction before Anna Ware's child was returned to her by Court order.

That she and Mrs. Berroyer discussed with State Representative Edgar J. Keating of Kansas City, lawyer for the Muenches in the baby hoax, how the third baby would be taken to Kansas City, after being obtained by Mrs. Thomasson, and there would be "established" in court as the real Ware baby.

That she arranged to get a third baby through Dr. Ben Reitman a Chicago physician.

That before going to Chicago with Jones to get the child she sat in on a conference at the Biltmore Hotel here, in which Mrs. Muench, Jones, R. Shad Bennett, the attorney, and Bennett's secretary were present, and Bennett gave her $540 for expenses in getting the baby.

That the third phase of the plot collapsed when Dr. Reitman declined to furnish a baby, telling her and Jones that they were being watched by newspaper reporters and that the "deal was shady."

Other Witnesses.

After Mrs. Thomasson left the stand the Government moved quickly to its close, presenting evidence designed to confirm phases of her story.

Dr. Reitman, former associate of Emma Goldman, the anarchist, testified Mrs. Thomasson did see him about getting a baby, but denied she had closed the deal for it. He testified that when she arrived in Chicago to get a child she was accompanied by Jones, but the physician told her no baby would be furnished her.

Two reporters for the St. Louis Star-Times told of seeing Mrs. Muench, Jones, Mrs. Thomasson, Bennett and his secretary at the Biltmore the night of Dec. 16-17. They testified they saw Mrs. Thomasson and Jones drive off in Mrs. Berroyer's car, driven by Mrs. Muench's Negro chauffeur, as Mrs. Thomasson had testified, and followed them around the city until they lost the trail in the early morning, after which, according to Reitman's testimony, Jones and Mrs. Thomasson went to Chicago.

Anna Ware on Stand.

Anna Ware was the final prosecution witness. Her testimony included three important phases to the Government's case. They were:

That Jones arranged for her to come to St. Louis and that he took her baby from her after it had been born to her at the home of Mrs. Rebecca Winner, midwife, 6015 Maple avenue. Mrs. Winner is the mother of Mrs. Giordon.

That prior to the birth of her child she was taken on an automobile ride by Jones with a woman described to her by him as the prospective foster mother of her baby, and that the woman was Mrs. Muench, whom she positively identified.

That Jones took her baby from her less than 20 hours after it was born on Aug. 17, 1935, and that his companion, garbed in a nurse's uniform, was Mrs. Berroyer.

Introduction of Letters.

Throughout the trial, where appropriate to the understanding of the case, the Government introduced the letters on which it bases its allegation of use of the mails in the plot. These included numerous letters between Mrs. Thomasson and Jones, discussing the plot in thinly veiled terms, in which they called the baby the "package," and used the words "blessed event" for birth.

Other documentary evidence included letters from Jones to Mrs. Giordon discussing arrangements for Anna Ware to come to St. Louis, and several from Mrs. Giordon to Jones on the same subject. Mrs. Giordon had been reluctant about identifying several of the latter and a Department of Justice handwriting and typewriting expert was placed on the stand to confirm Mrs. Giordon's unwilling identification.

Also among the letters were five from Mrs. Muench to Dr. Pitzman, included in the indictment among its nine counts. Four of them, written prior to the inception of the baby hoax, protested her undying love for the physician, berated him for deserting her and importuned him for money. The fifth, written in September, 1935, protested her regard for him and included a portrait which read: "My baby will be proven to be mine beyond all question of doubt."

Other Documentary Evidence.

Altogether the Government introduced more than 100 items of documentary evidence, ranging from letters to two photographs of Anna Ware and her baby, which the jury, composed of married men of whom 10 are fathers, viewed with obvious interest. Other items in the documentary evidence included hotel registers and ledger sheets, records of long distance telephone calls, one from the Muench home to Mrs. Thomasson's apartment in Chicago, and original copies of telegrams.

In general the testimony followed closely the evidence given in the habeas corpus suit by which Anna Ware recovered her child from the Muenches, and in the two trials at Kahoka, Mo., in the second of which the same four defendants were convicted and fined for conspiracy to take custody of a child without authority of the Juvenile Court.

LUTHERAN EDITOR PRAISES CHURCH OF ENGLAND'S STAND

Dr. E. E. Ryden Hails Proof That Not Even "Mightiest Monarch Could Disregard Laws of God."

By the Associated Press.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Dec. 12.—Dr. E. E. Ryden, editor of the Lutheran Companion, official organ of the Lutheran Augustana Synod, said editorially today "that the most heartening development in the English crisis has been the unflinching stand which the Church of England has taken in opposition to the English Monarch's plan to marry the American divorcee."

"That not even the Monarch of the mightiest Empire on earth could disregard with impunity the laws of God and do violence to the conscience of the Church," the editorial reads, "Has been a salutary spectacle for the world to behold."

BANCOKENTUCKY CO. DOUBLE LIABILITY SUIT

Receiver for Louisville Depository Seeks to Collect $3,800,000 From 305 Stockholders.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 12.—A. M. Anderson, receiver for the National Bank of Kentucky at Louisville, filed suit here today against 305 stockholders of the Bancokentucky Co. asking for double liability assessments on the bank's stock. The assessment is the result of the failure of the National Bank of Kentucky Nov. 17, 1930, which caused the United States Comptroller of the Currency to order the stockholders to pay double liability of $4,000,000.

Anderson won a judgment for $3,872,162 in a suit against the late Joseph Laurent, receiver of the Bancokentucky Co., the holding company for several Kentucky banks. The sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the judgment.

In his new suit, Anderson charges that only $90,745 has been collected on the judgment. He contends that the defendants named in the new suit, along with stockholders of the Bancokentucky Co., are liable for double assessment on each of the 50,000 shares they hold. Most of the defendants reside in or near Cincinnati.

A similar suit will be heard at Covington on Jan. 25 by United States District Judge H. Church Ford.

FRESH CONFERENCE IN SHIPPING STRIKE

Preparations to Send Food Ships to Hawaii From San Francisco Under Way.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12.—Shipowner Spokesman T. G. Plant conferred again today with Harry Lundeberg, representing maritime union strikers on a peace plan proposed by the employers. Both refused to comment.

Col. O. F. Ohlson, government representative, met with union representatives to make final arrangements for sending an emergency food ship to Hawaii. The unions recently agreed to man a government operated ship to Hawaii as they did for Alaska relief.

More warehousemen, affiliates of the longshoremens' union, went on strike in San Francisco and Oakland, causing suspension of negotiations with their employer, a wholesale drug company.

The Pan-American press bureau, conducting a survey financed by the shipowners, reported 59 per cent of 228 local firms canvassed said their business had decreased 37 per cent since the strike. The other 41 per cent reported no loss.

Mayor Angelo J. Rossi of San Francisco called a mass meeting on the shipping strike.

Mayor J. K. Carson of Portland, Ore., appointed a citizens' committee to try to end the strike there.

Mates and engineers will go back to work Monday on the Lykes freighters now tied up in the Gulf of Mexico, putting the ships back into regular service, James M. Lykes Cr., operator of the Lykes fleet, said at Houston, Tex.

At New York, 5000 striking mates, engineers and seamen, marched from the battery up Broadway to Union Square, where a mass meeting was held today. This was the greatest demonstration since the maritime strike began Oct. 29.

METROPOLITAN TO INCLUDE TWO OPERAS IN ENGLISH

"The Bartered Bride," "Caponsacchi," and Possibly a Third to Be Represented.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—At least two operas in English, probably three, will be heard in the Metropolitan's "grand season," which will begin a week from Monday with a performance of "Die Walkure."

By no means the Metropolitan's first performances in English, they will nevertheless be an important departure.

Number one is "The Bartered Bride," Friday night. This gay opera is being lifted bodily over from the experimental spring season, cast intact and ready to function. Smetana's funny business was so popular last spring that many suggested it be put on for a run outside the Met's gloomy walls, which was not done.

Number two is Richard Hageman's "Caponsacchi," the libretto of which was prepared by Arthur Goodrich using Robert Browning's "The Ring and the Book" as its basis.

The Hageman opera has been heard in Central Europe.

The third opera in English probably will be Walter Damrosch's new one, for which Arthur Guiterman, the poet, fashioned the skeleton. The Damrosch work is based on Hale's "The Man Without a Country," and if it reaches performance this season at all, it probably will be late.

25 Years for Arson-Murder Attempt

By the Associated Press.

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., Dec. 12.—Robert Lucy, 32 years old, pleaded guilty here today of arson with intent to kill, forgery and stealing livestock, and was sentenced to 25 years in prison. He admitted having set fire to the store of his father-in-law, Frank McCollum, because McCollum had learned Lucy had forged a note for $108 on him.

REVOCATION OF 21-YEAR-OLD OFFENDER'S PAROLE SOUGHT

The Government is seeking to revoke the latest parole of 21-year-old Dennis F. Toland of Hannibal, Mo., who has been twice paroled on the ground that he is guilty of a third infraction of a Federal law.

A petition filed in Federal Court Friday by Assistant United States Attorney H. G. Morris alleged that Toland recently stole a letter containing a $300 check from a rural mail box near Quincy, Ill., and asked that the young man's parole granted here from a one year jail term for automobile theft be revoked. Jurisdiction in the alleged mail theft is in the Federal Court at Springfield, Ill.

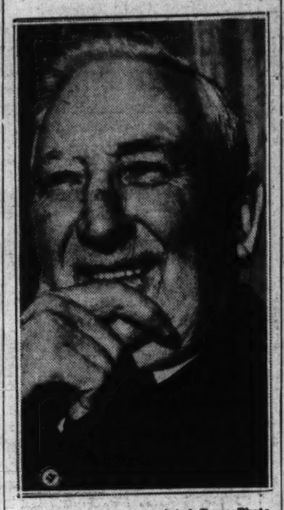

In 1931 Toland was sentenced to the National Training School at Washington, D. C., for automobile theft. He was paroled in March, 1934, but three weeks later was arrested on charges of transporting stolen automobiles over the Missouri-Iowa line. He was returned to the Training School to finish his original sentence, which expired last March.

On being returned here to answer the second Dyer Act charge, Toland brought with him a letter from Superintendent C. D. Jones of the Training School, stating that the youth had served as his chauffeur and had an excellent record at the reformatory. He was sentenced to a year in jail and paroled on Superintendent Jones' recommendation.

P. MILTON SMITH.

NO LIBEL CASE AGAINST EDITOR WHO ASSAILED ROOSEVELT

Charges Against Californian Said to Be Insufficient for Prosecution.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 12.—United States Attorney H. H. McPike announced today that criminal libel proceedings filed against P. Milton Smith, weekly newspaper publisher, because of an editorial attacking President Roosevelt, would be dropped. McPike declined to say whether he was acting on orders from Washington.

Smith, editor of the Mountain View weekly, charged President Roosevelt with being a "hypocrite, a mountebank and a false alarm." A complaint was sworn to against him by Horace Beales, a railway electrician of Mountain View.

McPike said the charges against Smith were "too puny" to be prosecuted, especially in view of the fact many newspapers criticised the President before the election and no action was taken against them.

BILL ONG WINS TWO PRIZES AT AIR RACES IN MIAMI

Exciting Finish in Green Trophy Contest; 27 Entered for Havana Derby Today.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 12.—Bill Ong sent his biplane over the all-American race course at 173 miles an hour today to win the Col. E. H. R. Green trophy and $600.

Ong received another $600 by capturing the Glenn H. Curtiss trophy, flying the 40-mile unlimited race for an average speed of 194.68 miles an hour.

Ong is one of the 27 pilots entered for the first international air derby to Key West and Havana. The planes are to leave here early tomorrow for Key West, where the handicaps will be fixed for the 90-mile water flight to the Cuban capital.

Another event today was the altitude flight of Mrs. Crystal Mowry of Miami, who climbed 7500 feet over Biscayne Bay in a seaplane weighing less than 1489 pounds. This is said to be a record for planes of this type.

Raftery, head of the Building Trades Council of St. Louis. Approximately 125 representatives of labor attended the conference. Speakers discussed a proposed Legislative bill to label all prison products and prevent other states from sending their prison products into Missouri in competition with regular labor. RECOUNT DOES NOT CHANGE RESULT IN 26TH WARD

C. J. Hunt Had Filed Contest Against J. B. Sullivan, Democratic Committeeman.

Recount of the ballots in the election of Democratic committeeman for the Twenty-sixth Ward, in the contest brought by Charles J. Hunt against John B. Sullivan, was completed by the Election Board yesterday. It was learned that the result of the election, in which Sullivan, an Associate City Counselor, defeated Hunt, a Deputy Circuit Clerk, was not changed by the recount.

However, the Election Board, which began the recount Wednesday, was prohibited from disclosing the findings. Its report will be made to Circuit Court tomorrow or Tuesday. The original official count credited Sullivan with 2645 votes and Hunt with 2528, a lead of 117 for Sullivan.

Hunt, aligned with the faction opposed to Mayor Dickmann, was committeeman until the committee election in the August primary. Sullivan is a supporter of the Mayor, who now controls the majority of the committee.

DEFENSE OPENS IN SECOND TRIAL OF VIRGINIA TEACHER

Doctors Testify Wounds on Head of Trigg Maxwell Did Not Cause Death.

WISE, Va., Dec. 12.—Medical testimony as to the cause of Trigg Maxwell's death was contradictory today as defense counsel for his daughter, Edith Maxwell, began presentation of testimony in the second trial of the 22-year-old school teacher.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District of Columbia Coroner, testified the wounds found on the head of the father, according to reports of the autopsy, were not sufficient to cause death. The Washington physician said the condition of the miner-blacksmith's brain as described by two medical witnesses for the State might be found in the brain of any "perfectly normal man."

Commonwealth's Attorney Fred X. Greear had presented 35 witnesses to support his contention Maxwell died as the result of wounds inflicted by Edith in a scuffle with her father at their farm home.

Christmas Show at Shaw's Garden

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

FORMAL design of poinsettias in Christmas display at Shaw's Garden, which will be opened to the public today and continue until after New Year's day.

POSTAL RATES AND RULES FOR CHRISTMAS CARDS

Postmaster Urges Use of First-Class Privilege and Calls for Early Mailing.

Attention has been called by Postmaster W. Rufus Jackson to the postal rates applicable to Christmas greeting cards. The rate for printed cards in unsealed envelopes is 1½ cents for each two ounces, per envelope, and simple written inscriptions, not in the nature of personal correspondence, may be added, together with the sender's name and address.

Cards sent in sealed envelopes or those with more elaborate written messages, even if unsealed, are subject to the 2-cent rate for delivery within the St. Louis postal area and the 3-cent charge elsewhere. The Postmaster urges use of this first-class rate, with return addresses on envelopes, so that senders may have undelivered cards returned.

Dark-colored envelopes may not be used because of the difficulty of reading addresses on them. The Postoffice prefers white or light tints of yellow, pink, manila or robin's egg blue. Cards bearing tinsel, mica or glass may not be mailed unless in heavy envelopes. Anticipating heavy Christmas greeting and pacage mail, Jackson is advocating mailing to reach the postoffices of delivery by next Thursday.

AMISH BRIDEGROOM GOES 'OVER THE FENCE'

Quaint Old Custom Observed at Weddings in Pennsylvania Colony.

By the Associated Press.

LANCASTER, Pa., Dec. 12.—Harvesting is done, and so it's marrying time among the Amish — the plain people—of Lancaster County. Through spring, summer and fall sons of Amish farmers are needed in the fields. Robust daughters are busy in the kitchens.

But now that the tobacco sheds are filled and the grain stored many a smooth-shaven swain will go "over the fence" in a ceremony at least 200 years old in this area. Once "over the fence" the swain, now a bridegroom, will settle down to raise a family, and a beard, "the mark of a man," among the Amish.

The Amish farmer wants no "show." Few accounts of the end-of-fall weddings are to be found. Nor will newsreel photographers get any pictures of them. It's no use trying to attend an Amish wedding unless you're Amish. And pictures are barred.

Wedding an All-Day Event.

The wedding is an all-day event. The actual ceremony is completed early. At dawn the Amish assemble, coming afoot and in horse-drawn buggies over highways where automobiles of a world apart drive past.

The men wear round-crowned, wide-brimmed hats over their square-cut hair. All married men are heavily bearded. The women wear little black bonnets on the back of their heads. Their clothes are black and severe. They will not even use buttons on their coarse-spun woolen garments, using hooks and eyes instead. There is no embellishment. Even the children—and they are brought along—are attired in clothing that duplicates that of the grown-ups.

There are long sermons from texts of both Old and New Testaments. Prayers are said and hymns sung which date back to the early days of the Protestant faith. The guests sit on backless benches, the men one side of the room, the women on the other.

After the ceremony the men go outside for their games, while the women prepare the meal. The men play "barnyard ball," resembling baseball, but older by several centuries.

"Over the Fence."

When the bridegroom emerges from the house the game ends in a scramble and roar of greeting. The unmarried men seize him, and carry him to the barnyard fence. Over he goes into the ready arms of the married men, an ancient custom marking his sudden departure from single state.

Then comes the dinner. When the sun sets the meal is done, the children are rounded up and neighbors bid each other goodby. Strangely, among this people where the Pennsylvania German laguage remains the basis of speech, goodbys are said in English.

The Amish sect was founded in Italy and Switzerland under the leadership of Jacob Amen in 1678.

POLICEMAN KILLS YOUTH, 19

Officer Wounded in Exchange of Shots in Columbus, O.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 12.—Patrolman Otto Mansberger shot and killed Howard Horn, 19 years old, of Canal Winchester, O., tonight in a pistol fight in which the officer was wounded in the right leg. The policeman was called by a restaurant employe who said a man carrying a pistol had just left the place.

Horn's father, William, in Columbus for Christmas shopping, said: "I gave the boy seven dollars to spend for Christmas presents and then bought him a bottle of beer. After that I don't know what happened. He must have gone crazy."

Jailer Shot by Escaping Man.
By the Associated Press.

PADUCAH, Ky., Dec. 12—Deputy Jailer William Burton, 45 years old, was shot twice in the abdomen and seriously wounded tonight by a prisoner who escaped from McCracken County jail. The deputy said Frank Lever, 27, accused of robbery, shot him after he had let the prisoner out of his cell to use the telephone. A woman, said to have admitted smuggling the pistol to Lever this morning, was held for questioning.

GLENN FRANK WILL RESIGN OR BE OUSTED, IT IS REPORTED

President of Wisconsin U. Has Long Been at Odds With Regents, Madison Paper Says.
By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 12.—The Capital Times said tonight that Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, would submit his resignation or be dismissed at a special meeting of the Board of Regents Wednesday.

For nearly a year Dr. Frank has been at odds with certain regents who dominate the board. A movement to dismiss him growing out of a disagreement over administration policies was started last spring, but did not materialize.

The special meeting of the regents Wednesday has been called to prepare the annual statement on the university budget for Gov. Philip F. La Follette. This assignment usually has been left to the president, but the regents, by a vote of 8 to 7 this week, took the matter out of Dr. Frank's hands.

Published reports that two regents, acting as a "special committee on Frank," had conferred with Gov. La Follette and later informed Dr. Frank that he was "through," were denied by all persons concerned.

A secretary in the Governor's office was quoted as saying that Dr. Frank had agreed to resign within a month. This also was denied by Dr. Frank.

Dr. Frank came to Wisconsin 11 years ago. Previously he had been editor of Century magazine.

BOY INVALID TAKEN TO STORE, INFLUX OF GIFTS FOLLOWS

Visitors and Toys Arrive After Nurses' Trip With Him; May Be Last Christmas.
By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 12.—Many persons, anxious to show the Christmas spirit, found the ideal subject here today—a 5-year-old boy, an invalid who may not live to see another Christmas.

The boy, Charles Mendenhall, came to public notice when hospital nurses took him downtown to see his first Santa Claus—in a department store. Newspaper stories followed and then visitors at the hospital.

Nurses reported tonight toys arriving in great quantities. Charles asked for a tricycle, and arrangements were made for a special delivery tomorrow. Christmas morning there will be a second one.

The boy is suffering from pemphigus, a skin disease which, acting like a severe burn, causes death when it spreads. Doctors are seeking a treatment to save his life.

JAPANESE GOVERNMENT BACKS STERILIZATION BILL

Measure To Be Submitted to Parliament Includes Insane, Alcoholic and Criminal.
By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 12.—The Japanese government expects to submit to parliament a bill for sterilization of the insane, epileptics, confirmed alcoholics and persons of known criminal tendencies, it was disclosed tonight.

Operations would be performed only after requests of persons affected or of insane asylums, penitentiaries and social relief institutions. Then a committee consisting of a judge, a government representative and two physicians would decide the question finally.

The measure is similar to laws in Scandinavian countries.

WOMAN OVERCOME BY GAS

Miss Mary Gawedzinski, 23 years old, was overcome by gas last night in the kitchen of her home, 1528 Warren street. Her mother, Mrs. Kate Gawedzinski, and sister, Louise, were also made ill by the fumes, but did not lose consciousness.

The fumes came from a gas heater in the basement which was not equipped with a vent pipe. The gas seeped up through the bathroom floor and into the kitchen. Firemen used an inhalator on Miss Mary Gawedzinski for a half hour.

EX-CHORUS GIRL CALLS LIFE WITH MANUFACTURER 'WORK'

She and H. R. Gross of Chicago Both Charge Desertion in Divorce Suit.
Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12. — A parting sally from Mrs. Elina Orr Gross, 32 years old, former show girl, ended the evidence today in her divorce suit against the wealthy manufacturer, Henry P. Gross.

"Did you work, during your marriage?" Gross' attorney asked the wife, referring to her stage career.

"Yes," she said, and then added "it was quite a job to live with Mr. Gross."

The end of testimony left it to Superior Judge John C. Lewe to decide who deserted whom. Mrs. Gross charges gross with desertion, drunkenness and cruelty, but Gross charges Mrs. Gross deserted him.

She denied she demanded half of his property as a price for reconciliation. All she asked, said Mr. Gross, was "half of what we saved together."

President of A. A. A. Says 'Gas' Tax Will Be Major Issue in 1937

Declaring that diversion to other than highway purposes of revenues from special taxes levied on motor vehicle owners and operators was one of the major problems confronting motorists today, Thomas P. Henry of Detroit, president of the American Automobile Association, in St. Louis last Wednesday to attend a meeting of the Board of Governors of the Automobile Club of Missouri, said that Missouri had set the remainder of the states an example by its constitutional barrier against such misuse of funds logically belonging to highway building and maintenance.

"Legislatures of more than 40 states in the Union will be in session shortly after the first of the year, when taxes will again be a paramount issue," Henry said. "This year 35 states have diverted special tax money collected from motor car owners and users in gasoline taxes and registration fees to purposes other than highway building, maintenance and administration. It is expected that the total sum thus diverted by these states in 1936 will be in excess of $150,000,000. One of the large eastern states spent more than half of its motor vehicle tax collections in this manner.

AAA Attitude.

"There is no adequate foundation on which to base this unwarranted misuse of public power in deliberately appropriating money from special taxes in this manner. The American Automobile Association has resisted at every step these incursions upon the right of motorists to have their special tax payments devoted to a legitimate purpose.

"Again, at the annual convention of the association recently in Detroit, resolutions condemning diversion of gas tax and registration fees to purposes other than road building, maintenance and administration, were unanimously adopted; and Congress was memorialized to reserve motor vehicle taxation to the states as a special field to which they alone were entitled.

"Eight years ago, the citizens of Missouri voted a constitutional limitation against diversion of this sort, and the fine example shown by Missouri has now been followed by three other states which have adopted similar limitations.

Missouri's Gas Tax Lowest.

"Moreover, Missouri has shown the country what can be done by the intelligent use of the motorists' revenues, based on a reasonable tax rate. Missouri's balanced highway system, built with the lowest gas tax in any state in the Union, stands as a monument to her foresight and engineering efficiency."

Russell E. Singer of Washington, general manager of the AAA, who attended the Auto Club board meeting with Henry, commented on the recent increase in membership in the motor clubs affiliated with the American Automobile Association, saying that Missouri was the third major club in the country to recover all of its membership losses suffered during the depression; and now shows a net increase in membership strength.

The Missouri club is the sixth largest motor club in the association, Singer added, and has shown an increase in membership every month this year.

Judges Busy Reading Entries in Contest Held by Ford Dealers

Judges of the St. Louis Metropolitan Ford Dealers' contest for the best slogan on the brakes of the new Ford V-8 were busy the past week going over thousands of entries.

The judges comprised three members of the dealer organization, three newspaper men, a representative of the agency handling Ford advertising, and James Conzelman, football coach at Washington University.

Each slogan submitted was read by each of the judges. It is expected that a selection of the winner will be made by early next week.

The writer of the slogan decided by the judges to be the best will receive as a prize a 1937 Ford V-8 car.

Gain of 80 Per Cent in Accessories Sales Reported by Pontiac

The Pontiac Motor Division of the General Motors Sales Corporation will finish the year with a volume of accessories business of well over $3,000,000, says J. H. Otis, parts and accessories manager.

This compares with $1,759,000 for 1935. A total of $5,000,000 is the forecast for 1937.

Nov. 1, the 1936 accessories volume stood at $2,268,000 compared with $1,248,000 for the first 10 months of 1935, an increase of more than 80 per cent.

"One of the largest factors in the accessories gain is in the heater business which is practically double that of last year," say Otis.

"Forty-five per cent of our car production now leaves the factory equipped with heaters, while another 5 per cent have heaters installed in the field. This means that almost 100 per cent of the 1936 and 1937 Pontiac cars in use in the heater area of the north and middle north have heaters.

"Just how popular the windshield defroster may be can be judged from the fact that we had a bank of 4000 back orders before a single Pontiac dealer or car owner had seen a sample.

Diesel-Powered Auto, One of Three in U. S., Here on Trial Tour

Concluding an 1800-mile experimental trip through the Midwest, said to have used only $4 worth of fuel, a Diesel-powered auto, one of three known to be in operation in the United States, arrived in St. Louis Monday.

The Diesel car, consisting of a standard auto chassis and body of a well-known make, was fitted with a six-cylinder high-speed Diesel engine of 76 horsepower by the Hemphill Diesel School, Chicago.

Next it was taken on a trial trip through Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Arriving here Monday, the driver, Doyle Biddle, calculated roughly that he had traveled 1800 miles on about 60 gallons of Shell dieseline, costing about 7 cents a gallon, the total fuel bill being approximately $4.

After refueling with Shell dieseline at the Shell station, Lindell boulevard at Vandeventer, the car was driven to the Hadley Vocational School and Ranken Trade School where students were shown the high-compression engine in operation.

Tuesday was spent visiting fleet owners and industrial plants in the city.

The engine burns Shell dieseline, and is a variation of the design already widely used in trucks, streamline trains, boats, airplanes, etc.

It takes the place of a 12-cylinder gasoline engine of 120 horsepower and gives the car a sped of 70 miles per hour. It average about 30 miles to a gallon of fuel.

Starting Acceleration Tests

American Automobile Association official starting a stock 1937 Terraplane on acceleration test, in which the car went from stand to 50 m. p. h. in 10.4 seconds and from 10 to 50 m. p. h. in high gear in 13.5 seconds.

50 M P H From Stand Made by Hudson in 9.4 Seconds in Test

A new mark for automobile stock car acceleration is claimed for a new 1937 Hudson eight which went from a standstill to 50 miles per hour in 9.4 seconds under official supervision of American Automobile Association contest board officials, according to word received from Detroit by the Hudson and Terraplane Sales Corporation, distributer for Hudson Motor Car Co.

"All gears were used, and the shifts were made with Hudson's new selective automatic shift," it was stated. "With this new development, gears are shifted by flicking the gear shifter of Hudson's 'electric hand' with a finger of the right hand and lifting the foot from the accelerator. It is not necessary to use the clutch pedal, as the gear changes take place immediately when pressure is applied to the accelerator. The new shift is optional equipment on all Hudsons and Terraplanes.

"The 1937 Terraplane six was given a similar acceleration test, and went from zero to 50 miles per hour in 10.4 seconds, according to official timing by American Automobile Association contest board timers.

"In a test starting in high gear, the new Hudson was reported by the American Automobile Association observers to have traveled from 10 to 50 miles an hour in 13 seconds. The Terraplane's mark for this high gear test was almost as good, as it required but 13.5 seconds to reach the 50-mile-an-hour speed."

New General Motors Stamping Division Plant Put in Operation

Produces 1500 Complete Sets of Stampings for "Unisteel" Auto Bodies Daily.

Formal inspection of the new Grand Rapids stamping division of General Motors, which is being operated by the corporation's body-building division, was made the past week by General Motors and Fisher Body officials, with dedication of the new $7,000,000 factory, one of the largest and most modern die and body stamping plants in the world.

The plant, located on a 78-acre tract to the south and west of the city, has floor space of 400,000 square feet. It is now employing more than 2100 persons in two shifts and is producing 1500 complete sets of stampings daily for the "unisteel" turret-top body by Fisher, which are being shipped to assembly plants elsewhere in the country.

Walls Mostly Glass.

To assure comfort for the workers, more than 82 per cent of the total wall area is of glass. This, with the high roof and white, light-reflecting interior, assures maximum natural illumination by day. At night, the same level of illumination is provided.

The plant is fully self-contained, being served by its own power house, gas house, and a sub-station for the distribution of electric power brought in by an independent high-tension line.

The main manufacturing building comprises two chief divisions, the press shop and the metal assembly department. There is also a die shop capable of building all the dies and tools required for the fabrication of the largest automobile body stampings.

Layout of departments and production equipment is based on the principle of a straight-line flow of materials. All incoming materials are routed to the receiving dock which occupies a single craneway 100 feet wide that extends from the front of the building to the rear for a depth of 525 feet.

Pressures of 2250 Tons.

Adjacent to the receiving dock and at right angles to it, is the press shop with its 10 lines of presses arranged in parallel rows, each line handling a different type of stamping. Some of the largest machines of their type in the world are found here. Some of them exert pressures up to 2250 tons, and weigh 500 tons apiece.

A large pit beneath the press room floor, to provide a foundation, is a large, clear basement area of solid, waterproofed concrete, covering more than an acre of ground. The presses are mounted individually on reinforced concrete columns, tied together by steel girders that form bases for the individual machines.

The metal assembly department handles the assembly operations required in connection with the fabrication of the completed turret top with the drip shield attached, the steel floor, the doors, quarter panels, inner and outer shroud assemblies, and the steel center pillars. There are 160 welding guns and 20 large projection welders. One of these units produces 18 spots in one setting.

Chevrolet Production Of 112,229 Cars in November Reported

Chevrolet production for November exceeded that of any previous November in the 25-year history of the company. Summaries of official figures showed a total of 112,229 cars distributed from the company's factories.

Domestic production for the month was 95,022; export production, 12,853; and Canadian production, 4354. The total was 3353 cars more than the 108,876 produced in November, 1835, which was the previous record.

At the same time, company officials said, unfilled orders for the new Chevrolet are running far ahead of last year, with 96,084 customers' orders still to be met.

Factory production schedules have been stepped up to more than 6000 cars a day.

Chevrolet dealers' retail sales in November totaled 108,093 units, setting a new all-time record both for the November and for the 30-day period following any new model introduction, it was announced.

The previous record of 92,065 units was set in November, 1935, following introduction of the 1936 Chevrolet.

Security Project For Employes Added By TWA Organization

A plan of mutual benefit between employer and employe, the first of its sort to be introduced in an air transport organization, has been put into effect by Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc.

Employes of the company when sick or injured will be assured of income and medical and hospitalization costs when necessary.

The plan provides protection additional to that under the Federal Social Security program, in which TWA is participating, and also protects the workers in cases not the subject of workmen's compensation.

The cost of making the plan operative will be taken care of through the contribution by the employe of 1 per cent of salary. The total of the amount thus derived will be matched by the company, which, in addition to contributing to the plan, guarantees any additional funds necessary for its operation.

Effective Dec. 17, Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., will inaugurate a new mail, express and passenger service between St. Louis and Dayton, O., departing from St. Louis by the Sky Master at 9:52 a. m., arriving at Dayton at 1:20 p. m., or by the eastbound Sky Chief at 6:21 a. m., arriving at Dayton at 9:22 a. m.

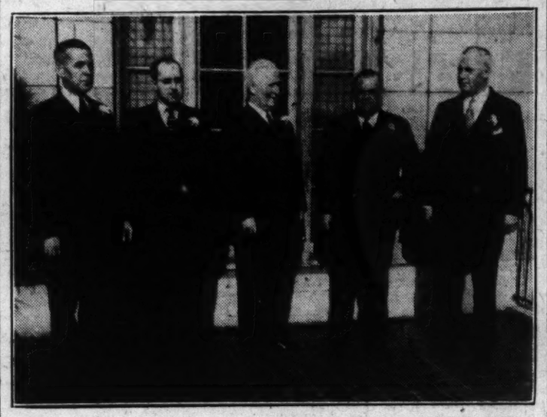

Douglas Luxury Skyliners will be used on these schedules.

Anti-Freeze Demand Reported to Be Heavy

Anti-freeze sales are unusually heavy. The makers of Eveready Prestone report difficulty in keeping abreast of orders.

Rumors that the Prestone shortage was due to munition orders which had drained the market of certain anti-freeze materials, are denied.

The National Carbon Co. began preparations early this year for a large increase in Prestone business. Purchases of raw materials were greatly enlarged and the company's manufacturing facilities were expanded, but the estimates of 1936-37 business were too low. For several weeks, surplus Prestone stocks have been limited, and demand is being supplied largely out of current production.

Studebaker Driven 879 Miles a Day on Oil Economy Run

In four and one-half days, a 1937 Studebaker Dictator six sedan, driven by Ted Ellis for the Pennzoil Co., was driven 4024 miles from Los Angeles to the Canadian border and return, using only one pint, 15 ounces of motor oil, and averaging 28⅛ miles per gallon of gasoline, the entire trip, according to Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corporation.

"With the crankcase securely sealed by Los Angeles County officials, the Studebaker was driven over Route 99 to Portland, Ore., a distance of 1247 miles, whereupon the Oregon State sealer of weights and measures found the total consumption of motor oil to be merely three ounces. Only 1¾ pints of motor oil were used in the 2779 miles covered on the balance of the trip," Hoffman said.

"Although a range of altitude of 7000 feet was encountered, the temperature of the crankcase never exceeded 150 degrees and water temperature did not go above 170 degrees at any time. The hypoid rear axle gear and transmission needed no lubricant after completing the run of 4024 miles at sustained high speed.

Though it was not robbed or driven at the most economical speed. Leaving Los Angeles at 3 p. m., Oct. 20, and returning at 5 a. m. on the 25th, the trip was made in 110 hours, which means that the car was driven an average of 879 miles each day.

All lubricants used were furnished by the Pennzoil Co.

Production of the 1937 Willys models started in the Toledo plants of Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., on Nov. 30, when slightly more than 4000 workers were recalled.

The December schedule calls for production of 250 cars per day on an eight-hour shift. Multi-shift operations will begin in January, it was said.

Ward M. Canaday, chairman of the board of directors of Willys-Overland, said: "We are opening the Willys plants with a sound cash position. Our plans contemplate production of one chassis with a minimum of body types. Our progress will be conservative and planned in accordance with demand. So far, this demand has exceeded the most optimistic hopes."

Great War Could Have Been Averted, Germany Lost by Outblundering The Allies, Lloyd George Declares

Entente Had Victory in Reach in 1916 or 1917, He Says—Reich's Quarrel With America "Inconceivable Folly."

THE World War was unnecessary; once started, its settlement by negotiation was humanly impossible; and it was conducted with colossal blunders on both sides, of which Germany's blunders were the greater. These are the conclusions of David Lloyd George, wartime Prime Minister of Great Britain, in the final installment of his War Memoirs, here published:

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE.

THERE are three questions which are asked about the World War. The first is: Could it have been averted? The second is: Could it have been brought to an earlier termination by negotiation? The third is: Could victory have been achieved at an earlier date by better handling on either side?

My answer to the first question is in the affirmative. My answer to the second would be in the negative, and to the third, in the affirmative.

I.

To take the first question. No sovereign or leading statesman in any of the belligerent countries sought or desired war—certainly not a European war.

Berchtold, the Austrian Foreign Minister, was anxious for a punitive expedition against Serbia. But had he realized that it would have involved his country in war with Russia, Italy and Rumania, supported by Britain, France and ultimately America, he would have modified the terms of the ultimatum or accepted Serbia's answer, which was abject enough to satisfy even Austrian pride.

Expected Russia to Yield.

But he was convinced that Russia would not face war with Germany. The Czar had retreated over the much more important question of the annexation of Bosnia without striking a blow. His army now was not much better prepared than it was then.

On the other hand, Germany had considerably strengthened hers. So the moment the Kaiser gave his word he would back up Austria's demands, Berchtold had no doubt that Russia would give in, and, if Serbia were still obdurate, war with her would be a small matter.

What about Germany? I am convinced that the Kaiser never had the remotest idea that he was plunging—or being plunged—into a European war.

His first bluff of Russia over a Balkan question had been a triumphant success and had added a great deal to his prestige as the War Lord of Europe. He never doubted that he would score another success by the mere threat of war and thus establish still more firmly his diplomatic mastery over the continent.

After giving Austria that assurance of his support he left the bullying of Serbia in her hands.

When the Serbian reply was received, he thought it satisfactory and that Austria ought to accept it.

"Botched by Everybody."

The German public did not anticipate war—not until they found their young men marching toward the frontiers.

Had it been made clear to the Kaiser in time that Britain would make war upon Germany, if she invaded Belgium, he and his advisers would have paused to confer ere it became too late to withdraw.

France shrank from war and there was nothing farther from the mind of Britain or her Government at the end of July, 1914, than the staging of a continental war. The negotiations were botched by everybody engaged in directing them. It is incredible that so momentous an issue should have been handled in so unbusinesslike and casual a manner. War ought to have been and could have been averted.

II.

Could peace have been made between the belligerents at any stage of the war before November, 1918? Here again I have re-examined this problem calmly over and over again with a view to ascertaining whether at any stage of the war before November, 1918, a satisfactory peace with Germany could have been reached. I am unable to discover a single opportunity that was missed by the Entente Powers of achieving a settlement that would not have rewarded the principal aggressors for their action in precipitating the conflict.

What Various Powers Wanted.

Up to the end of the war Germany was in occupation of Allied territory in the East and South. In spite of questions repeatedly addressed to her by Allied statesmen Germany never once offered to restore any of these territories without imposing conditions as to security or economic advantage.

The Great War lasted so long because the respective war aims of the two sides were incompatible and neither side was prepared to give way until compelled to do so.

Once the war started there were aims which each country resolved to secure as the reward for its sacrifices. France wanted to recover the lost provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. Italy sought to gain the Italia Irredentia of the Trentino and Trieste.

The Russian Government wanted Constantinople and the hegemony of the Balkans—though in the later stages of the war it did not much matter what Russia originally wanted. What she got was the greatest economic revolution in history.

Austria, the culprit, who recklessly lit the fire, wanted to dominate Serbia. Germany wanted territorial expansion in the East and control of the Belgian coast.

Belgium a Pawn in the Game.

Britain, who, in fact, managed during the war to pick up a number of German colonies that she did not really want, entered the war mainly to defend the integrity of Belgium, and up to the end that was the one issue upon which we were not prepared to compromise.

Belgium became, perhaps, especially in the latter phases of the war, a symbol of the clash of two great master purposes which dominated respectively the Allies and the Central Powers. So long as we could maintain the struggle we were resolved not to abandon it without securing the full restoration of Belgium's independence and integrity.

On the other hand, the German militarists saw in Belgium a highly valuable trophy, and one which put them in a far more favorable position for challenging Britain on the sea, if we made difficulties for their ambitions as a World Power. The German industrialists saw the advantage of commanding so convenient an outlet to the sea.

So until they had finally abandoned all hope of either victory or stalemate, they clung to their purpose of retaining a grip on Belgium after the war.

III.

Could victory have been achieved by either side before the end of 1918? Both sides committed serious errors of judgment. First of all, could the Germans have won had they made no mistakes? They certainly made two or three cardinal blunders and missed one or two opportunities that opened to them the road to victory.

Their first bad mistake and the one that ultimately proved to be fatal to their hopes was the invasion of Belgium. They weighed the chances of capturing Paris and destroying the French army against the probability of bringing Britain into the struggle or of finishing off France before British assistance became effective.

An Inexplicable Blunder.

An inexplicable military blunder, or rather a series of blunders, threw away the opportunity of entering the French capital when it was within their grasp. They might even have destroyed the French army. The Germans then flung away a chance that never recurred. After that the British army grew from strength to strength. Without its intervention Germany would have triumphed.

The blunder that ranged the whole resources of the British Empire on the side of the Entente was primarily, but not altogether, a military miscalculation. It was due to a strategic plan in the pigeonholes of the German War Office.

Even the most discerning of soldiers could hardly have anticipated that Britain would have put a splendidly equipped army of over 2,000,000 men in the field and called 6,000,000 to the flag.

The second great mistake of the Germans was the diversion of their strength in 1916 to the futile attack on Verdun.

Missed Opportunity.

Thereby they missed two opportunities. The first was the final smashing up of Russia which began so auspiciously for them in 1915. Had they pressed their advantage in 1916, Russia could have been driven to make peace in the summer of 1916 instead of the spring of 1918.

The British army was not fully equipped before the late summer of 1916 to exert enough pressure on the western front to compel Germany to release her grip on Russia. By that time the Russian army might have been irretrievably defeated.

Once Russia was eliminated the Germans could then have turned all their victorious armies on to France, and the Austrians their whole strength to destroy Italy before America had entered the war and before hunger and privation had weakened the morale of the Central Powers.

Had the Verdun project not been adopted the Germans might have helped the plan of Conrad von Hoetzendoff, the Austrian commander, for driving Italy out of the war by a joint Austrian and German attack in the spring of 1916.

A Caporetto in 1916 might have had that effect, for the Germans were in a position then to press their victory to a decision, as the British army was not ready for a great offensive in France.

German Quarrel With America.

The third fundamental strategical error was the great offensive of 1918. Germany was powerful enough to repel any attack that could be made against her entrenchments by the Allies. She had beaten them off time and again when they had an advantage of two to one in numbers. She could certainly depend on being able to hold her own when there was approximate equality.

Instead of which she wasted her reserves on violent attacks which utterly failed to achieve any strategic results. In these assaults she lost most of her picked troops. She neglected to construct second and third lines upon which she could fall back in the event of her armies being driven out of the first.

But the worst German blunder in the war, after the invasion of Belgium, was the quarrel with America. It was at best a reckless miscalculation; at its worst it was an inconceivable folly.

Mistakes of Allies.

What about the Allies? Their most obvious and most costly blunder was their failure to treat the vast battlefield of the war as a single front.

Russia had unlimited resources of superb man power—in physique, courage and tenacity. All they lacked was the necessary equipment to make the best use of such fine material. That is the only reason why Russia was beaten.

Had France and Britain effected a wise distribution of the financial and mechanical resources at their command at home and in America—between the armies fighting in the East as well as the West, the German and Austrian attack on Russia would have failed, and failed with such enormous losses as to cripple the Central Powers.

Austria, with her large Slavonic population, could have been broken up by 1916. Germany would thereby have been isolated. Austria certainly could not have withstood the onslaught of a well equipped and numerically superior Russian army if the Entente had taken full advantage of the opportunity which the Balkans afforded for organizing a combined attack of Serbians, Rumanians, Greeks and not improbably Bulgarians across the Danube.

Chance to Win War in 1916.

Here was another great chance missed for bringing the war to a victorious end in 1916.

Was that attainable? A formidable Balkan confederation on the side of the Entente could have been organized early in 1915 if the Allied Powers had taken it earnestly in hand.

Kitchener himself proposed at an Allied War Council—according to Joffre — that an allied force of 400,000 should be massed on the Danube "to smash Austria." The British Government on my advice decided in February, 1915, to improve the transport arrangements to Serbia with that emergency in view.

It was left to Kitchener to take the necessary steps. In the multiplicity of his other duties he overlooked this instruction and when in October he recalled the project, it was too late to think of sending a large allied force to the Danube. Had it been sent in the summer, the whole military position would have been fundamentally changed.

Germany Foresaw Danger.

Germany had foreseen the danger of such a move in the Balkans, for the encirclement of the Central Powers would have been complete. The smashing process was, therefore, anticipated by them, and the Balkans with their immense possibilities were lost to the Entente for three years.

Had the allied military leaders in the West surveyed the battle field as a whole and not concentrated their minds on the earthworks, just in front of them, 1915 might have been the turning point in the war and 1916 would have seen us at the end of this agony of five nations.

One of the advantages of an allied force in Serbia would have been the complete severance of communications between the Central Powers and Turkey.

A Turkish defeat would have relieved the pressure on Russia in the Caucasus and opened sea communications with our Russian and Rumanian allies.

Lost Chance in Italy.

We also missed a great opportunity in Italy in 1917. The Italians had, like the Russians—but to a lesser degree—a superiority in the numbers of trained men they could put into the field, but in artillery and ammunition they were deficient.

French and British had been fighting incessantly for three campaigns, sustaining terrible losses against the most formidable enemy in the field. The Italians had fought barely two campaigns, against an enemy inferior in every respect to the German army.

An attack on the Italian front would have relieved the pressure on Russia at an extremely critical juncture and had an excellent chance of breaking through the Austrian line.

There would have been inevitable losses on all fronts, but the massacres of the Chemin des Dames would never have occurred, and Caporetto, which probably put Italy out of effective action for the rest of the war, would never have been heard of.

Delay in Unifying Command.

The last opportunity missed was over the establishment of a real unity of command. A unity which depends upon prolonged argument between two rival and independent staffs is a sham.

The Germans recognized that the real unity arranged between French and British when Foch was made Commander-in-Chief on the whole front was largely responsible for the failure of their offensive in 1918. Had a general reserve been set up under central command before the March offensive, the defeats of March and April would never have occurred.

It has been urged by those who still defend the concentration of forces and the continuous offensives on the Western front that the justification of that policy is to be found in the fact that the armistice which ended the war was signed on French soil.

Bulgaria's Defeat a Factor.

There are two answers to that claim:

1. The attacks in the West on entrenched positions which could not be outflanked cost the Allies well over 5,000,000 casualties.

2. They would not have succeeded in the end had it not been—

(a) That the blockade had debilitated and weakened the morale of the German army and undermined the fighting spirit of the German and Austrian peoples;

(b) That the defeat of Bulgaria had opened the southern flank of the Central Powers to hostile attack and deprived them of the corn and oil of Rumania without which they could not have continued the struggle.

Neither Germany nor Austria would have given in during 1918 had it not been for the overthrow of Bulgaria. I have the authority of Hindenburg, Ludendorff and Von Kuhl for that statement.

Outblundered by Germany.

These are some of the reasons why I have come definitely to the conclusion that victory was within our reach in 1916, or at the latest in 1917 if the strategic direction of the war had shown more imagination, common sense and unity.

Here is my last reflection on this war. If Germany had been led by Bismarck and Moltke instead of by successors who were inferior in statesmanship and war, the event of the great struggle between democracy and a military autocracy would in all human probability have been different.

The blunders of Germany saved us from the consequences of our own.

But let all who trust justice to the arbitrament of war bear in mind that the issue may depend not on the righteousness of the quarrel, but on the craft of the litigants. It is the teaching of history, and this war enforces the lesson.

SUPREME COURT'S NEW DEAL RULINGS MAY BE TOMORROW

Four Questions Before Tribunal Include PWA Power Projects, Arms Embargo.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Four decisions of disputes growing out of New Deal legislation are possible Monday from the Supreme Court.

The acts involve:

A challenge by the Duke Power Co. of PWA loans and grants for publicly owned hydro-electric projects. It is opposing a proposed plant in Greenwood County, South Carolina.

A presidential embargo on sale of munitions for the recent Chaco war between Bolivia and Paraguay. The Government says its neutrality legislation is involved in the controversy.

Constitutionality of the Ashurst-Sumners act requiring labelling of prison-made goods and forbidding their transportation into states that prohibit their sale.

A 50 per cent tax on profits made by silver traders before passage of the 1934 Silver Purchase Act, designed to increase the amount of that metal in the nation's monetary base.

In lower courts, the Government won the PWA and prison goods cases and lost the other two.

Gets Life for Killing Warden.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Dec. 12.—Raymond Kivela, 27 years old, entered prison here tonight to serve a life term for killing a State conservation officer and attempting to destroy the body with dynamite seven weeks ago. The trapper, who shot Officer Andrew Schmeltz, admitted to Circuit Judge Frank A. Bell today that the motive for the killing was to prevent arrest for hunting without a license. Kivela pleaded guilty several days ago.

Professors' Association Takes Up Issue of Academic Freedom In Jerome Davis Case at Yale University Authorities Say Question Was Not Involved in Failure to Reappoint Teacher; Others Dispute This.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 12.

A YEAR ago Jerome Davis, associate professor of Practical Philanthropy at the Yale University Divinity School, published a long book, "Capitalism and Its Culture." One of the important chapters in that book has the title, "A Refracted Education," the chapter being an effort to show that education in America is filtered through the capitalist prism. In the process of filtration, Davis wrote, the truth is distorted, even suppressed, if it does not conform to the orthodox capitalist view. Last spring Yale notified Davis he would not be reappointed at the end of the present year.

Today the American Association of University Professors is preparing to make an extended investigation to determine whether Davis is being let go because of his political and economic beliefs, as he charges is the case.

In support of his thesis that education reflects a strong bias in favor of the present economic system, Davis pointed to a number of instances in which teachers have been disciplined for their views. Professors, even in major universities, he sought to show, were subject to dismissal if their opinions were too far to the left of the safe, conservative center.

Reactions at Yale.

What Yale has done, in the opinion of Davis' friends and supporters, is to confirm that thesis, contributing one more proof of the way in which business dominates the whole educational process.

Pending the report of the Association of University Professors neither Davis nor any officer of Yale will publicly discuss the controversy, but interest is so aroused here that conversation invariably comes around to the Davis case. There is involved not only the abstract issue of academic freedom but the whole complex tradition of one of the oldest and most influential universities in the country.

Privately Yale professors will talk about the Davis case freely enough. What they say is that Davis was not a scholar; that he was a popularizer who used the name of the university to advance his personal views. They say he had been told for several years that he would have to produce a scholarly work in his field, sociology, if he wanted to be advanced to a full professorship. They say that the faculty of the Divinity School, in which Davis taught, refused to vote for his promotion and therefore the Yale trustees had a legitimate right to decline to reappoint him. They say that the function of a university such as Yale is scholarship, first and foremost, teaching and public questions having a decidedly secondary place.

In an official statement announcing Davis' dismissal the university said, "no abridgment of academic freedom or liberty of speech is involved in this case." Davis, according to the official statement, was "included in a group of members of the faculty in various departments" who were being notified they would not be reappointed because of "the budgetary situation."

Investigation Welcomed.

President James R. Angell and Dean Luther A. Weigle of the Divinity School have offered to make all records available to the Association of University Professors and will co-operate with the investigation in every way, confident that the report of the association will vindicate the position of the university.

Four distinguished professors from four leading universities have been named to the Investigating Committee, all members of the association's committee on academic tenure. They are Prof. Arthur Holcombe of the Department of Government of Harvard University; Elliott C. Cheatham, professor of law at Columbia University; Prof. George H. Sabin of the Department of Philosophy of Cornell University; and Prof. Harry B. Gideonse of the Economics Department of the University of Chicago. They will come to New Haven shortly and spend several days interviewing the principal figures. Next they will go over all the documents in the case. Finally the associations will make public the committee's report.

If the committee finds against the university, then in all probability Yale will go on the association's "ineligible" list. This means disapproval of academic methods, unsatisfactory conditions with regard to tenure of professors and instructors, and, in most instances, curtailment of academic freedom. In the 21 years of its existence the association, with a present membership of about 14,000, has made the "ineligible" list a real stigma which inspires a wholesome awe in universities and colleges. At one time the University of Missouri was on the "ineligible" list, but it was taken off some years ago when a marked improvement in conditions of tenure was shown. Last year the University of Pittsburgh was placed on the list following an investigation of dismissal of Ralph Turner, professor in the history department. Pittsburgh is still listed as "ineligible."

Preliminary Findings.

Before the association agreed to make an investigation four professors, all members of the association, on their own initiative, made an independent study of the case. The four, all of them well known even beyond the confines of the academic world, were Charles A. Beard, historian; Paul H. Douglas, professor of economics at the University of Chicago; Edward A. Ross, head of the department of sociology at the University of Wisconsin; and Colston E. Warne, professor of economics at Amherst College. Their final conclusions were:

"The nature of the criticisms brought against Mr. Davis and harshness of the language employed by those who made them reveal an animus and temper that are foreign to scholarship—an animus and temper not appropriate for university authorities, even when they are sorely tried by outside pressures and institutional difficulties.

"The circumstances surrounding the dismissal of Dr. Davis present positive elements involving academic liberties, the rights of the scholar as a citizen, and the correct procedure of the university authorities in dealing with such liberties and rights. This is not to say that Dr. Davis is without faults, but that there is a weight of evidence which greatly tips the balance on his side. It is, therefore, fitting that the American Association of University Professors should make a thorough examination of the controversy."

Origins of the Case.

The report signed by Beard, Douglas, Warne and Ross makes it clear that almost from the date of his appointment at Yale in 1924 Davis' views, publicly expressed at meetings on one sort and another, disturbed university authorities.

Recommending Davis for a Guggenheim fellowship in 1925, President Angell, in a letter to Davis, expressed concern, "because of reports made to me recently as to your apparently unparently unqualified accept-

ITALY After TEN YEARS of DICTATORSHIP

External Sheen, However, Cannot Conceal Poverty, Dirt and Disease

State Continually Intervenes in Affairs of the Citizen in an Effort to Offset the Consequences of Some Earlier Intervention.

ROME, November.

THE DUCE rules his country, a more absolute autocrat than ever. He has held power 14 years, and absolute power 10 years. In the first four years he had to tolerate an opposition, to solicit allies, and listen to advisers. Sympathizers made speeches commending his policy but bidding bim beware of excess; newspapers approved this, disapproved that.

By 1929 the Duce had put an end to such transactions. Opposition leaders had been killed, jailed or exiled; opposition newspapers bought up or burned down; the Freemasons, ex-combatants, professional associations, trade unions, Boy Scouts, Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Society for Assisting Special Areas (Associazione del Mezzogiorno), and any other possible rallying-centers for the discontented had been disbanded or taken over by the appropriate Ministry.

Success of Everything Ascribed to Mussolini.

With each year the Italians in public life have become more submissive, unanimous and adulatory. If the Duce moves he must now have two pages of superlatives where one used to suffice—often with his name in special capitals. For his image and superscription miles of wall space and hoarding are now required. To him is ascribed the merit in every big company report of the "accelerated rhythm of industry and commerce," to him are due the beauty and vigor of the young, the fecundity of human beings and quadrupeds, the speed of Fiat cars or Caproni planes, scientific discovery, successful archaeological research: he is the builder, creator, inspirer, "ideator" of all that is comprehended in "the fourth Italy." The historians seek materials for noble portraits of his father, the turbulent blacksmith; of his uncle, who composed dialect rhymes in Romagna; of his grandfather, who sported the rank of Lieutenant in some civic guard or militia. The anniversaries of the death of his relatives-in-law are observed wtih public ceremony.

The Italians have had long lessons in reverence with their tongue in their cheek—have knelt to Borgian Popes and lit up their towns to welcome "Caesars" from Vienna. Eloquent panegyrists were gathering riches in Italy 50 years before the Wars of the Roses; their industry has not since languished. The Italian can sustain a concert of encomium like few, if any other people in the world, and will do so with far less effort than slower-tongued people imagine.

Some time ago an Indian Prince arrived in Rome and was given an official welcome. Behind the ranks of troops lining the street a vast crowd watched the potentate, who smiled in pleasure and perhaps surprise. The crowd had been collected by a line of military being thrown across in front of the suburban station without any notice. Thousands of workers, their day's work done, were hurrying for the evening trains, only to be held up for an hour or more and forced to admire Prince X. Each intercepted newcomer asked what was up, made a grimace at the queer name of the Indian State as passed from mouth to mouth or swore loudly. At the end the policeman in charge at one corner announced with loud voice, "End of the comic opera."

The hasty traveler in Italy can see only conformity; obedience to everlasting summonses, participation in parades, processions, demonstrations, "rites," mysterie ("sagre"), Roman salutes, choric exercises in repetitive invocation—"Duce, Duce, Duce, Duce." But can he believe that this sparkling, mischievous, merrymaking people has trained itself to be no more than a gramophone with one record?

Italy Mocks at Its Own Play, But Only Behind Four Walls.

Italy mocks behind four walls; mocks at all things between earth and sky, most of all at the play in which all Italians are acting, the play of a heroic nation at length roused from a torpor of indecision and anarchy, led forward now by an infallible superman toward inconceivable destinies of greatness, and letting the world know it with yaups of the voice and jerks of the arms. Who could think of anything funnier?

And yet—"Forse che si, forse che no," says D'Annunzio ("Perhaps yes, perhaps no"), and Pirandello, in another famous title, says, "Cosi e se vi pare" ("It is, if you think so"). One does not willingly give half one's life, still less risk the whole of it, for the fun of keeping up a farce. A nation cannot do obeisance for 15 years without growing into obedience.

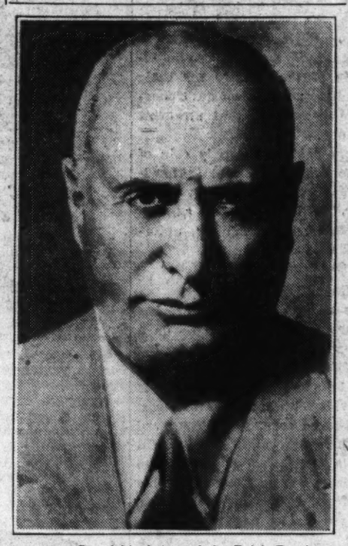

A nation regarded as an organization—and as such we usually think and talk of it, however, much we admire the doctrine of the Social Contract—seems to delegate functions to this or that complex of calls—we would say class of individuals. The observer of Italian life who knows that the Italian nation must believe in its own part, since it could not submit to playing it for ever (or even for 10 years) in perfect inner sobriety and detachment, may discover here and there the unmistakable energumen (fanaticism) of the faith.

At a cafe table three or four men will be talking. For the sage of prudence (since a police spy is very likely near them) everybody talks orthodox-wise about the questions of the day, but one after another will take any safe occasion for a little irony. Once they feel safe they may let their tongues wag merrily at the expense of Ethiopian Empires, Corporate States, rites of commemoration, etc. Not so the fifth who is sitting by them. He is a lank, slim youth with fixed gaze. Disconcertingly for his friends, he follows up their sparkling remarks on the Corporate State, and argues that Italy is now only at the beginning of an experience which is to harmonize capital and labor in the service of the community. Solemnly also he argues that Italy's destiny is to expand east (or it may be south), to renew the civilizing message of Rome.

Risk of war? Man's destiny is to be a warrior, to pit valor and brains against other men, to break or be broken, as God or fate decide. Mussolini's Italy will not flinch. Other nations may forget that this is life, that to sit tight and insure comfort, pleasure, or safe sport is to fall and decay. If England and France have forgotten this, Italy will be destiny's instrument to remind them—Italy, now flanked by awakened Germany.

What Can Be Done?

ABYSSINIA has not resolved the short-term problem—far from it. The one possible economic policy is to continue spending gold and foreign exchange (nobody outside the innermost circle now ever guesses how much remains of it) on necessary imports while another attempt is made to bring down costs of production and regain export markets. The devaluation of the lire is no doubt an important step towards this restoration of balance.

But a totalitarian State cannot shine and gain admiration by perpetual paring away of citizens' incomes even when it nets in a glittering empire and scares its wealthier neighbors with high words. What are the returned soldiers and the dismissed munitions workers to do when the State seriously turns to cutting national costs? And, above all, with what are the editors of totalitarian newspapers to fill their front pages?

People Cheer the Street Parades and Other Shows, but Behind Four Walls Mock at Play They Act—Still Obeisance Grows Into Obedience.

In truth, by dominating the decadent, these peoples of destiny will be helping them to awake and see whither lax dreams have led them. Perhaps then they will stop short of the ruin in which Russia (so thinks this henchman of destiny) is engulfed, the victim of materialism.

The dark, slim youth is one of a few thousands, or only a few hundreds. He is sure that the Duce has found the answer to life's riddle; he will give himself body and soul to achieve what is set before him. He has perhaps passed through the university, reading history and philosophy, or is perhaps an engineer, or is in some humbler way of living. He has never been abroad, has never read a foreign newspaper. Or he may, if well-to-do, have looked around Paris, only to read the signals of approaching social catastrophe.

Amid the millions of voices yelling "Duce, Duce," as the "Founder of the Empire" celebrated various anniversaries this autumn, a few were voices from such true devotees. Those for whom Fascism is one of life's absurd phenomena, exacting lip service and even foot service or perhaps blood sacrifice, but certainly no more than that minimum, cannot altogether account for or explain away the young men (and maybe women, too) who look forward with gloomy faith to a meaningful Fascist future.

At the cost of the violent death of the most upright of politicians (Amendola and others), of the incarceration of many apostles of social reform, the exile or deadening social isolation of many acknowledged leaders of thought and learning, Italy has achieved a unified command of man power, woman power, and resources for peace or for war. The one great country which entered the European war half-heartedly, with a large and vocal opposition in the rear, and lost grip of the military victory through dissensions at home purchased cohesion by amputation of its luxuriant outgrowths of culture and philanthropy. The rejected branches are not all withered and destroyed.

Responsibilities of Fascism Under System It Has Set Up.

Anti-Fascist Italians have been fighting and dying in Spain; others proudly maintain their spiritual freedom in jails, islands, or the four walls of a persecuted home. But the Italian nation has long since made the contract and paid the price for unity and order, and looks now to the Fascist system to execute its responsibilities.

Since political parties, religious reformers, free professional associations are no more, the Fascist system must provide everything—stability, progress, conversation, reform, material enrichment, spiritual revelation. To still every impatient demand the voice of Fascism calls forth a continual reminder that Italy is one, indivisible, firmly co-ordinated and controlled for whatever may be the necessary purpose.

Behind the scenes the men who have taken over this totalitarian responsibility try to discover what the purpose is. A Government with unlimited powers can indeed achieve much that needs little debating about. It can exact a higher efficiency in simple tasks, careless of the feelings of those who are obliged to be punctual and to keep on the move where formerly no one dared to interfere with their taking things easy.

Public buildings and squares are clear. Nobody can doubt that the Fascists have tidied up and magnificently refurbished the national drawing room and the national front door. The traveler leaving Italy for France today often notices a pleasantly informal shabbiness after the glitter of aluminum, glass and marble. For Milan, Florence, Siena Viareggio have new railway stations of startling splendor.

Building Torn Down That Must Be Rebuilt.

In most large towns and many small ones a grandiose program of "sistemazione" (arrangement) is in course. In their zeal to show a splendid facade the authorities have been known to knock down a building which must afterward be re-erected—for example, a corner house in Piazza Navona, in Rome, where scarcely any cost in demolitions and

Every Type Included From Famous to Little Known—Many St. Louis Contributors —Total Publication Cost $650,000.

By IRVING DILLIARD,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

PROBABLY the most ambitious and certainly one of the most valuable enterprises in co-operative scholarship ever undertaken in the United States was completed last week with the publication of the twentieth volume of the Dictionary of American Biography.

In the making for 10 years and before that the dream of many American writers and scholars for a quarter of a century, this monumental reference work now gives the United States a comprehensive encyclopedia of biography from colonial times comparable to the world-famous British Dictionary of National Biography, publication of which began in 1885.

Statesmen and outlaws, song writers and capitalists, inventors and trappers, dime novelists and philosophers, artists and editors, athletes and explorers, actors and educators, clergymen and politicians, diplomats and soldiers, scientists and reformers, merchants and physicians—all these and many others of unclassifiable interests and endeavor are recorded in this 12,685-page biographical pageant of the men and women who have made American history the rich and colorful chronicle which it is.

Altogether there are articles on 13,633 persons written by 2243 contributors. These contributors, who live in every State in the Union, the District of Columbia and several foreign countries, include not only members of college and university faculties, but technicians, journalists, free-lance writers, lawyers, soldiers, antiquarians and other representatives of the varied groups included. Many of these contributors died during the eight years and and are themselves the subject of articles appearing in the later volumes.

The arrangement of the articles is alphabetical, a fact which throws the most diverse sorts of persons together. Bishop rubs shoulders with pugilist and city boss stands next to the delver into ancient ruins. The first volume, covering the alphabet from Abbe through Barrymore, appeared Nov. 8, 1928. Since then volumes have been issued at the rate of about two a year. Supplementary volumes will be published at suitable intervals of from five to 10 years to include significant Americans who die after the completion of the first 20 volumes. This will make the Dictionary of American Biography a continuing and permanent record of American biography, in the manner of the British inspiration, which has been added to many times since the completion of the original set in 1900.

Sponsored by 19 Societies.

The "D. A. B.," as librarians and writers have already begun to call it, was published under the sponsorship of the American Council of Learned Societies by Charles Scribner's Sons. This council consists of 19 organizations of scholars such as the American Philosophical Society, the American Oriental Society, the American Historical Association, the American Political Science Association, the American Economic Association and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The total cost of publication was a little more than $650,000. On the suggestion of the late Prof. Frederick Jackson Turner, distinguished historian and a Pulitzer Prize winner, Adolph S. Ochs, late publisher of the New York Times, was informed of the plan for the Dictionary in 1924. Recognizing the public value of the project, Mr. Ochs volunteered to advance $500,000 in 10 installments to pay for the preparation of the manuscript. He accepted no responsibility for the material in the Dictionary.

Mr. Ochs was the third major figure in the history of the D.A.B. to die during the course of its publication. An article on him by Elmer Davis appears in the Committee on Supervision.

The preparation of the articles and business detail of the undertaking was supervised by a committee of management consisting of Dr. J. Franklin Jameson of the Library of Congress, who served as chairman, and Dr. John H. Finley of the New York Times; Dr. Frederic L. Paxson, University of California historian; Charles Warren, constitutional lawyer and historian of the Supreme Court; Carl Van Doren, writer; Iphigene Ochs Sulzberger and Dr. Malone. The editorial office was established in Washington, to facilitate careful checking of every article submitted, with the great store of source material in the Library of Congress.

The five Americans who received most extensive treatment were Benjamin Franklin, written by Prof. Carl Becker of Cornell University; Thomas Jefferson, written by Dr. Malone; Abraham Lincoln, written by Prof. James G. Randall of the University of Illinois; George Washington, written by Dr. John C. Fitzpatrick of the Library of Congress, and Woodrow Wilson, written by Prof. Charles Seymour of Yale. The longest article was that on Washington, 16,500 words.

Less Well-Known Subjects.

While it is most convenient to have scholarly, yet compact articles on these great figures of American life, many users of the D. A. B. agree that its greatest service is in connection with subjects not so well-known and concerning whom reliable information is frequently difficult to find. Chang and Eng, the Siamese twins; Leslie K. Keeley, who devised a method of treating drunkards which made him a millionaire; "Mother" Mary Jones, fiery labor leader; Isaiah Sellers, river pilot and first to use the name Mark Twain; Tony Pastor, singing clown who became a famous theater manager; Jim Bridger, frontiersman—these and thousands of others of lesser renown yet possessors of interesting places in the American gallery are included.

These life-stories have been assembled from a multitude of scattered sources and the biographical sketches which tell them, frequently the result of many hours of research, will remain, in many instances, the last word on subjects about whom books will never be written. Thus, the D. A. B.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles: that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

As Missouri Loses $5,850,000.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN the Post-Dispatch of Nov. 29, an article forecast that State revenue in sight for 1937 would fall short of needs by $11,500,000. Assuming such a shortage, we will find it difficult indeed to care adequately for our needy and unemployed.

In the opinion of the League of Women Voters, the shortage serves to emphasize the short-sightedness of Missouri in failing to enact an unemployment compensation law to comply with the Federal Social Security Act.

With certain exceptions, throughout 1936 the Federal Social Security Act has been levying a tax of 1 per cent on payrolls of employers of eight or more workmen. Had Missouri enacted, or should it enact before Dec. 31, an unemployment compensation law complying with the Social Security Act, our employers would be eligible for a 90 per cent credit against the Federal payroll tax. This amount would thereby be made ultimately available for unemployed workers in Missouri.

According to the latest estimate from the Social Security Board, the amount which Missouri will lose because of our failure to enact an unemployment compensation law prior to Dec. 31 is approximately $5,850,000.

Meanwhile, the Governors of Maryland, New Jersey, Ohio and Pennsylvania have thought the saving to their states of 90 per cent of the payroll tax of sufficient importance to call special sessions this very month, in order to pass unemployment compensation laws prior to Dec. 31, which will make their states eligible for the offset against the Federal tax.

At a time when our revenue is falling short of our needs by $11,500,000, the League of Women Voters believes that our Governor should not scorn a saving of a mere $5,850,000.

MRS. HERMAN MAAS, Chairman,
Department of Government and Economic Welfare, League of Women Voters.

"Vital to Health and Morals."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT has been with keen interest and an unusual amount of satisfaction that I have read your editorials devoted to the Vashon High School controversy. The cause of the students is just and it will prevail.

Permit me to commend and thank you for your worthy efforts in this matter, which is so vital to the health and morals of the youngsters.

A. W. LLOYD, Grand Chancellor,

For a City Gas Plant.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I HEARTILY agree with F. U., whose letter you published regarding the municipal gas plant. I think that if the city would buy the local (?) gas company and erect a modern plant and sell gas at cost, our smoke problem would soon be solved and we would not need an army of so-called smoke inspectors on the city payroll, accomplishing nothing.

I feel sure that the voters of this city would indorse this plan by such a large majority that it will not be necessary to use ghost voters and coercion to pass it, as seems apparent was done in the river front memorial election.

Let's all get behind this plan and use those river front memorial millions for something useful like this. Then when we get the smoke and soot out of our eyes and lungs, we can think about the river front memorial, planetariums, aquariums, etc.

CLYDE R. BUTLER.

The Heir Who Didn't Inherit.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

TEN SIXTY-SIX, a bugle's blast, and still an Empire's creed, and John, still vanquished, walks the dawn of golden Runnymede. The purple sails of Philip's prows drift down the tragic main, and "Good Queen Bess" wears in her crown the glory that was Spain. Still to the capes of Trafalgar the English proudly turn, and Wellington in bronze divides acclaim with Nelson's urn. If Balaklava's blunder haunts, if Capetown sours the bread, the "Old Contemptibles" still live—the ever deathless dead. But London Bridge, as prophesied, may be a ruined span, because a Windsor playboy could not learn to play the man.

Reservoir Park's Footpaths.

FOR many decades—40 years to the writer's personal knowledge—pedestrians have been making paths hither and yon through Reservoir Park, not the hard-surfaced walks laid out by the engineers, oh, no!

These footpaths resemble somewhat the cow paths with which we are all familiar and whose ramifications square not with rhyme or reason.

One waterworks official became so officious as actually to plant shrubbery in these many footpaths, with the thought of directing traffic from them. In rainy weather, they became so muddy as to be impassable, but they did persist. They were never encouraged by officialdom.

But times have changed. We now see these former footpaths converted into real walks, copings and crushed rock. Perhaps it is a PWA or a WPA project, but who cares? Hurrah for the change!

REHNEIWHCS.

IN CONTEMPT OF PUBLIC OPINION.

The December term grand jury has defaulted in its duty to the City of St. Louis.

It refuses to investigate the appalling frauds committed by election officials in the river front bond issue of September, 1935, exposed by the Post-Dispatch in September of this year.

The reason for this incredible decision of the grand jury is that the river front memorial would be a "good thing" for St. Louis and that the jury should do nothing which might jeopardize the undertaking.

It is none of the grand jury's concern whether the river front memorial is a "good thing" or not. The merits of the memorial are not at issue here. "The point is," as we said last September, "that the ballot was basely prostituted, and it is no extenuation to plead that this was done in a worthy cause. The end can never justify the means when the means strike at the foundations of representative government."

We repeat with all possible emphasis another statement we made at that time:

> It will be to the eternal shame of the city if the present occasion is not seized upon by its responsible officials for a powerful attack, with all the weapons at their command, upon the organized corruption that is making a mockery of our elections.

The decision of the December jury was contrary to the advice of Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller, who strongly urged it to proceed with a probe of the river front frauds. It was taken despite the powerful evidence laid before it by Judge Miller. It was taken in defiance of decent public opinion.

What are the facts surrounding the river front bond issue election? We review them briefly.

Fraud on a large scale was proved beyond peradventure of a doubt. From the evidence, it appears that fraud played a major, and perhaps a controlling, part in the election. Ballot boxes were stuffed and incorrect counts were certified. In one precinct was reported the unbelievable result of 505 "yes" votes and none on the other side. A partial Post-Dispatch canvass in this precinct revealed 16 persons who swore they voted "no." Returns from other precincts were almost equally fantastic—270 to 9, 761 to 11, 398 to 1, and so on.

On top of this prima facie showing of fraud, it was established by the Post-Dispatch that there was fraud in each of the 19 wards of the city in which the bond issue obtained the necessary two-thirds majority. These 19 wards, significantly, favored the bond issue on the official returns by the amazing count of 89,892 to 18,616—almost 5 to 1—although in the other nine wards, where about a third of the vote was cast, the bonds had only a slim lead, far short of the margin required for passage.

It is incredible that sentiment on the bond issue, among one-third of the voters, should have been approximately 50-50, and among the other two-thirds, 5 to 1. Here is the outstanding suspicious circumstance which, standing alone and unsupported by other facts, would demand the fullest investigation by the grand jury.

Such, in barest outline, is the story of one of the crookedest elections in the city's history—an election which the grand jury flatly declines to look into.

The action of the December grand jury stands in sharp contrast with the fine services of its predecessors. The June term grand jury was still sitting when the river front bond issue exposure was begun. It had worked hard on the frauds in connection with the June registration, indicting numerous officials. Its term was about to expire. It could not look into the river front bond issue election. But it specifically recommended that the Circuit Attorney should devote his time, with the incoming September grand jury and later grand juries, to investigation of the 1934 and 1936 primaries, and the river front bond issue election. Said the report:

> The grand jury feels that if the Circuit Attorney is allowed to continue his investigation and to follow through the campaign in this matter, as planned by him in consultation with us, and to carry it through without interference or interruption, the people of St. Louis will be well served and the ends of justice fully met.

Fresh in the city's memory is the magnificent work of the September grand jury, which indicted 68 persons for fraud in connection with the August primary. This jury was appalled "by the evidence of open and blatant fraud" which it discovered. Its investigation "proved by overwhelming evidence that the people of St. Louis have been robbed of their rights of suffrage, the most important possession of an American citizen."

But the present grand jury is not concerned with carrying on the work of assuring honest elections in St. Louis. In effect, it is condoning the widespread fraud of September, 1935, on the ground that the end justified the means. It is only a blunted sense of public morality that could produce such an attitude of mind.

The December grand jury stands in contempt of public opinion.

Trust the British to do everything with the appropriate touch. Ex-King Edward, sailing for France, departed on a yacht named Enchantress and finished his journey on a destroyer named Fury.

A GREAT WORK COMPLETED.

The completion of the Dictionary of American Biography, which is reported in considerable detail elsewhere in this issue of the Post-Dispatch, is a notable event in both American letters and American life. Housed within its 20 large volumes are more than 13,600 life-stories of the men and women who have joined in shaping and reshaping the national character and working changes in the always changing American scene. Great figures whose deeds rocked the nation and little known individuals whose curious works set them apart among their fellows and against their times, stand in their appointed places in the alphabetical listing. No such storehouse of information has existed before, although the creation of one has been a hope of many Americans since British scholarship completed the British Dictionary of National Biography at the turn of the century. This generation and those to come will owe a debt of gratitude to the sponsoring societies, editors, contributors, publishers and generous benefactor whose collective labors triumphed over the worst depression in history to build a monumental work with a thousand uses.

A ROYAL FAREWELL.

A man spoke. A King spoke. The man was manly. The King was kingly. A listening world wept.

That was Edward's farewell.

Never before did a man so bare his heart to the world. The sincerity, the candor—it was as if he were talking in the privacy of his home. Never before did a woman hear such a declaration of love.

Through his night in Gethsemane he has had the comforting affection of his family, the most thoughtful official consideration. The decision, necessarily, "has been mine and mine alone." It was not solely the trial of a royal personage. It was the ordeal of a son and brother struggling to make the right choice.

A divided judgment has been pronounced upon that choice. There can be no division of opinion as to the dignity of the leave-taking. Debts had been incurred: to all the people of the Empire for their unfailing loyalty and kindness; to the constant courtesy of the governing Ministers; to that steadfast affection of the hearthstone.

Item by item, they were paid in the only coin of the intangible realm—the coin of grateful acknowledgement.

Then David Windsor, faithful British subject, lifted his glass to His Majesty in a moving, unforgettable "God Save the King!"

ESSENTIALS OF GAME MANAGEMENT.

Louis Spatz, a Jersey County (Ill.) farmer, has demonstrated in miniature what states can do on a large scale to bring back wild game. Essentially, the problem is to provide feed, cover and water. Mr. Spatz has planted 20 or 30 acres in clover, which is allowed to stand and provide a hiding place for birds. Nearby is a field of unhusked corn, furnishing feed during the winter months. Several deep lakes fill the need for water. As a result, Mr. Spatz has the largest flock of pheasants in Jersey County and his place abounds in waterfowl, including wild ducks, which may be found there almost any time of the year.

Numerous other individuals have set themselves up as private conservationists with great success. One of the most noteworthy is George Wilcox, who owns a large tract of timber land, on which there are two large lakes, near Stuttgart, Ark. Every fall, wild ducks and geese, literally by the million, assemble at the Wilcox place. No shot is ever fired into them as they rest on the lakes (though Wilcox permits limited pass shooting as they fly to and fro), and by unerring instinct they come back year after year. Though the country around Stuttgart has many lakes attractive to ducks, they are used as commercial shooting places and the ducks have learned to shun them in favor of the Wilcox place.

Through the passage of Proposition No. 4 at the last election, Missouri is entering a new era so far as wild life is concerned. If the new conservation commission provides refuges where birds may find feed, water and cover, there is no doubt that Missouri can vastly increase the game population.

A DISTINCTION IN HEIRS.

In discussing the succession to the British crown, some writers and speakers have grown a bit careless in the use of the terms "heir apparent" and "heir presumptive." There is a distinction, and reference to the Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the new King, as heir apparent is incorrect.

An heir apparent is one whose claim on the title or property depends only on his surviving the holder. Thus, Edward when Prince of Wales was heir apparent of George V. An heir presumptive is one who stands next in line at the moment, but whose status may be altered by birth of a nearer heir. Thus, the new King when Duke of York was heir presumptive, for there was still the possibility that Edward VIII would have a son who would take precedence in the line of succession. Princess Elizabeth is now heir presumptive. She is at present first in line, but the arrival of a baby brother would place her second.

Now that we have clarified this matter, we hope it won't be necessary to speak of it again.

POSITION OF THE IRISH FREE STATE.

The part played by the Irish Free State in the British change of monarchs throws an interesting light on that unit of the Commonwealth in its progress toward independence. The Free State Parliament (the Dail Eireann) has approved a bill ratifying the accession of King George VI, but at the same time has passed a measure abolishing the office of the King's Governor-General. His duties will be taken over by President Eamon de Valera of the Free State. This step had been under consideration for some time, and De Valera seized for its enactment the occasion when it took on greatest significance.

The whole is an example of the American-born President's political finesse. His goal, as he states it, is "ultimately to see all of Ireland a republic." He does not rush headlong toward fulfillment, however. He negotiates concessions from the British Government; he sponsors legislation tending toward the centuries-old goal of Irish freedom; he takes steps to win foreign nations' recognition of the Free State as a separate entity.

For several years, De Valera has been striving to make his country economically self-sufficient. A tariff war with England has developed, but the people, under De Valera's inspiration, seem willing to pay the price. He knows full well that a drastic step may mean tariff reprisals; hence his diplomatic handling of the present situation. An abrupt severance of relations with Britain, too, would diminish the Free State's hopes of ultimately winning over the six counties of Northern Ireland, where the British Government still has a foothold.

The Free State's relations with Britain are full of subtle distinctions. Essentially, the concept is that of an independent state voluntarily a member of the Commonwealth, which acknowledges the crown, not as a purely British symbol, but as the unifying element in an assemblage of nations.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Cupid.

AN OLD MAN AT DOORN.

England Comes Through

British idealize royal family, so disillusionment over Edward VIII makes abdication almost a catastrophe, editorial says; "King's fatal deficiency" might have caused serious trouble later; outcome, though painful, is viewed as fortunate for Empire; consolation for all free nations in dignity and stability that marked the change.

From the Kansas City Times.

THE abdication of King Edward undoubtedly was received with genuine sorrow by the great majority of the British people. It is difficult for Americans to understand the veneration for the throne that has been built up over the centuries in England.

The crown, indeed, is the symbol of the majesty and the unity of the Empire. But as Walter Bagehot, the British political authority, has remarked, abstract ideas do not appeal to British emotions, and veneration for the crown becomes in practice veneration for the wearer of the crown.

The British idealize their royal family, and the disillusionment that has come in the case of Edward makes his withdrawal from the throne almost a national catastrophe.

From an objective viewpoint, the change of sovereigns is for the better. Edward VIII had some attractive human qualities. He was democratic and showed a real interest in the people of the "depressed areas." His visits to the unemployed in the mining districts and his words of sympathy contributed to a personal popularity such as his father never had. But in general, he showed himself a man of slight capacity and of little sense of responsibility.

Bagehot, writing in the middle of the last century, spoke of the difficulty in the case of a monarch who came to the throne in middle age, after the demoralizing experience of being Prince of Wales. "A pleasure-loving lounger," he said, "will not begin to work as George III worked or as Prince Albert worked." A Prince of Wales is a center of social life and adulation, but has no real responsibilities to sober him.

Bagehot's words were prophetic. Edward was sent traveling about the Empire and to the United States and South America. But the temptation to be a royal playboy overbalanced the serious side of these journeys. While the facts were concealed from the public, they were commonly known among newspaper men who were assigned to "cover" the Prince's activities.

A year and a half ago, American correspondents in London were wondering how such an irresponsible trifler as the Prince would get on as King of a realm whose people, as H. L. Mencken says, "furiously venerate" the old decorums. The answer came in the incredible journey Edward took over Europe last summer in company with Mrs. Simpson.

A monarch who would so flout the decencies of his position evidently was unworthy of the confidence of his people and the crown of a great Empire.

While Prime Minister Baldwin spoke with respect and affection of Edward in his intensely human and moving address in the House of Commons Thursday, there is serious question whether so irresponsible a young man would not have been a constaht source of worry to the responsible Government.

The British sovereign is said to have three rights and only three in dealing with his Ministers: the right to be consulted, the right to encourage, the right to warn. But Edward had shown a disposition to go beyond these rights into that No-Man's Land of the undefined prerogatives of the crown. This was especially apparent in his liking for the Germans and the way in which he showed it. Whether Britain should come to a close understanding with Hitler was a matter for the Ministry to determine, not for the King.

Queen Victoria's vast experience and native sense were of much service to her Prime Ministers. But Bagehot, writing in her reign, comments that "as far as experience goes, there is no reason to expect a hereditary series of useful limited monarchs."

If Edward as King had persisted in the course set in the few months of his reign, he might have caused serious trouble for the Government and for the country.

Whatever apprehensions might be held on this point, however, the King's fatal deficiency was shown in the events culminating in his abdication. "Above all things," wrote Bagehot, "our royalty is to be reverenced."

This feeling is wonderfully strong in England. It is fostered by the press. An American who was in London in the summer of 1935 vividly recalls how shocked a well-known British writer was at a chance remark reflecting upon the conduct of the Prince of Wales. The Prince, the Englishman said, was a man of the highest character and extraordinary ability.

It is recalled that the great Pitt told his friends that his knees knocked together when he was conferring with his sovereign, the stupid George III, and it used to be said that at a royal reception, Pitt "bowed so low that you could see the tip of his hooked nose between his legs." Even the venerable Gladstone used to stand in the presence of the Queen. He once wrote his wife of Victoria's graciousness in asking him to be seated when he saw her after an illness.

Apparently this fundamental reverence of his people was ignored by Edward. He was ready to pursue a course that would rock the Empire and immensely impair the royal prestige so carefully fostered by his father and mother.

In view of all the circumstances, it may be said that the abdication, painful as it must be to loyal Britons, is fortunate for the Empire. The new King may have no more ability than his brother. At least George VI has poise, character and docility. There is no reason to suppose he will become a problem to his Ministers.

At the same time, his lack of color is partly compensated for by the glowing personality of his small daughter. As heir presumptive to the throne, she will engage the affectionate interest of the public who will regard her as the future Queen Elizabeth, inheritor of the great memories that still cluster about the Queen under whose reign the Empire took shape.

The internal affairs of the British Empire are of no direct concern to the people of the United States. Yet Americans have a real interest in the stability of the great democratic Government whose influence covers such a large part of the world.

The fact that Britain has come through the crisis with such dignity and so little unsettling of its institutions is to the advantage of America and all free nations.

A Boss Retires, but Not Far

From the New York Herald Tribune.

TOM PENDERGAST of Kansas City, perhaps the most modern of political overlords, announces his withdrawal in favor of his nephew, son of the man from whom he learned his trade of exchanging favors for votes. He will not vanish completely from the scene, he promises, but will remain in the background, as a sort of chairman of the board or elder statesman, and will be consulted in all matters affecting the organization.

This seems a considerably modified retirement, and it may be taken for granted that the extent to which he is active in party management will be decided chiefly by his health. For, in the midst of the Roosevelt triumph at the Philadelphia convention, Pendergast became ill and has not fully regained his strength since.

The new leader should have smooth sailing, for a time at least. Missouri, which has been normally Republican, and which was carried by Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, gave Franklin Roosevelt in November a plurality of more than 400,000. Before that, Pendergast had elected Harry S. Truman to the United States Senate and had demonstrated mastery of the Democratic organization of the State. Nephew James will find a well-oiled machine ready to continue the work so effectively begun by Uncle Tom.

The elder Pendergast in some ways has modeled his career on that of the late Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall. Mr. Murphy amassed a fortune through construction contracts; Pendergast is owner of the Ready Mixed Concrete Co. and part owner of the Ross Construction Co., both of which are fortunate in the matter of getting a good deal of city work.

He thinks well of reformers, having been able to defeat them much of the time. When a council-manager plan of government was instituted to put an end to boss rule, Pendergast elected five of eight members. Members of the National Youth Movement he referred to as "nice boys and girls." They gave him a battle, however, that seriously threatened his hold on Jackson County.

Elections in which the Pendergast machine was victorious have been marked by bloodshed as well as charges of repeating and fraud, and the usual debased and corrupt methods were resorted to when the machine thought itself in danger of losing. The boss kept aloof from this "rough work," and often boasted he had many supporters among Kansas City's most respectable citizens.

His plan of recruiting the organization was the time-tried one of "service." He explained it by saying: "If you move into a new neighborhood, and, before your stuff is unloaded, a friendly fellow calls on you and asks what you want done, and goes and does it for you; when it comes to thinking about a political connection, you are not so likely to vote with the man who sees eye to eye with you about Honolulu as with the man who got your gas turned on."

In this homely illustration, perhaps there is a suggestion for political organizations which think the voter should be left to look out for himself until election draws near.

ITALY, GERMANY AGREE TO DIVIDE DANUBIAN TRADE

Under New Accords, Traffic Out of Valley Will Be Coordinated in Economic Reciprocity.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE BALANCE IN GOODS

Understandings in Rome Parcel Out Districts of Central Europe Between Contracting Powers.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Dec. 12. — Accords between Germany and Italy to split between them the business in the Danubian states and to exchange goods rather than money were announced today.

Under the new accords, traffic out of the Danubian area will be "co-ordinated," Germany will reciprocate present economic privileges by granting the same privileges to Italian colonies, and foreign exchange between the two countries will be balanced by merchandise. Thus, each nation will not be compelled to permit outflow of any of its carefully regulated currency in dealings with the other.

The accords were divided into four groups:

Providing for Italian-German collaboration in the Danubian area, but not affecting existing Italian-Austro-Hungarian accords and not interfering with the economic independence of the Danubian states.

Dividing river and rail traffic of the Danubian states—transport northward on German railroads and rivers to German ports, and southward on Italian railroads to Italian Adriatic ports is "co-ordinated." The economic map of Central Europe is divided into zones, some contributing to German ports, particularly Hamburg, and others to Italian ports, particularly Trieste.

Economic agreements between Germany and Italy are brought up to date, two mixed committees set up for control and revision of economic understandings at periodic intervals. This group included a recent accord for development of German tourist traffic in Italy.

No money will pass between Italy and Germany in carrying out the new economic program, all exchanges being balanced either by other goods or services.

REPORTS MOST DISTANT STAR TWO QUINTILLION MILES AWAY

Director of Mount Wilson Observatory Tells of Nova 20,000 Times Brighter Than Sun.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12. — Determination of the most distant star of the universe, two quintillion miles (2,000,000,000,000,000,000) from the earth, was reported today by the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the institution's observatory at Mount Wilson, Cal., attending the organization's annual exhibition of scientific research, said astronomical work this year also had disclosed the brightest star in the universe, a super Nova, or new star, 20,000 times brighter than the sun, and another star which probably weighed several thousand tons a square inch.

The most distant star, he added, was in a faint cluster of nebulae almost at the outer limit of space which can be observed through the 100-inch telescope at Mount Wilson.

The observatory staff exhibited for the first time models of the stars in the universe showing the insignificance of the earth.

At the end of each article, which is signed by the initials of the contributor, is a list of source material by title, author and date and other credits. A list of contributors appears at the front of each volume. Dr. Harris Elwood Starr, associate editor, wrote more sketches than any other contributor, 342. Carl W. Mitman of the Smithsonian Institution wrote 328 articles, chiefly on inventors. James Truslow Adams, popularly known historian, wrote more than 100 articles, many of them on colonial figures.

In addition to these, some of the better-known contributors are: Carl Sandburg, Newton D. Baker, Claude G. Bowers, John Erskine, Royal Cortissoz, Felix Frankfurter, Douglas S. Freeman, Mark Van Doren, Ernest Sutherland Bates, Oswald Garrison Villard, Albert Bushnell Hart, Max Lerner, Harriet Monroe, Henry F. Pringle, Van Wyck Brooks, Walter Prichard Eaton, Henry Seidel Canby, David Starr Jordan, Robert M. LaFollette, William E. Dodd, Hervey Allen, Lizette Woodworth Reese, Bruce Bliven, John R. Commons, Edward Laroque Tinker, Arthur Hobson Quinn, Alvin F. Harlow, Paul Van Dyke, Edward S. Corwin, Mary E. Woolley, Franklin P. Adams, John Livingston Lowes and Henry Noble McCracken.

St. Louis Contributors.

Although a large number of contributors wrote as many as 25 articles, a surprisingly large number were the work of occasional contributors. Many Missourians and St. Louisans appear throughout the 20 volumes and many Missourians and St. Louisans are to be found among the contributors. Among St. Louisans who wrote articles are Dean Alexander S. Langsdorf, Prof. Tyrrell Williams, Dr. Major G. Seelig, Prof. William G. B. Carson, Prof. Arnold J. Lien, Dr. George T. Moore, Federal Judge Charles B. Davis, Prof. Roland G. Usher, the Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, Dr. Arthur E. Bostwick and Miss Stella M. Drumm.

The volume published last week contains articles on such varied St. Louisans as Carl Wimar, frontier painter; John Gabriel Woerner, authority on probate judicature; Calvin Milton Woodward, father of the manual training school, and James E. Yeatman, banker, civic leader and philanthropist.

An Estimate of Harding.

Each article is a combination of freshly arranged factual material and careful appraisal based on all the available evidence. How seriously the editors and writers took the matter of evaluating the subjects may be judged from the estimate of Warren G. Harding by Prof. Allan Nevins, Columbia University historian, in Volume VIII. Summing up at the end of this difficult assignment, Nevins wrote:

"The extent to which Harding was aware of the evils boiling beneath the surface of his administration, and was either willing to palter with them or be blackmailed into overlooking them, cannot now be determined. The assessable evidence indicates that, till near the end, he was ignorant of a large part of the corruption surrounding him, and was stunned and completely perplexed when he discovered its proportions. Even if this is true, his responsibility for his appointments, for the general tone which he gave to his administration, and for such errors as his approval of the transfer of the oil reserves, cannot be palliated.

"In the first years after his death his name was so clouded that few would honor or defend it. Yet it must be recognized that a heavy responsibility for his record falls upon the party and nation which elected a man of moderate abilities, weak judgment of character, excessive amiability and total lack of vigilance, to an exacting office. In minor station he was a useful and likable man, and it was his cruel misfortune that he was lifted to a post beyond his powers."

The letter "S" starts more names, 1432, than any other letter. "B" is next with 1301. "M" is third with 1187, "H" fourth with 1097 and "C" fifth with 1014. There is only one "X"—Janos Xanthus (1825-1894), early student of bird life. "S" owes its leadership to the picturesque and resourceful Smith family which alone is responsible for 152 articles. Sixty-two persons named Jones were adjudged significant enough for inclusion and 59 named Williams.

The set in the rererence room at the main room of the Central Library is in almost constant use by students and others. One member of the library staff said that many readers turn through the volumes, reading articles here and there as fancy strikes them, not in search of specific information, but apparently in enjoyment of the richly varied procession of great and near-great through America's three centuries.

FRENCH EDITOR IN JAIL PROPOSED FOR HONORS

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Friends of Charles Maurras, royalist leader, are proposing his election to the French Academy. Maurras, co-editor of the royalist newspaper, Action Francaise, is serving sentences of eight months and three months in Sante prison for writing editorials in which he urged his readers to keep their kitchen knives handy and well-sharpened. The Government asserted they were designed to provoke the assassination of Premier Blum and Leftist deputies.

He is not subjected to the usual prison rules, but is free to pursue his literary work and has the freedom of a little yard next to his cell.

He is permitted to receive friends —and many Royalists call on him daily in prison.

The jailing of Maurras has not taken the vitriol out of attacks on the Government in Action Francais.

The invective of Maurras' editorials has got him to trouble with the authorities more than once before. Some years ago he was given a two-year suspended sentence for telling the Minister of the Interior to show more energy in suppressing Communist disorders or "we will bring you down like a dog."

His colleagues in the direction of Action Francaise, Leon Daudet, son of Alphonse Daudet, and Maurice Pujo, likewise have been in jail for their writings.

Maurras has written a prodi... s nu ber of books—biography, politics, economics, literary critici... and other subjects. Mussolini is said to have borrowed from his ideas in molding the Fascist state.

His literary excellence, his friends assert, will entitle him to selection as one of the "forty immortals" of the academy—and that such an honor would "justly rebuke" the Government for jailing so eminent a man of letters.

To Take Up Davis Case at Yale

ance of the sort of material which Mr. Sidney B. Fay and Mr. Harry Elmer Barnes have been publishing on the responsibility for the war. As I have not heard you speak on the subject, I am disposed to discount somewhat the reports which reach me. But if the reports are even measurably correct, I confess I should feel greatly disturbed in my recommendation of you for a piece of work in which sobriety of judgment and maturity of knowledge and completeness of investigation would be so important."

Fay and Barnes have attacked the theory that Germany was solely to blame for the start of the World War. They have developed the thesis that the Allied Powers, particularly Russia, were almost equally to blame. It is pointed out here in New Haven in defense of the university that Prof. Edwin M. Borchard of the Yale Law School has accepted this thesis, and, in a recent work, carried it even further than Fay and Barnes without criticism from university authorities. At the same time one is told there are men on the Yale faculty whose views are even more radical than those of Davis, but, it is pointed out, these men are careful in any public expression to dissociate their personal beliefs from their connection with Yale.

Davis and Trade Unions.

Davis took an active part in the trade union movement, both in organizing teachers into unions and in educational classes for New Haven labor unions. This activity brought him in conflict with Yale authoriities. In a letter to the dean of the Diviniy School, Howard Cheney, a trustee of the Yale Corporation, declared that, "the New Haven men are particularly exercised by Prof. Davis' efforts to unionize the non-union factories and employes of New Haven." Shortly afterward Provost Henry S. Graves of tthe university raised the question as to whether Davis was actively promoting union organization. Such action, the provost held, would be inimical to the interests of Yale.

By his interest in Russia and his advocacy of recognition of the Soviet Government by the United States, Davis also disturbed President Angell and others in authority. After he had edited series of books pertaining to Russia and Bolshevism he had to deny to Angell, according to the independent report on the Davis case, that he was in receipt of "Moscow gold." Numerous protests came from alumni after Davis addressed a meeting in Madison Square Garden in New York in behalf of recognition of Russia, and again when he accepted an invitation to reply on the radio to Representative Hamilton Fish's charges of Bolshevik propaganda. To Dean Weigle in December of 1926, President Angell, sent a note saying, "Our friend seems to have broken out in a new direction," and attached was a letter from a Yale alumnus who commented on the radio talk, "I presume it is impossible to muzzle such a man. Is it necessary to retain such as he on the faculty? I sincerely trust not."

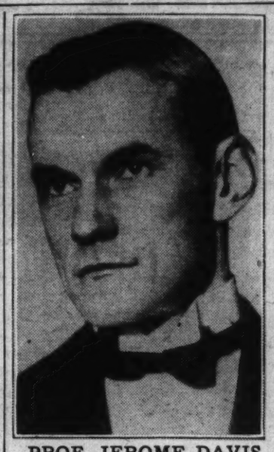

"Capitalism and Culture."

Without using the name of the university or his own name, Davis included in his book "Capitalism and Its Culture," it has now become known, instances of "suppression" in which he himself was involved at Yale. Thus, in addressing a group of ministers in Chicago, he referred to the practice of the Insulls in promoting utility holding companies as a form of "higher racketeering".

A letter came from Samuel Insull Jr., a Yale graduate, forwarded to Davis in care of the treasurer of the university. A little later Davis was asked by the Dean to prepare his speeches in advance in writing so there would be always a good record which could be produced in response to inquiries following newspaper reports of his remarks. This Davis declined to do, stating:

"I had a written address for my talk in Chicago and it did not refer to the power interests at all but nevertheless I believed it advisable to refer briefly to this question in the course of my address and would do so again. I believe that everything I said was in accord with the facts and am prepared to stand on what I said. I know of no professor in the United States who has been required by his university to write out every address. I cannot conscientiously agree to do this."

Of another episode, Davis writes: "A concrete example of the danger to freedom because of business control is given in one of our largest universities. Ferdinand Pecora was counsel for the United States Senate Commission on Banking. He had brilliantly conducted the hearings, including an investigation into J. P. Morgan & Co. Later he was appointed to an important post by the President of the United States. One of the professors of a certain university secured Pecora to speak. The trustees refused to grant permission for him to speak in any of the university buildings."

PROF. JEROME DAVIS.

The professor was Davis and the university was Yale.

More recently, according to the report of Warne, Beard, Douglas and Ross, the university requested that a meeting at which Senator Nye was to speak be canceled or "at least postponed." The reason given by President Angell was Nye's "indecent attack on President Wilson, which has stirred a very deep public resentment and which personally I believe to be based on the misinterpretation of historical facts."

Davis' Conclusion.

The conclusion that Davis gives in his book with regard to education in America follows:

"The established economic order demands that education shall, in general, produce the results which it requires. The schools are for the most part non-profit agencies operating within the framework of the profit economy. The benefits of education are incalculable and have been achieved in spite of the fetters of the capitalistic order. In spite of restrictions many teachers have considerable freedom. There is little doubt that on the whole teachers have more freedom to criticise the capitalistic system than teachers in the Soviet Union have freedom to criticise Communism. Nevertheless, the educational system, whether considered from the standpoint of its control, its support, its curriculum, its teaching staff, or its finished product, is biased in favor of a capitalistic culture."

Yale Faculty Lineup.

Thus far Davis has received no support from members of the Yale faculty apart from the Divinity School. Even those who by reason of their liberal or radical views might be expected to show sympathy have not come forward. Davis has not been popular among faculty members, but even those who have not been attracted to him personally agree he is a "stimulating" teacher.

Tribute to his teaching ability has come from Prof. Douglas C. MacIntosh of the Divinity School since the controversy arose. MacIntosh, a Canadian who has been denied United States citizenship by the Supreme Court because he refuses to swear to bear arms for the United States in the event of war, took up the defense of Davis when he read statements in the newspapers by Dean Weigle to the effect that "Capitalism and Its Culture" had nothing to do with the dismissal. MacIntosh had this to say:

"There exists evidence, to which I can refer more specifically and describe more fully if and when it seems necessary, which to my mind indicates conclusively that economic views expressed by Mr. Davis from time to time and particularly in his recent book, "Capitalism and Its Culture," taken together with an antagonistic reaction of a considerable number of Yale alumni to the same, did undeniably figure among the underlying causes of his being dropped from the faculty of the university after he had been for 12 years a member of its teaching staff."

MacIntosh then quoted praise of the book from Prof. John Dewey of Columbia University, Prof. Harold Laski of the London School of Economics, Prof. Henry Pratt Fairchild, president of the American Sociological Society and others. A number of students in Divinity School have come to Davis' defense but they are divided as to the course of action that should be followed, many believing that no step should be taken pending the report of the American Association of University Professors. The American Federation of Labor in a resolution adopted at its recent convention in Tampa, Fla., criticises the University for its action. In New York a group of liberal ministers have formed a committee to offer Davis whatever aid is within their power.

Yale Alumni Disturbed.

There is no doubt that "Capitalism and Its Culture" disturbed Yale alumni. Yale, as Davis shows in, a chart in his book, is the second most heavily endowed university in the country, with a total endowment fund of $95,575,043. Harvard is first with $117,204,250. Of the 20 trustees comprising the Yale Corporation 10 are executives of banks, trust or insurance companies, five are manufacturers or merchants and five are connected with public utilities or railroads. Washington University at St. Louis is shown in the Davis chart with an endowment of $18,565,286; of the 18 trustees five are bankers, seven manufacturers or merchants, three in public utilities and three in railroads.

"It must be recognized, of course, that business men have poured millions of dollars into our colleges and universities," Davis writes. "They have secured social prestige, after honorary degrees, in financing the buildings. Sometimes entire colleges have been erected as memorials in their honor. It is, of course, questionable whether success in the struggle for capitalistic profits necessarily fits any individual with the requisite scientific capacity to direct funds for educational purposes. The result is that millions of dollars are used for questionable plant and equipment, even squandered in needless expenditures. In one of our greatest universities money was given to build a memorial unit for one of the graduate schools. The faculty of the department had suggested a moderate amount for building and any additional funds, if available, to be used for instructions. The repeated requests of the faculty, however, were overruled and four or five times the amount needed for building was used, with the result that badly needed funds for instruction were not available."

Because of lack of funds it has been necessary to curtail the teaching staffs of several colleges in the university here and an effort is being made to obtain added endowment. Naturally wealthy alumni who are solicited have an unfavorable reaction to Davis' opinions and activities. Similarly an effort has been made during the past year to accumulate for Harvard University a tercentenary fund and numerous alumni have made the appeal on occasion to protest against the presence on the faculty of Prof. Felix Frankfurter, close friend and adviser of President Roosevelt.

The Ultimate Issue.

It is probable that a decision in the Davis case by the Association of University Professors will turn on whether or not he was really ineligible for promotion. The university emphasizes this point. In Davis' defense, Warne, Douglas, Beard and Ross state that the faculty of the Divinity School failed to vote for Davis' promotion because they were informed that the trustees would in any event decline to give Davis a full professorship. Instead the faculty voted to continue Davis in his present status of associate professor.

In a series of directions issued to investigating committees, the Association of University Professors has stipulated "unfitness for promotion" as a "legitimate cause" for dismissal, but the directions also state that a professor or an instructor who has been at a university for from three to five years, even though he may not have been given a permanent appointment, has "a presumption of permanence" and the university must show a cause when it fails to reappoint him.

It may be several months before the Association's report is completed. It may even come after Davis has finished his career at Yale next June. In any event it is doubtful, whatever the decision, that it would result in Davis' reinstatement. The case has gone too far for that.

JEWISH M. P. USES DIARY FOR HAT IN TAKING OATH

Balance Small Book on Head When Lost Headgear Prevents His Complying With Custom.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Jewish custom which requires that men must keep their heads covered during ritual ceremonies such as taking an oath, caused a moment of embarrassment to a member of the House of Commons today.

Marcus Samuel, a Jewish M. P., was unable to find his hat when the time came for the House to swear allegiance to the new King, George VI.

After some search had failed to locate the missing hat, Samuel pulled a small diary from his pocket and balanced it precariously on his head while the oath was taken.

expropriations is deemed too great if it can open up a new vista of St. Peter's or the Colosseum. They have deprived whole busy neighborhoods of public lavatories as being incongruous with so much glory.

With the brightening and tidying of the towns has taken place a stiffening and smartening of the citizen in his dress and manners, and gaudy uniforms are necessary on many occasions. But a nation, even a very hospitable one, does not live entirely in or for its front doors and drawing rooms. In half an hour in a city in the far south the traveler can see enough poverty, congestion, disease and dirt to understand that a unified command can put a shine on the externals of life quickly enough but cannot in a few years make good even the crying needs of the impoverished and depressed throughout the land.

Loss Outruns Profit.

Italians in the off moments are grumblers, like the rest of mankind, and do not easily allow that life is getting easier for them. For 10 years they have quietly murmured at a process of economic change which has been complex, because the state intervenes at one point to offset the consequences of its intervention at another point, so that the gains on swings are perpetually being offset by the losses on roundabouts.

The state raises the external value for the money, and to maintain export markets reduces money wages, but claims that the wage-earner gains correspondingly by cheaper import prices. But cheap imports mean competition against local industries, hence tariffs and quotas, and also further wage reductions. But this time the wage-earner (or salary-earner) must be compensated by forced reductions of rents. The property-owner would then cease to build houses but for exemptions from taxation, but to be able to relieve taxation the state must reduce the charges on its internal loans.

Those Who Profit.

For 10 years, since Mussolini decided to stabilize the lira at about 25 per cent more than the value placed on it in 1925 and 1926, the Fascist Government, multiplying and elaborating the bureaucracy known as the Corporate State, has endlessly decreed economic measures to offset the consequences of previous measures.

Few persons interrogated over a period of years have not insisted that on balance they had come out worse off by them. This was only not true of specially favored people to whom restrictions on imports brought opportunities of exploiting home markets or whose land values were improved by Government programs of urban or rural development (and the Corporate State can distribute such favors wherever desired without provoking protests from the neglected).

The managers of the totalitarian State, so prodigal of expenditure for beautification and entertainment, seemed to be obliged to declare reduced dividends for capitalists and wage reductions for the workers year after year. By 1934 Italian people might still think they had made a good deal in purchasing unity and order at the expense of intellectual and business liberty, but they recognized that unity and order had not brought an economic improvement to the worker, the small business man, nor even, unless he were a Government contractor or favorite, to the big man.

Worse Off in Last Analysis.

Far more are the Italian people aware of this in 1936. The Government has long since ceased publishing such statistics as price indices or average wages, but the traveler can today overhear a loud murmur of anxiety about prices of bread, butter, meat, cheese, pasta—an aggrieved muttering and questioning how one can get through another year with such prices notwithstanding wage increases of 6 to 10 per cent.

"Things are bad," says the proprietress of a cafe in a Southern port, explaining that she has no milk at the counter and that the biscuits on the shelves are not worth buying.

"A critical situation," says a more sophisticated tradesman. Not that the traveler himself, from the appearance of shop windows or the look of price lists, would deduce much shortage, but the margin of Italian incomes, not only of wage-earners but also of employes and officials, is small, indeed. The smallest price increase in necessaries afflicts the working-class family living on 10 lire a day (say 56 cents). Even those earning a fine wage like 25 lire are forced to be careful in the extreme.

The men who, as Fascist party secretaries, corporate officials or Mayors, keep the vast despotic bureaucracy running live among female relatives and other friends who see no prospect of any improvement in conditions which, notwithstanding patriotic and spectacular diversions (not negligible satisfactions for a people so fond of drama and brilliance), they feel to be mean. They transmit these sentiments to their superiors in Rome, and the supreme head comes to hear of it. What can be done about it?

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY JOHN G. NEIHARDT

Not What He Would Choose If He Were Creator

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE FUTURE. By John Langdon-Davies. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

SEVERAL years ago there appeared—and immediately disappeared—a very remarkable novel entitled "Red Snow." The author's purpose was to show that the vital meanings men find, or read into, life are based wholly upon futurity. Some years earlier Korzybski, elaborating the same idea in "Manhood of Humanity," had characterized man as "the time-binding animal," thus distinguishing him from the beast and laying the foundation for an intelligent approach to our social problems.

Now Langdon-Davies, convinced that we cannot live well in the present unless we believe in the future, and that we must be sure, at least, that we are not working towards a future that can never be, has undertaken to furnish a viable picture of the future based, not upon desire, but upon a reasoned consideration of all available data.

Briefly, his view is that of the philosophical radical, but he differs from most so-called radicals by insisting that he is predicting and not advocating. "This book," he says, "does not describe the future its author would create were he God, but rather the future that seems probable in the light of unalterable laws which all life obeys." His conception of those laws, set forth in a long and apparently well-reasoned chapter, must be left for the reader to discover. But he reaches the conclusion that "man cannot freely choose between Dictatorship and Democracy, Communism and Fascism, any more than an animal can choose between the social and the solitary habit." There is Reason, he argues, and Social Habit, the latter being "not a thing that we form, but that forms us." To what extent, he asks, will the Social Habit leave us free to use our reason?

"The real problem of human evolution for the next 50 years," he believes, is concerned with the question as to "whether reason will put an end to present folly, or some blinder power." Evidently he places heavy odds on the latter.

As for definite prophecies, some are as follows:

There will be no general war in Western Europe before 1940. The next great conflict "will begin as a holy war between Germany and Japan on the one side and Russia on the other"—the "holiness" growing out of the fanatical "religions," Fascism and Communism. Germany will be the next great Communist state.

Democracy, Langdon-Davies assures us, will be dead by 1950. The United States will go Fascist. But eventually "the Age of Stupidity will be liquidated" over here as well as over there. The social idea will triumph over the individual, not because man wished it so, but rather as the result of an inevitable evolutionary adaptation to machine technique.

Before the year 2000 all the terrific, bloody rumpus will be over; the world will be socialized; states will be "super-biologists," choosing the breeding stock and controlling the birthrate. There will be no physical want, also no freedom as we now conceive it, but more of genuine freedom, the prophet trusts.

This picture of the future, drawn with considerable detail, is hardly calculated to please us of the present. As to this, the prophet remarks consolingly that most of us will not be living then.

But if we can't do anything about it in any case, it does seem that Social Habit might further oblige us by doing the worrying, too.

Pioneer Memories Of Kansas

SOD AND STUBBLE. By John Ise. (Wilson-Erickson, Inc., New York.)

THERE were valiant souls in those days, the days of sod and stubble, when the pioneers went West and won the wilderness. None more valiant than Henry and Rosie Eisenmenger, who went homesteading in Kansas and, because there was valor in their souls, shared in the winning.

The story of their lives, as told by Dr. John Ise, one of their sons, is less the story of what they won than what they endured before they won—the hardships and disappointments, accidents, diseases and sorrows that almost broke their hearts. Mostly it is the story of the pioneer mother, this Rosie who bore 12 children, bringing 11 of them to maturity and worthily-filled places in life; for hers was the strength that kept the weaker Henry steadfast when he might have faltered.

It is a simple story, simply told. Though it is cast in the form of fiction, its value is in its sincerity as a record of the day-by-day lives of the winners of the wilderness. In the closing chapters there are touches of drama—as when the children have passed, one by one, out of the schoolhouse across the pasture, into high school, normal school and university, and Rosie sorrows because she will never again look out beyohd the corral to see the children coming home. Bereft by Henry's taking off, she had carried on and had completed alone the winning that they had begun together, but her winning was her loss, for, she said, "The children don't really need me any longer. There isn't much that I can do for them now. I've seen that coming these last few years, and don't think it's anything to be happy about—to know that you're . . . that you're no longer needed."

So, at last, at the children's insistence, she had a sale of her cherished possessions, the farm was rented to others and the leaving time came. They drove across the creek and up the hill beyond, stopping at the top so that Rosie could look just once more . . . If she could only be back there and see the children coming home again. . . . The meadow lark fluted its last clear goodnight call, and they drove down the other side of the hill.

AFKE'S TEN. By Ninke van Hichtum. Translated by Marie Kiersted Pidgeon. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

When Life Was Grim Along the Clyde

THE SHIPBUILDERS. By George Blake (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

WHEN steamship company directors, like grizzled Sir Gordon Rowse, take their white-spatted boots from the glass-topped desk in London and lean forward to blurt out, "There are too many damned ships in the world just now and too damned little to put into them," it means empty berths, rusting gantries, and grass growing about the sinking keel-blocks along the Clyde where lie the world's greatest shipyards. That means depression, with a gray Glasgow where laughter is a waste and life is grim. Men who are skilled in the building of ships shuffle about, eyes dull, shoulders stooped in defeat, faces pinched.

In this story of the fall of Pagan's yard there are two figures that stand head and shoulders above the others. One is bow-legged, broad-shouldered Danny Shields, the riveter, a simple soul with a steadfast heart. The other is Leslie Pagan, owner of the yard, whom Danny served as batsman through four years of Gallipoli and Sinai. Pagan's fun-loving wife wants her husband to chuck the yard and be a man of leisure in Southern England. Pagan worships his, wife, but he has the blood of generations of shipbuilders in his veins. Being, as Danny says, a "toff and a gentleman," Pagan also is distressed by the misery of the discharged men.

Danny, kept on with a few others at maintenance work, gets drunk once too often on that potent solace of the Scots workingman—a half glass of whisky neat washed down by a glass of heavy Scotch ale. Sacked, he is too proud to explain to Pagan that he had been sitting up with a dying former companion-in-arms. Troubles come thick and fast. His oldest son, a rotter, gets in trouble with the law. His in-laws upset his home life. His wife deserts him, taking "wee Mirren," Danny's joy and pride, with her. Only Billy, a lad of 10, stays with his father. They peddle kindling to keep body and soul together.

Then two hoodlums slash Danny's throat and he spends weeks in the hospital. Pagan, who has closed the yard, hears of Danny's plight and offers him a job on the Pagan estate in the South, but Danny has heard of a liner whose keel is to be laid soon. The Clyde is a part of him and he sticks.

"The Shipbuilders" is a simple but powerful story. Unlike most novels of its kind, there is here no bitter class antagonism, although the shortcomings of the social system are made apparent.

Chatty Memoirs Of a Socialite

WITHOUT PREJUDICE. By Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt. With Pamela Wayne. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

TWO things may in fairness be required of those who write autobiography. First, that their lives be interesting, and, second, that they know how to write. Mrs. Vanderbilt fulfills the first of these requirements completely. For a woman in her early thirties she has seen and done a surprising number of exciting things. Her childhood was spent in continental diplomatic circles. In her 'teens she experienced at first hand the fears and alarms of war-torn Europe. Before she was 20 she married Reginald Vanderbilt. She has known the world's great intimately, millionaires, artists, nobility. She has been engaged to His Serene Highness Prince Hohenlohe. She has had the late Edward VIII for a house guest. Charmed are the circles of "the international set" in which she moves —New York, Newport, the Riviera. Nevertheless, somehow the story of her life is not as interesting as it might be.

It may be assumed that her collaborator is responsible for some of the deficiencies of Mrs. Vanderbilt's prose style. Equally responsible, one may suppose, is her lack of formal education. One can pick up brilliant conversational ability, but English composition must be learned. One can't help being irritated by the slipshod way in which the narrative of "Without Prejudice" is handled. The thread of the story is constantly being broken by the introduction of irrelevant and trivial material. Mrs. Vanderbilt is at home with the anecdote. She has a flair for phrases. But sustained narrative is beyond her.

"Without Prejudice" may be recommended to those (and their number is legion) who delight in following the social doings of the great. Here are balls of fabulous magnificence, plumbing fixtures of gold, intimate vignettes of socialites, the amusing story of Prince Mike Romanoff, the divine right majesty of Hearst at home. There are some readers, however, who will feel that Mrs. Vanderbilt is undignified, that her emotional outpourings are as unregulated as her book's prose. It would be captious to object to the superficiality of the book. With justice, however, a reviewer may submit that it is ungrammatical and maudlin.

Picture of Life in Factory Town

WHERE THE WEAK GROW STRONG. By Eugene Armfield. (Covici-Friede, New York.)

"WHERE the Weak Grow Strong—a Picture," would be a more suitable title for Mr. Armfield's book.

As one might note down the successive pictures taken by a revolving camera with power to penetrate the walls of houses from one end of town to the other and back again, the writer slowly pieces together stories of the people living in the small town of Tuttle, N. C., during the year 1912.

That the author seems predisposed to report the smudgy side of life may well be owing to the fact that the greater part of the population of Tuttle lives on a low economic level which tends to preclude high standards of living. But of whomever the report is given, it is admirably clear.

Good as is his description of social conditions, including several instances of extreme racial prejudice, Mr. Armfield makes no attempt to give an account of social injustice, or to point a moral. He simply gives a picture of life in a small factory town, to take or leave as the reader may see fit.

Spirit of Woman in Warring South

THE WOMEN OF THE CONFEDERACY. By Francis B. Simkins and James W. Patton. (Garrett and Mossie, Inc., Richmond and New York.)

WHETHER or not the authors so designed it, two affirmations cry aloud from the pages of this book. One is that warfare cannot be "civilized," the other, that injustices in our national life today must be carefully studied and corrected before they lead us any farther along the pathway of armed strife.

Perhaps that is one justification for telling again the oft-repeated tale of the part played by the women of the Confederacy in the "War for Southern Independence." Another is the fact that numerous hitherto unpublished papers have been used in the compilation of this record, all of these, together with a multitude of other sources, being carefully listed in the bibliography, which is almost encyclopedic in extent. In addition, the historical value of the book is enhanced by 25 pages of citations of these sources in support of statements made.

Simple directness characterizes the story, which is told with restraint and a manifest desire to be fair to the invaders. Opening on the note of superb confidence (even, alas, of arrogance) felt at the beginning of the conflict, the whole scale of feminine activity and emotion is run, with overtones of extravagant gayety and undertones of anguish and tears.

Illustrating the high spirit of the women of the South are accounts of their work in managing plantations, helping in hospitals, where they often became matrons and sometimes even superintendents, supplying food and clothing for the troops and clerking in Government offices. They hunted out old looms and spinning wheels and showed the greatest ingenuity in devising substitutes for necessities which became more and more scarce as hostilities continued and the blockade tightened.

"An excellent lather was secured from boiling the root of the buckeye in flannel. Ropes were made from bear grass, sunflower stalks, and cotton; a paste which hardened into a durable putty was secured from roasted Spanish potatoes mixed with flour; and mucilage was manufactured from peach-tree gum mixed with potatoes, flour, or starch from ripening corn. Mattresses were stuffed with Spanish moss, leaves, or cat-tails."

Dancing and dining in Richmond and other cities where commands were stationed proved exhilarating to one contingent, while others reproached their lack of feeling, and some of their unfortunate sisters were roving the country as refugees or living in caves in besieged Vicksburg.

But gradually the mourning of the bereaved silences all other sounds, until the struggle is ended, and the women turn valiantly to face a new and very different life.

One Stood Firm in Confused World

JILL SOMERSET. By Alec Waugh. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

WRITTEN in the Galsworthy tradition, this finely drawn portrait of English family life tends to emphasize the growing importance of Alec Waugh as a serious novelist. He again gives evidence of a deep understanding of human instincts and emotions, matching the brilliance of his preceding novel, "The Balliols." His chronicle of the Somerset family is no shallow affair. He attacks their problems and indeed those of Britain as well, with characteristic thoroughness. Few books of recent years reveal the insight of "Jill Somerset."

Tracing the Somerset family from 1913, when Jill was 18, to the present day, he weaves an interesting pattern of a troubled era. Jill's problems were many, her emotions varied, yet through it all, she remained a quiet, determined, sort of person, making her own decisions and somehow or other coming through.

Just before the war she fell in love with Miles Eliot but was prevented from marrying him by their parents' insistence that they were both too young. In 1914 Miles applied for service, but was rejected. From then on he became a conscientious objector, and was finally interned for the duration of the war. Jill stood by him, realizing that she was not actually in love with him. It was this desire to "do the right thing" which characterized her. Later, she saw her family disintegrate around her. Her brother became a Fascist, one sister a Communist—the other little better than a harlot. Her father died and she met Grant Wilson, whom she could have loved, had she not preferred again to "do the right thing." Instead, she married Vincent Cross without loving him. When he proved unfaithful and Grant offered to marry her, she again refused.

It is through such a character, alone in its sturdiness, that the book gains its importance. Through all of their muddled lives in a muddled world, Jill alone, of all the Somersets, maintained the rational view. Such a story, reflecting the confused world as we know it, becomes powerful in its simplicity.

Nine Short Plays By Noel Coward

NOW arrived in New York after a successful year in London are Noel Coward's one-act plays, in which he and Gertrude Lawrence take principal roles. That they would prove delightful to Broadway patrons was a foregone conclusion. For if Broadway has a darling among the gentlemen of the theater, Coward is he.

The volume, containing the nine short plays of his current repertory, reveals him often at his best. In a preface, he states that all the plays were written specially for this new venture, that there was "no unworthy scuffling in cupboards and bureau drawers in search of forgotten manuscripts and no hurried refurbishing of old, discarded ideas." His artistic purpose he sets down as a desire to "reinstate the one-act play in its "rightful pride." He thinks it has an advantage over the longer work in that it "can sustain a mood without technical creaking or overpadding."

All this may be accepted at its face value, in view of Mr. Coward's standing in the theater and his reputation for adroit dramaturgy. His short plays seem fresh and new with the delights he usually has to offer. Many of the people he creates are those same urbane, super-civilized Britishers that he has made so charming before. But he departs here and there to introduce a vaudeville team in the "provinces" or the types that meet regularly in a railroad station.

His favorite subject is domestic disagreement, or "conjugal infelicity," as he calls it. His favorite method is to cut back to happier times and lead up, by as many as six scenes, to the present. He solves the difficulty with dawn in one case, with death in another, and with an overdose of sleeping tablets, desertion and a plain calling of quits. His pet hate is pink dresses for women, his particular whim to introduce song numbers.

The titles themselves are inviting. "We Were Dancing" deals with the irony of love on the spur of the moment and with a wife who would leave her husband in a minute. "The Astonished Heart" is about a psychiatrist who falls ill with one of his clinical ailments. "Red Slippers" is concerned with a vaudeville team, "Hands Across the Sea" with a hostess who cannot remember persons formerly her hosts. "Fumed Oak" is mere family bickering, "Shadow Play" sentimental reunion, "Ways and Means" a clever farce in which two house guests rob another. "Still Life" is perhaps the strongest of all the plays. "Family Album", in Victorian style, recalls that Coward wrote those delightful period musicals, "Bitter Street" and "Conversation Piece."

Grotesquely Morbid, Muddily Profound

MAIDEN CASTLE. By John Cowper Powys. (Simon & Schuster, New York.)

SOMEWHAT in the muddily profound John Cowper Powys manner, one might describe John Cowper Powys' most recent novel as a preoccupation with the unoccupiable. It is a tale of the damned, a philosophy of frustration. It is moody, dark and cruel. While it includes much that stands for true, it produces an effect essentially false. From it a doctor of sick souls might learn a good deal about Powys.

All of the characters are grotesques. The narrative is a mere device for putting them through their paces, for creating occasions for bardic vaporings on the powers of evil. The central figure is the son of a man not his mother's husband. He calls himself Dud No-man, for, although a widower, he never has been potent, as Powys takes great pains to insist. He takes a circus waif, Wizzie, herself of undetermined origin and the mother of an illegitimate child. They run into as curious an assortment of naturals as has yet been assembled within the covers of one book, all past youth, all unhappy, all bedeviled in one way or another. Among these is the Black Man of Glymes who turns out to be No-man's father. The Black Man has an idea he is the reincarnation of something or other through whom flows an elemental suffering force. Mai-Dun, or Maiden Castle, is a prehistoric earthwork outside Dorchester where the Black Man calls up the winds. The Black Man dies, Wizzie runs off to America, No-man takes up with the sympathetic but non-understanding widow of the Black Man in a union that may be peaceful because without desire.

Somewhere in all this is a parable—at least Powys and his publishers lead one so to believe, but any who are interested will have to try to figure it out for themselves. Space here does not permit speculation. It is a reasonable bet, however, that all who do will get different answers.

There can be no disputing about tastes. If Powys wanted to write such a book, as apparently he did, he ought to be satisfied; he has done his part. If, on the other hand, one chooses not to bother with it, that will be all right, too.

Pursued Himself Across Liberia

THERE are two journeys here, really, either of which alone would have been sufficiently interesting to justify the labor of the writing. This book is a record of the author's trip afoot across the republic of Liberia. But it is also, and perhaps primarily, the tale of his perilous trek into his own psychic wilderness. The two themes develop concurrently throughout the book, and interact until finally they blend and become one.

In its external aspect, "Journey Without Maps" is a narrative as vivid and dramatic as a good novel, for Mr. Greene is an artist, sensitive to impressions from the world about him. Liberia, Africa, the tropics, pressed their shape and peculiar character into the author's soul, and his book is a reflection of the changes that these effected.

As guides on the Liberian journey the author had two maps, both extremely inaccurate; but for the second and more important journey there were available no maps whatever. No satisfactory guides exist to lead one through the midnight regions of the mind. And it is these darkest parts that Mr. Greene explores. His object is to uncover the elemental soul stuff which is his in common with all the rest of humanity, to bore downwards until he reaches the universal bedrock of the soul. On that foundation, it would seem, something firm and indestructible might be built.

If it can be done, however, Mr. Greene will have to do it. His work is wholly personal; very interesting, but practically quite useless to anyone other than himself. He makes no general statements, and his introspection is as unself-conscious as one could wish. All his analyzing is given to us, living, incomplete, not always quite comprehensible, just as it came to him, in images and physical sensations.

For "Journey Without Maps" is not philosophical. Its author is an artist. He is interested more in the sensuous aspects of existence than in intellectual abstractions. Perhaps that is not a wise way to order one's life; but certainly it proves here to be one good way to write a book of travel.

The Authorized Life-Story Of a Pagan Soul

THE LIFE OF GEORGE MOORE. By Joseph Hone. (The Macmillan Company, New York.)

AS THE official biographer of George Moore, Joseph Hone has had access to quantities of private letters and documents and has been given the benefit of the reminiscences of Moore's family and others who knew him intimately. The result of all this research is a biography of unusual merit and interest.

George Moore, one of the most curious figures in literary history, is a study in contrasts and contradictions. His seeming stupidity when a boy drove his father and his teachers to despair. George hated lessons, could not master the rudiments of spelling and grammar, and preferred attending race meetings to studying. One day the youth discovered Shelley, and the world was changed for him. He became intellectual with a vengeance. He discovered painting, decided that he must be an artist, and, after some delay, reached Paris which was, of course, the goal of his desires. There he lived in startlingly furnished apartments and kept for pets a Persian cat and a python. He squandered money, cultivated the society of the impressionist painters and the livelier members of the nobility, wrote poetry which expressed his "pagan soul," and sought in all ways to live in a manner befitting a sophisticated Bohemian. Filled with affectations, he said of himself, "I am feminine, morbid, perverse. Above all perverse."

Suddenly all was changed. Troubles in Ireland forced the young esthete to go back to his estate. He realized that he could neither paint nor compose poetry, and discovered that the novel was the form of expression for which he had been searching. He went to London, practiced strict economy and worked diligently. Much influenced by Zola he produced "A Mummer's Wife," and later "Esther Waters," in which he applied the French naturalistic method to a description of English life.

Moore's horror at the Boer War drove him from England back to his native land where he became associated with Yeats and Martyn in directing the Irish Literary Theater. He was now violently pro-Irish and grew much interested in the people and their customs. "The Lake" and "The Untilled Field" show the intensity of this feeling.

However, this new-found patriotism did not survive Moore's antagonism to the priests. As a final gesture against the Roman Catholic Church he made a public avowal of Protestantism. Disillusioned with Ireland, he returned to London, where he remained until his death. There he finished that unique autobiography, "Hail and Farewell," and produced, among other works, "Heloise and Abelard" and "The Brook Kerith," novels classical in their restraint and polish.

Mr. Hone has told the facts of Moore's life without obtruding his own views or opinions upon matters. He has offered no psychoanalysis, despite the temptation offered by Moore's repeated boasting of his love affairs, adventures which always came to naught and whose very existence some doubted. As a result of this sympathetic but impersonal mode of treatment, Moore becomes in these pages a vital figure.

Desmond Shawe-Taylor, who has contributed the final chapter, a penetrating analysis of Moore's place in English literature, shows the many and varied influences which shaped his writings, and, in conclusion, predicts that Moore, like those other eccentrics, Lawrence Sterne, Jeremy Taylor and Thomas Browne, will have his own little niche among the immortals.

Ludwig's Plea for Slayer of Nazi

THE DAVOS MURDER. By Emil Ludwig; Translated by Eden and Cedar Paul. (The Viking Press, New York.)

WILHELM GUSTLOFF, German Nazi leader and organizer in Switzerland, was shot to death last February at Davos by a Jewish student from Yugoslavia, who declared that he acted to avenge the persecution of his people in Germany. The trial of this youth, David Frankfurter, began last Wednesday. This psychological study of the murder and the murderer by Emil Ludwig, exiled German historian, is hence of timely interest.

By tracing the career of the frail and sensitive young man, the writer makes plain how his horror over the Jews' sufferings in Germany at last became an obsession that moved him to kill the highest-ranking Nazi he could reach. Ludwig goes on to recount other murders of this type. Representatives of persecuted peoples have previously killed leaders among their tormentors, he points out, and the courts usually have freed the slayers. Finally, he suggests that the Swiss court acquit Frankfurter.

Ludwig's plea is a forceful one. He does not consider one point, however: that the slayer, by his act, helped bring about intensification of the Nazi campaign against the Jews. The Nazis, of course, have made a great issue of the crime, and acquittal of the killer may be expected to bring fresh atrocities in Germany. In any event, the fate of the misguided youth is properly a matter for the Swiss court, and pressure from either side is to be deplored.

They Should Have But They Didn't

FLORRIE, a music hall girl with ambition and a heart of gold, was only 18 when she married Guy Cabot, scion of an aristocratic family, and brought him back to "Pop" Farrell's beer parlor on Riverside drive. They didn't stay long, but went to Mr. Cabot's marble mansion and made an even shorter stay. Seven days and 12 hours after their return to "Pop's", Guy left her. Later, after Carol was born, Florrie started on her way upward. She started by building a mansion and giving it to Carol. It was Florrie's steadfast faith in the land that made her a prosperous and respected woman. Almost as steadfast as the land was Bill. He the one she should have married and didn't.

As soon as we get Florrie launched, we go back to Carol. It's the house that talks to Carol. She's a poet, not a business woman. It's the house that keeps her steady. "Tad" keeps her steady, too. She marries him, but wishes she hadn't. Julian is the one she should have married, and didn't.

After following Carol's unhappy marriage for a time, we start looking at her daughter Julie. It's a river that influences her. It winds through her life, making a saner woman of her. Jimmy's the one she should have married, and didn't.

After we witness Julie's desertion of an undeserving husband, we come back to Florrie. Florrie has lost everything, and there we are right back where we started from.

"Riverside Drive" is an unconvincing, mildly entertaining novel.

ACCORDING to reports received from 62 booksellers throughout the country, the books now most in demand stand as follows in the order of their popularity:

Douglas, 46; Drums Along the Mohawk, by Walter Edmonds, 44; Yang and Yin, by Alice Tisdale Hobart, 40; A Prayer For My Son, by Hugh Walpole, 23; Great Laughter, by Fannie Hurst, 17.

An Historic Murder And Some Others

THE MURDER OF SIR EDMUND GODFREY. By John Dickson Carr. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

DANGER IN THE DARK. By Mignon G. Eberhart. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

THE CONCRETE CASTLE MURDERS. By Francis Gerard. (Henry Holt & Co., New York.)

THE ANNIVERSARY MURDER. By Eden Philpotts. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

IT IS London, 1678. The morning sun shines palely on the straggling streets. Clumps of people stand about, talking excitedly of the disappearance of Sir Edmund Godfrey, magistrate, of the Jesuits and of the Popish Plot to overthrow the Government. A few days later the body of Sir Edmund Godfrey is found, but his murderer is not known to this day.

"The Murder of Sir Edmund Godfrey" is an attempt to reconstruct the historic crime in the way a detective story would do it. In addition to an analysis of the crime and the most plausible solution, there is a detailed description of the Popish Plot. The hapless Catholics suffered from the ravings of a pathological liar, Titus Oates, and the political ambition of Lord Shaftesbury. From the struggle between Charles II and Lord Shaftesbury arose two political parties—Whigs and Tories. It is an interesting and exciting period in English history, and the author somehow manages to make its many intrigues clear to his reader. His solution of the murder problem, although anti-climactic, is nevertheless reasonable and apparently justified by the facts as he writes them.

"Danger in the Dark," published serially in a woman's magazine, is another of Eberhart's love triangle mysteries, in which the hero and heroine are suspected of doing away with the villain, and love triumphs in the end. The plot is reminiscent of many others from the same author, but the novel contains fairly good character and action.

A combination of the American underworld and Scotland Yard makes "The Concrete Castle Murders" an *entertaining adventure story with lots of people killed. The pace is slowed down by an unnecessary and rather foolish love angle.

"The Anniversary Murder" is better as a psychological study than as a murder mystery. It is written in the first person and gives a reasonable and vivid description of a brilliant mind warped by an inferiority complex. It is a book for those who are more interested in the character of a murderer than in the solution of a crime mystery.

—Dorothy Hinds Spear.

A Born Crusader Self - Portrayed

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF G. K. CHESTERTON. (Sheed & Ward, New York.)

GILBERT KEITH CHESTERTON is a name familiar to everyone, but most readers would probably ask, "Just what was he?" Of this, he was never sure himself. His autobiography tells many things that he was, but more that he was not. He wrote murder mysteries and novels, but says of himself: "Considered as novels, they were not only not as good as a real novelist would have made them, but they were not as good as I might have made them myself if I had even been trying to be a real novelist. And among many more abject reasons for not being able to be a novelist, is the fact that I always have been and presumably always shall be a journalist."

In journalism he aligned himself with all idealistic causes. A born crusader, he usually chose the side of the minority and had the talent for making all opponents sound slightly weak-minded. He sought fundamental truth with ardor and determination. Starting his career of political strife as a Socialist, for, "at the time the only alternative to being a Socialist was not being a Socialist," he always had a Victorian strain and a vague yearning for the reactionary. Turning to the Liberal party out of admiration for some of its leaders, he soon found that "the general atmosphere of liberality was too illiberal to be endured. So I left the Liberal party and wrote for a Labor paper which turned ferociously pacifist when the war came; and since then I have been the gloomy and hated outcast you behold, cut off from the joys of all political parties."

The man was born with a sincere desire to be religious. Years of philosophical searching brought him to Catholicism, which filled his every demand.

The book begins as an orderly account of his childhood and boyhood, but becomes a record, not of the facts of his life, but of his convictions and impressions, with an occasional antic thrown in. He gives us public men and shows the dissimilarity between them and their reputations. He says it in his paradoxical style: "On almost every occasion when I have met somebody, I have met somebody else. That is, I have met a private man who was oddly different from the public man."

As a practical problem for philosophical living, he says that man must learn to enjoy enjoyment. An inspired enthusiast—that, in the final analysis, is what G. K. Chesterton was.

Three Recent Books On Social Problem

PROSPERITY THROUGH EMPLOYMENT: A JOB FOR EVERY MAN AND WOMAN WHO WANTS TO WORK. By Kent Ellsworth Keller. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

EBB AND FLOW IN TRADE UNIONISM. By Leo Wolman. (National Bureau of Economic Research, New York.)

ECONOMIC WELFARE. By Oscar Newfang. (Barnes & Noble, Inc., New York.)

CONGRESSMAN KELLER of Ava, Ill., who has represented the southernmost Illinois district since 1931, has written a book based on deep conviction. Certain in his own mind that there can be no security, let alone prosperity, until widespread unemployment is banished, he has devoted much of his time as a member of the House of Representatives to a study of the problem, to checking his views and conclusions with those of economists, political scientists and statisticians and to working the results of his thinking into an historical and philosophic whole.

The heart of this sincere Illinoisan's findings is that the only way out of our economic impasse is to put the unemployed millions to work on great public works projects. He reasons that public works alone are non-competitive with private industry and that only employment provided by them will not come into competition with men already in precarious jobs. But Mr. Keller would not accept just any project regardless of merit. The public works he has in mind must be "national improvements well-planned and efficiently executed."

Incidental to this main conclusion, the author offers a supplemental program for a national social and economic policy which calls for the prevention of child labor and the eradication from the business world of exploiters, profiteers and gamblers, among other things. Mr. Keller's writing has an epigrammatic quality, as is evidenced by such a sentence as this: "There can be no security to Government except in the economic security to men."

Volume 30 of the National Bureau of Economic Research Series by Dr. Wolman, a professor of economics at Columbia University, who has held posts on three New Deal labor boards, brings down to date the earlier "Growth of American Trade Unions: 1880-1923." Filled with charts and tables, it recounts the course of trade unionism before and after NRA. The author does not pass on the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. fight, but he does say that "many students see in the proposed changes a fundamental and essential reform."

While American unions still retain the essential features of free and uncontrolled unionism, this careful student of labor problems thinks that the unfolding of present policies of industrial regulation and collective bargaining may well expose unions in this country, as it has elsewhere, to government regulation of their policies and acts.

Looking forward to a time when there will be economic security for every family, Oscar Newfang proposes the abolition of the wage system and the substitution of a partnership arrangement. He contends that this would eliminate unemployment, strikes and lockouts, give flexibility to business and make for a freer and more serviceable world economy. He would not confine his Utopia to the United States but make it world wide by developing the League of Nations into a "world federation."

—Irving Dilliard.

For Keats Lovers

A WALK AFTER JOHN KEATS. By Nelson S. Bushnell. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

KEATS was 22 when, with his friend Charles Brown, he went on a walking tour up the west coast of England and Scotland. The tour was not remarkable in itself and it seems to have had small effect on his poetry, but to all students and lovers of Keats nothing that occurred in his brief lifetime can be unimportant, and this excursion preserves a melancholy interest for taking place at that period when his health and prospects were bright. Endymion had just been published, the literary critics had not begun their violent attack, and Keats had yet to meet Fanny Brawne and experience the love affair that was to engulf him. He could not know that in less than three years he would die in Rome of tuberculosis.

The book at hand describes a literary pilgrimage over the same route, made by an American college professor who kept faithfully to the old roads, the inns and even the side excursions which marked the poet's journey. It is the story of his own adventures on the road. The reader learns that the weather in Western England has not improved since Keats' time, that the cottage continues to open its door to the wayfarer, and that the Highland diet is still laid on the stern foundation of oatmeal and whisky.

A map is included, and the author interrupts his own account with extracts from Keats' letters, in which the poet describes that same day's journey. It is these extracts, ardent and hastily written, that were his guide. —D. W. Parks.

Sees in Shelley a Great Thinker

THE MAGIC PLANT. By Carl Grabo. (The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill.)

IT is Carl Grabo's contention that Shelley's greatest powers were not lyrical but intellectual, and that the world in dubbing him "Ariel", "the mad Shelley" and "the Snake" is blindly romantic. The comparative evaluation of the poet's contribution to the separate fields of philosophy and poetry he must necessarily leave to the reader, but he can, and most effectively does, prove the poet to have evolved out of, and essentially to have remained, a philosopher and reformer.

As side issues Grabo attacks Shelley's biographers and, without dwelling on the events of his life, except as they affect the history of his thought, effectively defends the poet's domestic life. Certainly his is a far more creditable picture of the poet than anyone else has offered.

Roughly, the lines of Shelley's mental development traced by Grabo are from materialism to Platonism; from rationalism to the neo-Platonic theory of intuition as the means of divining ultimate truth; from atheism to Pantheism and an acceptance of the ethical teachings of Jesus; from a preoccupation with reform propaganda to metaphysics; from ebullient optimism to aching disillusionment. His mature philosophy, says Grabo, is more Platonic than anything else, stressing Love as the instrument by which the will is freed.

Anyone reading this masterly analysis of Shelley's mental history must agree that he was indeed far in advance of his time. He saw as clearly as if he had descended full-grown from a saner planet into the midst of the poverty and tyranny of his time. He thought thoroughly and painfully, and his political theories were courageously original. His philosophy, compounded as it is of many schools of thought, seems to contribute little that may be called new. But granting him to be a thinker—even a great one—and a great reformer, he still will remain, for most people, a greater poet. "To a Skylark" is dearer to the world than "Speculations on Metaphysics."

To admire him more as a poet is not, however, to decry his importance as reformer and philosopher. Shelley, so unfortunate in his friends and his biographers, has at last a champion of his ideas who, like the wind the poet invoked, should aid in scattering his

". . . dead thoughts over the universe

—Sophia Fox Kenamore.

History of France In 16th Century

BIOGRAPHY OF A FAMILY. By Milton Waldman. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

"BIOGRAPHY OF A FAMILY" is the history of France in the confused sixteenth century, with its quick overturn of Kings and the numerous ups and downs of its rival families, the Bourbons, the Guises, the Montmorencies, the Chattilons. At the end of that century the throne of France passed from the Valois, who had held it for about 250 years, to the Bourbons.

The family to which the title of Mr. Waldman's book refers was that founded by Henry II, King of France from 1547 to 1559, and his Queen, Catherine de Medici. There were 10 children. Three died in infancy, all except one were dead at 38, one was a cripple, three were successively Kings of France, one became Queen of France, and another was the wife of Philip II, King of Spain. One was the first husband of Mary Stuart, Queen of Scotland. Two were proposed as consorts of Queen Elizabeth of England, who was some twenty years their senior.

Catherine de Medici was the real ruler of France during a great part of the reigns of her three sons, Francis II, Charles IX, and Henry III. Far from a lovely character, she was interested first of all in maintaining her own power, and then in working for the welfare of her numerous children. The welfare of France came as a third interest. The welfare of the people in general counted for little, if anything, with her. Unscrupulous, she used the feuds of the nobles to further her own purposes, and was responsible for the Massacre of St. Bartholomew in 1572.

Probably the most interesting of Catherine's offspring was her youngest daughter, Marguerite de Valois, who married her clownish cousin, Henry of Navarre, later the famous Henry IV, first Bourbon King of France. She is not to be confused with her great-aunt, also Marguerite de Valois, grandmother of Henry of Navarre and author of the "Heptameron." The younger Marguerite's vivacity, devilry and intrigue made her quite worthy to bear the name of her illustrious, albeit notorious, ancestress.

Mr. Waldman's study of sixteenth-century France—of its absolutism, its religious difficulties, its turmoil and swashbuckling, its superstition—is extraordinarily vivid, and reads in places almost like fiction.

—Virginia Hilliker.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PAGE 6B — ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 13, 1936.

George White's 'Scandals' Bring Music to Theater

Willie, Eugene Howard and Helen Morgan Starred in Revue Opening at the American Tonight—First of Its Type in Two Years.

ST. LOUIS' first musical show of the season and first revue in nearly two years arrives at the American Theater tonight, for a week's engagement. Starred in this edition of George White's "Scandals" are Willie and Eugene Howard and Helen Morgan, with Earl Oxford, George Dewey Washington, the Stanley Twins, Sam, Ted and Ray, Richard Lane, Estelle Jayne, Gloria Rich and Fred Manatt among the headliners.

The show had a run of 110 performances on Broadway last season, from Dec. 25 to March 28, with most of the same principals, and opened a successful Chicago run last June. With 75 show girls in the cast, the full personnel runs to a hundred persons. The revue is presented in two acts and 35 scenes.

Responsible for the production, in addition to White himself, are Jack Yellen and Ray Henderson, who wrote the music and lyrics; William K. Wells, who helped White with the sketches; Russell Patterson, who designed the settings, and Russell Markert, who staged the dances.

White, who has brought forth two "Scandals" shows on the screen, has had 20 successful stage musicals, beginning in 1919. Having worked as bootblack, stable boy, jockey, telegraph messenger and dancer in vaudeville, he decided, in 1919, to tackle the role of producer. He was then only 25 years old and had only $12,000 to invest in a show, but rounded up Ann Pennington, Moran and Mack, Lou Holtz, Lester Allen and himself as principals, and set to work. Broadway called the show a "flop," but he rewrote the entire book, kept the George Gershwin music and made a hit out of it.

During rehearsals, Florenz Ziegfeld sent his dance director, Ned Wayburn, to find what White was up to and the meeting of Wayburn and White in the lobby of the Astor Hotel gave rise to one of the best-known stories of the theater.

Convinced that White was in earnest, Wayburn said, "Ziegfeld will give you $5000 a week for yourself and Ann Pennington if you close your show." White's reply was, "You tell Ziegfeld I'll give him $3000 a week for himself and Billie Burke if he closes his own show." With that he went ahead to becoming Ziegfeld's rival as a producer.

HELEN JEROME'S adaptation of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice" will be the next attraction at the American, opening on Monday night, Dec. 28, for a week's engagement, including three matinees, one on New Year's day. The cast is headed by Muriel Kirkland, Eugenie Rawls, Helen Strickland, Esther Mitchell and Lowell Gilmore.

Concerned with romantic matchmaking, the chief occupation of English mothers with marriageable daughters in the early nineteenth century, "Pride and Prejudice," is a keenly ironical comedy centering about Mrs. Bennet and her five daughters. The play has already been bought for movie production and will star Norma Shearer.

With the arrival of "Pride and Prejudice," the American will have had as many attractions this year as it had up to March 1 last season. The number of Broadway attractions taking the road, moreover, forecasts an equal activity after Jan. 1, and the good weeks enjoyed by "End of Summer," "Night of January 16," "Boy Meets Girl" and "First Lady" ought to make St. Louis bookings inviting for any shows on tour.

The brightest prospect for early January is Nazimova's return in Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" and "Ghosts." "Hedda Gabler" is a recent revival which drew big houses on Broadway. "Ghosts" was played here last season.

The Theater Guild has sent out notices of the country-wide tour for the Lunt-Fontanne combination in the Pulitzer Prize play, "Idiot's Delight," which is going strong after 250 performances on Broadway but which will be closed to meet subscription obligations in various other cities.

Leslie Howard's "Hamlet" has taken to the road, the new "Ziegfeld Follies" opens in Chicago at Christmas, to come to St. Louis after the run there, "Leaning on Letty," which Charlotte Greenwood has found popular in the West, is in Chicago now, with St. Louis slated later. "Dead End," "Call It A Day" and "Children's Hour" are others of the country's road shows which seem destined for a local view.

Interesting Broadway now are Paul Green's musical comedy-drama, "Johnny Johnson," presented by the Group Theater, a propaganda play mocking the heroics of war. Johnny Johnson, a peace-loving stone-cutter, is carried away by the Woodrow Wilson slogan of "War to End War," enlists, makes monkeys of his superiors, is sent home as a hopeless victim of "peace monomania," and finally becomes a hawker of peace toys on the sidewalks. Russell Collins plays the lead, with Morris Carnovsky, formerly of St. Louis, in a comedy role as a pompous psychiatrist.

Another notable piece is "Two Hundred Were Chosen," whose characters are farmers and lumber-jacks in the Government settlement projects in Alaska.

Tansman to Be Soloist, Symphony To Play His Works

ALEXANDRE TANSMAN, eminent Polish composer, pianist and conductor who appeared with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra during the 1932-33 season and whose works have been played by the orchestra many times, returns for the concerts on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, at the Municipal Auditorium Opera House.

As piano soloist with the orchestra, Tansman will offer the American premiere of his Concertino for Piano and Orchestra. The program, arranged and conducted by Vladimir Golschmann, will include also the world premiere of Tansman's Adagio for String Orchestra and Tansman's orchestration of Bach's Fugue in D minor. Brahms' First Symphony, in C minor, will close the concerts.

Tansman, whose symphonic works and chamber music have been played throughout the world for nearly 20 years, is now engaged in his fourth American tour, having made his debut in this country with the Boston Symphony in 1927. He recently completed a world tour, on which he received a decoration from the Emperor of Japan for his musical achievements.

The 39-year-old musician began composing when he was 9 years old. His initial composition to be heard in public was "Symphonic Serenade," for strings, written at the age of 15. In 1919 he was awarded not only the Grand Prix de Cologne for musical compositions, but also won second and third prizes with anonymous entries. Before he was 22 Tansman had composed several symphonic works, chamber music and piano pieces. In 1920 he moved to Paris and there developed under the joint influence of Stravinsky, Ravel and other contemporary masters. Today he is ranked as one of the outstanding and most original figures of the contemporary musical movements.

GOLSCHMANN and Tansman have been friends for many years, and the St. Louis Symphony director was one of the first conductors to introduce Tansman's orchestral works in Europe and America. Other Tansman works that Golschmann has given their world premieres with the local orchestra are "Tryptique for String Orchestra" and "Deux Moments Symphonique."

Tansman wrote his Concertino in Florence and Paris in 1931 and orchestrated it in the Balearic Islands the same year. With the composer at the piano, it had its first performance anywhere by the Philharmonic Orchestra at Rotterdam, Holland. Tansman since has played it with symphonic organizations at Amsterdam, The Hague, Paris, Brussels and Warsaw. The work is in three movements, Toccata, Intermezzo and Rondo. The second movement is also known as Chopiniana because of its resemblance to Chopin's style.

The Adagio, a characteristic Tansman piece, was composed last summer especially for Golschmann, to whom it is dedicated. Last year the St. Louis orchestra gave the first world performance of Tansman's orchestration of the Toccata of Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D Minor. Tansman recently completed the Fugue arrangement and the orchestra now will present the entire Bach work.

With Christmas falling on Friday, the afternoon symphony concert for next week will be given instead on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 27, at 3 o'clock. The Saturday night date will stand. Ruth Slenczynski, 11-year-old pianist, will make her St. Louis debut, playing Saint-Saens' Piano Concerto No. 2 in G Minor. The orchestra will offer the first St. Louis performance of Burnet C. Tuthill's "Bethlehem," and Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony.

The complete program for this week:

Eleanor Powell Proves She Is 'Born to Dance'

By Colvin McPherson.

NEVER much out of the public eye since she made "Broadway Melody of 1936," Miss Eleanor Powell, taps, teeth and all, comes back to gladden the heart this week at Loew's. In the passage of time, hurried by the torrential output of Hollywood, many movie-goers may have forgotten what a scintillating artist Miss Powell is. "Born to Dance" is proof anew.

If the new musical does not top "Broadway Melody of 1936," it is still grand-scale stuff. It is something like "Follow the Fleet," perhaps, if we can count Miss Powell the equal of Fred Astaire, subtract Ginger Rogers, add Una Merkel and Buddy Ebsen, subtract Harriet Hilliard, add Frances Langford, swap Irving Berlin music for Cole Porter compositions and build a battleship production number six or seven times the size of the scow entertainment of "Follow the Fleet." Things are bigger and funnier, but the background's still nautical.

A submarine crew comes home to New York, city wherein Alan Dinehart is readying, as they say, a new musical show starring Virginia Bruce. Into the city has come, too, a country maiden named Powell with a dream of dancing her way to the top. The meeting of Miss Powell and James Stewart, subjects of the romantic experiment, takes place at the Lonely Hearts Club, which looks like a good place for such research. Una Merkel is desk clerk and house mother at the Lonely Hearts Club, Sid Silvers is her long-lost husband, Buddy Ebsen a torpedo-polisher, Raymond Walburn captain of the undersea vessel. Miss Bruce goes romantic over Stewart, for headlines in the papers, Eleanor and James are thereby kept apart during rehearsals and Eleanor gets the call on opening night, replacing Miss Bruce, who has become angry.

Continuity isn't smooth but a genial mood pervades the whole film. Best scenes, aside from Miss Powell's dances, are those where the entire crew leaps overboard to save Miss Bruce's Pekingese, where Reginald Gardiner, as a policeman in Central Park, conducts a phantom orchestra and where Georges and Jalna do a ballroom dance. One of the more permanent features of "Born to Dance" is a comedy song, "Hey, Babe, Hey." "I've Got You Under My Skin," recalling Porter's "Night and Day," is already a good number on the radio and I should not be surprised if the three-cheers anthem, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," became a hit after the plugging it gets in the finale.

Robert Benchley, lecturing on the arts of a detective, and Donald Duck's trials on moving-day make a comedy short subject program.

Polo Joe.

AS MOVIES go, the Joe E. Brown, comedy, "Polo Joe," at the Fox is in the enjoyable group. Joe's main accomplishment is to add a sneeze to that Tarzan yell of his. He is a hay fever sufferer, a kind of second-stage victim who begins his anguish at the sight of a horse. In "Polo Joe," he has to be around the hay-burners all the time in order to win the girl. Hence comedy, leading to the great day on which Joe, a novice, fastens himself on to a horse by means of an inflated tire tube and plays a dazzling game. In between meetings with horses, Joe sings Chinese songs and hops spoons into tumblers in best vaudeville manner.

"The Luckiest Girl in the World," on the same program, sends an heiress, Jane Wyatt, to live in a New York rooming-house, to prove some point or other, and has her meet a poor but well-bred young man, Louis Hayward, with whom she falls in love. It's decidedly small celluloid.

For timeliness, however, the Fox scores a big point in the showing of a 57-minute review of Edward's career as Prince of Wales. Done some time ago in the name of charity, the film includes many pictures from Prince Edwards' own collection. Still pictures detail his boyhood, with movies from 1911 on. Covering his tours to South America, Australia, Africa, Japan and the United States, the film is a fair world travelogue even without the Prince.

Make Way for a Lady.

ANNE SHIRLEY is pretty well set in the public mind as "Anne of Green Gables" so "Make Way for a Lady" adds nothing to that impression. As daughter of Herbert Marshall, a book publisher, she pretends to be grown-up, decides to sacrifice herself to get him a second wife, and ends up with giving that job to Gertrude Michael, who has been second wife before and seems destined to that place in the lineup for the future. Marshall just looks wise.

It is Ben Bernie, and not a picture, however, which leads the public to the Ambassador this week. The "Old (and getting older) Maestro" puts on the smoothest unit entertainment the Ambassador has had under its present policy. Among his Lads are Colonel Manny Prager, Ray Hendricks, Bill Wilson, Joey Rardin, Danny Meehan and the Four Playboys, a thoroughly exuberant outfit. The lady in the party is Miss Dawn O'Day, or at least that is the name she uses. It isn't such a bad one. Anne Shirley herself used it for several pictures before she made "Anne of Green Gables."

Love in Exile.

A BRITISH film, "Love in Exile," in which Clive Brook is driven from the throne of some stiffly formal country and returns to make his girl friend, Helen Vinson, queen, comes opportunely to the Missouri. It offers few similarities to the happenings in Britain in the last week, and is not very exciting or romantic. Clive Brook acts as if the entire dignity of monarchy depended on him personally, Miss Vinson does mysterious things which we may presume are always for good, and the millionaire business man who has Brook fired from the job in order to get oil concessions is a shadowy sort of person, not well-identified with any country, although presumably American, since he is a millionaire.

Regis VI, after leaving his realm, loafs around on the Riviera, attended by his faithful man-servant and waits the time to start the machinery of restoration. It is a great stunt he pulls, to fly his own plane to the palace grounds and dash in the back door. Then, coming from behind a curtain in a way that all budding dramatists like to have heroes come in palace thrillers, he takes the dictator by surprise and that's that. The dictator, incidentally, has been so busy in Regis' absence that he has not had time to leave his desk or take off his hat.

"Easy to Take," the Missouri's other feature, puts John Howard on the radio as "Uncle Roddy," the kiddies' delight. He takes over the administration of an estate, finds there isn't any, keeps the girl he has met, nevertheless. One delightful moment where a freckle-faced youngster sings "Love in Bloom" off-key.

The St. Louis, with "Charge of the Light Brigade" in second-run and an ordinary stage show, has a first-run feature, "Murder With Pictures." Lew Ayres, newspaper photographer, Gail Patrick, Onslow Stevens and others get involved in something about a killing, oil stocks and gang activity. Murder isn't as simple as it once was.

At the Shubert, our old friend, "One Night of Love," dimmed a little and scratched from usage but even now a fancy synthesis of the elements of entertainment. A first-run feature, "Easy Money," is about a band of racketeers who promote fake accident claims against the insurance companies. Aside from being criminal, these racketeers are downright mean. They don't play fair, they mislead innocent people, they steal ideas from St. Louis, or so they say. But our hero, Onslow Stevens catches them red-handed in an interior decorating shop which they use as one of their blinds. We breathe easier.

Special Show at Little Theater.

A special performance of "The Shoemeker's Holiday," for college and high school students, will be presented at the Litte Theater on Wednesday evening, closing the first section of Little Theater repertory for this season. The next play, Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset," now being cast by Director F. Cowles Strickland, will open on Thursday, Jan. 28, to continue through Feb. 10.

Eddie Garr Signs Movie Contract.

Eddie Garr, comedian who had the leading role in "A Connecticut Yankee" at Municipal Opera last summer, has signed a movie contract and tentatively has been assigned to the new musical, "Hippodrome."

Bette Davis, Back Home, Prefers American Films

Actress Who Lost $50,000 in Fight to Get Out of Hollywood Contract and Make English Pictures Ready to Start Work Again

By H. H. Niemeyer.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 12.

EIGHTEEN pounds and $50,000 lighter than when she shook the dust of Warner Brothers' studio from her little feet "never to return again," Bette Davis is back on that lot and preparing to make "Marked Woman." The 18 pounds — tonnage, not sterling—she lost in worrying over her English lawsuit with the Warner boys in trying to get out of her Hollywood contract. The 50 grand is what it cost her in Hollywood dollars to lose the legal battle. We saw her this week when she made her first reappearance on her old home grounds and she looks better despite all her troubles than she ever did before. She says she is going to throw herself into her coming picture just as though there had been no unpleasantness with her bosses and there are rumors if "Marked Woman" is a real hit that the Warner boys will tack enough bonus onto her regular salary to make up what she spent in fighting them.

Be that as it may, Bette would be foolish to hurt her standing with the fans by turning in a lackadaisical performance. Other stars have tried that in the past and found themselves out of favor with the cash customers who, after all, make, and break, stars practically overnight.

Miss Davis is not so sure that she would have liked working in British films, anyway, although the money return would have been very sweet. "English pictures are still far behind the Hollywood product," she said over the lunch table. "That's true in almost every way. Of course, over here we see only the very best of the British movies, which gives us the impression that English production has reached a high level. But in England, where the 'run of the mill' output of the studios is released the home product is not highly regarded by the audiences.

"The American-made picture is still the favorite with them. But not the gangster type. They are frankly mystified when our screen toughs start talking. I have had English people tell me that they didn't understand a word of such pictures." When the gangster cycle was in full bloom a lot of Britishers were convinced, says Bette, that American speech was all "dem, dese and dose."

IN another studio lunchroom, Paramount this week, we ran into tiny Marguerite Clark, who, from 1916 to 1919 was the darling of the screen the world over. Miss Clark is probably the only movie star who gave up her career when she was at her peak, retired and stayed retired. In 1918 she married Harry P. Williams, a Southern lumberman of wealth, but her movie contract with Adolph Zukor had a year to run and she lived up to it without any dodging. Then she quit and she had never been in Hollywood nor a movie studio until she came back here the other day to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner given in Zukor's honor.

Marguerite Clark's screen career lasted just four years, a year less than the average popularity life of a star. She has almost forgotten about her big days in the films. The only actors she could name who were her leading men were Richard Barthelmess and Tommy Meighan. Even the names of most of her pictures escape her now, although she does recall "Prunella" and "Seven Swans." There are a lot of the fans of 18 or so years ago who could supply her with quite a list.

Miss Clark is not coming back into the films. That's certain. Her husband, who owned, among other things, the Wedell-Williams Air Line, was killed in a plane accident last May and she returned to her home in Louisiana yesterday to sell her interest in the business to Eddie Rickenbacker of the Eastern Air Lines. This, she thinks, was her last visit to Hollywood.

ROMPING AROUND HOLLYWOOD—When Katharine Hepburn, who is having another fling at the stage with "Jane Eyre" in New York, gets through with that engagement, she will return to Hollywood to make "Bridge in the Sky" . . . Charlie Ruggles, borrowed by Emanuel Cohen for "Mind Your Own Business," is back at Paramount for the star role in "Tightwad." Mary Carlisle will be his leading woman . . . M-G-M doesn't think very much of Puccini as a composer, for when the studio makes "Girl of the Golden West", with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy as stars, your old friend, Sigmund Romberg, will supply a new score, or at least the greater part of one . . . Billie Burke is taking music lessons. She will sing "Kathleen Mavourneen" in "Parnell". . . . William S. Hart, former two-gun man of the screen, who has stuck to his determination to retire, is weakening to extent of becoming a radio performer. He will make his air bow on Dec. 28. . . . Irving Berlin's next film musical will be called "Alexander's Rag Time Band" with that old tune of his furnishing the background for the score.

Barnstormers in Melodrama.

A revival of "The Drunkard," a melodrama, will take place at the Barn Theater, on the Westborough Country Club grounds, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, under sponsorship of the Barnstormers, new non-professional group.

Movies Change Speech College Professor Says

Motion pictures are helping to lead the American public away from monotony in speech, according to Prof. Clarence Simons, director of graduate studies in speech at Northwestern University, who is now in Hollywood studying screen usages.

He named Gary Cooper as one of the screen's best examples in use of good, unaffected American pronunciation and praised also Sir Guy Standing, Norma Shearer, Charles Laughton, Gale Sondergaard, Lionel Barrymore, Marlene Dietrich, Carole Lombard, Katharine Hepburn, Irene Dunne and Claudette Colbert for their diction.

"I have been impressed by the way strong Hollywood personalities place their stamp on the speech of college students," Prof. Simons said. "Without entering a motion picture theater, I am able to tell who the reigning favorite is by the manner of speech I hear on the campus and in the classroom."

INQUIRIES COME FROM OUT OF TOWN

Rubber Interests Said to Be Looking at Former Plant of Bridge & Beach Manufacturing Co.

By Berry Moore

Inquiries, with resultant offers, for various buildings and plants in the industrial and commercial centers, featured the week in realty. Negotiations are being prosecuted in several instances, manifestly, with a view to acquisition before the close of the year. The prospective purchasers, or lessees, include several large out-of-town concerns, with belated plans for locating in St. Louis, it was stated.

An unusual number of leases and purchases of buildings in these centers, thrown on the market as a result of the depression, have been recorded during the year. Absorption of space in the downtown and uptown centers also has been a feature.

Plant Focusing Attention.

The former extensive plant of the Bridge & Beach Manufacturing Co., at the northeast corner of North Union boulevard and Geraldine avenue, in what is known as the General Motors district, is said to

Nine Acres and 12-Room Residence—Mrs. Donald Scott Sharpe's Place Bought By Herman E. Nelson

Harry Lesser, president of the Lesser Cotton Co., has acquired the residence of Mrs. Louis Cella, with 9½ acres of ground on Cella road, south of the St. Louis Country Club grounds. Negotiations in this connection were closed last week, as was told in the Post-Dispatch.

The two-story brick structure has 12 rooms and three baths, and is on a sumptuous scale. The interior of the house is to be reconditioned.

The residence is grouped with the pretentious homes of Fred Z. Solomon, vice president of the May Department Stores Co.; I. D. Kline, president of Kline's Inc., the former having purchased the residence of Sam Plant, and the latter that of J. Wooster Lambert.

The 9½-acre site was part of a 35-acre tract purchased by the late Louis Cella at a compartively low price in 1910. It adjoins the Clayton electric line on the south and the St. Louis Country Club grounds on the north.

Mrs. Cella was represented by Cornet & Zeibig in the present transaction. The Arthur Goldman Realty Co. acted for the purchaser.

Geyer Road Purchase.

Hunting Hill, the former residence of Mrs. Donald Scott Sharpe in Countryside on Geyer road south of Clayton road in St. Louis County, has been acquired by Herman E. Nelson, president of Hydrox Ice Cream Co., a branch of National Dairies. The site comprises about three acres. W. B. Shelp & Co. handled the transaction.

The house is Colonial in design, with a porch extending across the entire front of the house. The first floor consists of a reception hall, living room 20 by 30 feet opening onto a screened porch, dining room with connecting breakfast room, service and butler's pantry. There are four master bedrooms and two baths on the second floor. The servant's wing contains two rooms and bath.

The doors on the first floor, taken from a tavern at Ste. Genevieve, Mo., are more than 100 years old. The hardware, which is handmade, was acquired in Virginia and Maryland. There is a large courtyard with stable with trophy room.

Hedge of Evergreens.

The house was constructed from plans drawn by Maritz-Young & Dusard, architects. Earl Kirby was the contractor. Plans are being made for enlarging the home.

Negotiations have been closed through Albert T. Terry Son & Co. for handsome residences in Briar Cliff on the Ladue road, but details are withheld pending execution of final papers.

PRIVATE CONSTRUCTION LEADS PUBLIC WORKS

Sixth Time This Year Says Dodge Corporation Report for November.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—For the sixth time this year, the last three in consecutive months, the volume of private construction exceeded the total for public projects, F. W. Dodge Corporation said in reporting today the figures for November.

The total was $208,204,200 for the 37 eastern states covering both public and private jobs, against $188,115,000 for November, 1935, and $225,767,900 for October this year.

Of the November, 1936, total about 58 per cent represented private projects, the remainder being public. For November, 1935, private construction accounted for less than 40 per cent of the total.

Residential building amounted to $68,440,700, compared with $39,695,200 for November, 1935, and $79,664,200 the preceding month. Nonresidential building was $65,895,300 against $68,080,300 for November last year and $79,071,300 in October, 1936.

Heavy engineering projects undertaken during November amounted to $73,868,200 against $80,339,500 for November, 1935, and $67,032,400 last month.

Construction started during the first 11 months of 1936 amounted to $2,475,600,300 compared with $1,580,408,400 for the corresponding period of 1935. Of the 1936 cumulative total, $736,136,500 was for residential building; $880,303,700 for non-residential building; while the remainder went for heavy engineering projects. For residential building the improvement over 1935 now stands at 70 per cent while for non-residential building the gain is almost 60 per cent.

FHA BUSINESS FOR 1936 PLACED AT $700,000,000

Represents Increase of 70 Per Cent Over That of 1935 — Mortgage Insurance Swells Volume.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 12.—The Federal Housing Administration will close the year with approximately $700,000,000 in new business on its books for 1936, according to figures made public today by Administrator Stewart McDonald.

This represents an increase in total business of about 70 per cent over 1935, due entirely to mutual mortgage insurance, the permanent part of the program. The volume of mortgage insurance in 1936 will be more than two and one-half times that of 1935.

Since it began operations in 1934, the Federal Housing Administration had transacted a total volume of business of $1,125,839,240 up to December 1, 1936. This includes home mortgages accepted for insurance, modernization and repair notes insured and commitments on large scale housing projects. This includes home mortgages in process, amounting to $70,411,046, and large-scale housing projects examined but not accepted for insurance.

Two Billion for Modernization.

In addition, it is estimated that the program of the Federal Housing Administration has generated over two billion dollars worth of modernization and repair work, which does not show in its own records. Careful check-ups have disclosed that for every dollar of repair work insured by the Federal Housing Administration approximately $4 have been spent on jobs paid for in cassh or by other financing methods.

The Federal Housing Administration itself lends no money. The business on its books represents private capital supplied by banks and other financial institutions. The entire operating cost of the Housing Administration to the national Government from its beginning up to Dec. 1 has been $22,619,065. This does not include insurance claims paid to lending institutions on defaulted modernization and repair notes, which are paid for from a separate insurance fund established by the National Housing Act. Up to Dec. 1, these insurance claims, less collections, amounted to $5,293,714.

The major part of the expenditure for operations was used to carry out the modernization and repair program under Title 1. Much of the remainder was devoted to laying the foundation for the insured mortgage system.

Revenue is now coming into the Federal Housing Administration through mortgage insurance premiums and valuation fees at the rate of around $500,000 a month. This will increase as the volume of business grows.

Insurance Fund, $15,000,000.

The Housing Administration's mutual mortgage insurance fund in the Treasury now stands at over $15,000,000. This fund is available for the payment of possible net losses under the Insured Mortgage System. Of this amount, $10,000,000 was supplied by Congress as an original revolving fund and the remainder has been built up through the accumulation of premiums, valuation fees and other earnings. By July 1, 1937, the fund should exceed $20,000,000.

"Our gross business since we began operations total $1,125,839,240 up to Dec. 1, 1936," said Administrator McDonald, "and our operating net expenditures have been $22,619,065.

PROPERTY FOR BUSINESS USE IN MORE DEMAND

be focusing the attention of large rubber manufacturing interests. As reported, representatives of these interests have been in St. Louis for an inspection of the property, which is listed with the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. Inquiries have also been received from other out-of-town sources, it was stated.

An offer at an undisclosed price was recently submitted for the Bridge & Beach plant by Aaron Fisher, purchasing agent for the Universal Match Co., with offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building. The offer was rejected by the mortgage bondholders at a special meeting held to consider it. It was the best offer made for the plant since the rally in values of property in the industrial field, it was stated.

Title to the property is vested in the Union Boulevard Holding Corporation, formed by mortgage bondholders who had acquired it under a $600,000 deed of trust, which had been reduced to $481,000.

Group Comprises 14 Units.

The plant, comprises a group of 14 buildings, including three major and 11 auxiliary units. The site embraces 8½ acres, with an extensive frontage on the Terminal Railway. The plant was built in 1921 by the Bridge & Beach Co., manufacturer of stoves, furnaces, etc., at an announced cost of $1,300,000, including the cost of the site.

The Bridge & Beach plant is now confined to the Brown avenue unit. Occupancy is under a lease subject to cancellation. Prior to the sale for the property under the Bridge & Beach plant embraced the entire 14 buildings. The Chevrolet Motor Corporation occupies the Union boulevard building, the major unit, comprising three floors, with 90,720 square feet of floor space, under a lease with a cancellation clause. The space is used for the storage of Chevrolet parts for replacements in the St. Louis territory.

Olive Street Site Conveyed.

Title to the southwest corner of Olive and Sixteenth streets has been acquired by John S. Swift, who had concluded negotiations for it several weeks ago, through Thomas F. Stephens, manager of the real estate department of the First National Bank. The site, having a front of 153 feet on Olive and 69 feet on Sixteenth, was purchased, with plans for five-story fireproof structure, designed for John S. Swift, Inc., a printing concern occupying quarters in a seven-story building at 105 South Seventh street.

The corner was owned by the Loop Realty Co., a holding company of the Franklin American Co., now being liquidated through the First National Bank. The Loop company, of which C. Leroy Saeger is the acting president, had acquired the Olive street corner in 1934 from the Sidney Realty Co., of which Sidney Shoenberg is president, in a trade engineered by the Henry R. Weisel Co. The old building formerly occupying the Olive street corner were razed as of negligible value. The present transactions were handled by Thomas F. Stevens, manager of the real estate department of the First National Bank sales force.

FREIGHT TERMINAL FOR S. SIXTH STREET

Located at 1129, It Will Have Frontage of 310 Feet by a Depth of 50 Feet.

Construction has been started on modern truckers' terminal building at 1129 South Sixth street, which is attracting more than ordinary attention. It is being erected by Herman C. Waldman, president of the St. Louis Fire Door Co. Several trucking interests, it is understood, have the building, comprising several units, under consideration for occupancy under long leases, according to the Henry R. Welsels Co.

The site has a frontage of 310 feet on Sixth street, with a depth of 135 feet, extending to a 15-foot alley. The first unit, 135 by 150 feet, is to be used exclusively as a freight terminal.

The buildings, one story in height, will be equipped with four-foot loading platforms on the street front and two-foot loading platforms on the alley front. The buildings will set back 37 feet from the sidewalk line and 49 feet from the alley, making it possible to load and unload 28 trucks at one time. Each truck will be enabled to back up to its own door on to a four-foot loading platform with a canopy as a protection against inclement weather.

In the center of the group a two-story office or administration building 50 by 50 feet will be erected to serve the freight terminals. It will be divided into two sections for general offices. The first floor will contain receiving and checking departments and truck owners' offices, separated by glass partitions. Executive offices will occupy the second floor. Part of the first floor will be used as a storeroom for valuable articles. The basement will contain the boiler room, and a spacious lounging room for the truck drivers, with ample toilet facilities.

The group will have a loading and unloading capacity of 56 trucks at one time. The new buildings will be under the management of the Henry R. Weisels Co.

RECEIVERSHIP OF CARTHAGE MARBLE COMPANY TERMINATED

Judge Hogan Finds Accounting Unnecessary Because of Agreement of All Parties.

A decree signed yesterday by Circuit Judge Granville Hogan terminated the receivership of the Carthage Marble & White Lime Co., which formerly operated stone quarries in Jasper County, Mo. The company has been in receivership since 1929 on petition of Mrs. Clara Bromschwig, a stockholder, who also asked for an accounting from George S. Beimdiek, president.

Mrs. Bromschwig alleged that Beimdieck used corporation funds to purchase control of its capital stock. Judge Hogan found that the necessity of an accounting which was ordered in 1931 has been eliminated as a result of an agreement of all parties to settle the controversy.

The First National Bank in St. Louis is custodian of securities belonging to the company and it is ordered by the Court to sell enough of this property to realize $100,000, from which distribution is to be made according to terms of an agreement. Mrs. Bromchwig and interests she represents are to receive a total of $55,000; her counsel, Marion C. Early and Ivon Lodge, $15,071; William Corcoran Jr., attorney for other interests, including heirs of H. F. Gruetzemacher, $2500; Edward I. Quicksilver, successor, receiver, $1000; James T. Blair, attorney for the receiver, $7500, and the Collector of Internal Revenue $23,184 for income taxes.

Beimdieck is to have all of the stock in the company and realty valued at $2000.

RECORD COIN-MAKING YEAR AT U. S. MINT

Demand for Small Change So Great That Foreign Orders Are Turned Down.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.—Edwin H. Dressel, superintendent of the Philadelphia Mint, the first and largest, announces value of United States coins struck up to Dec. 1 as $28,926,787. The previous high value in any one year (1919), was $13,849,610.

These figures Dressel said do not include foreign coinages.

"In 1932 we shipped for circulation just $30 in coins," he said. "Now they are ordered as fast as we can produce them. On three successive days recently we shipped coins valued at $1,000,000.

"We've had to abandon work on our foreign orders because the law requires us to make United States coins first. We've been working three shifts, 24 hours a day, for several months."

Dressel said the nature of the coinage indicates "a great upswing in business."

Larger Coins Wanted.

"In 1919, our previous top year," he said, "we produced 48,000,000 United States silver coins and 432,800,000 nickels and pennies. Already this year we have more than doubled our silver coinage record with 114,800,000 pieces, while the production of nickels and pennies dropped to 360,000,000. People want the larger coins."

He said further indications of business improvement were in the annual dollar value of United States coins sent out for circulation.

"In 1928," he said, "we shipped out $7,000,000. It jumped to $9,000,000 in 1929 only to drop to $1,250,000 in 1930. The decline came fast in 1931 when we shipped out $419,000, and in 1932 with our record low of $30. It jumped from $1,500,000 in 1933 to $20,000,000 in 1934, and to $24,000,000 last year."

He said the low shipments in 1932 caused the mint vaults to be jammed with coins of all denominations. That year 14,000,000 pieces were coined. The next year, with shipments increasing, the surplus coinage was put into circulation. No silver coins were made in 1933, however. The Mint turned out only $14,000,000 in pennies.

Foreign coinage for Cuba and Venezuela totaled 30,000,000 pieces up to Nov. 21, Dressel said. In 1919 37,800,000 foreign coins were minted.

Not everyone in the Mint is engaged in the coin making business. The Mint has its own machine shop for tool and machinery making. There is a sewing room where the bags for the coins are made. Aprons, asbestos gloves, spats and armlets for the workers also are produced in the sewing room; only to be burned or melted up after they are worn to recover any of the precious metals that might have adhered to them.

The loss of metal is very slight, Superintendent Dressel said. The floors of the Mint are made of wooden blocks which are taken up at various times, burned and the metal recovered from them. The workers also must walk over a special rough floor which wears away the soles of their shoes. The residue is reduced to recover any metal.

The process of making coins includes first the making of a plaster model of the coin from which the stamping die is made. Molten metal is made into ingots which are run through a rolling machine while still hot and made into strips. From these strips blank discs are stamped. The blanks are fed into a machine which stamps the design. All coins are weighed and inspected and imperfect coins sorted out. They are then counted and bagged for shipment.

A Farm House Type in Stone and Frame

IT is not often that stone and frame are combined in the construction of a home, but when it is built in a grove of large trees and has a formal garden at the back it holds a great deal of interest.

The house shown here is of the American farmhouse type, with a stone facade and frame sides. The vertical batten in the gables is the type that was used extensively in the older American farmhouses. The garage forms a north wing while a sunroom on the south forms a balancing left wing.

There are several interesting features about this house. One of them is a circular entrance hall which, like the living room and octagonal dining room, is paneled in knotty white pine. The doors to the coat closet and passage way are alike and carry out the circular idea. The stairway, which rises just opposite the deeply recessed entrance has a canopy bracket over it.

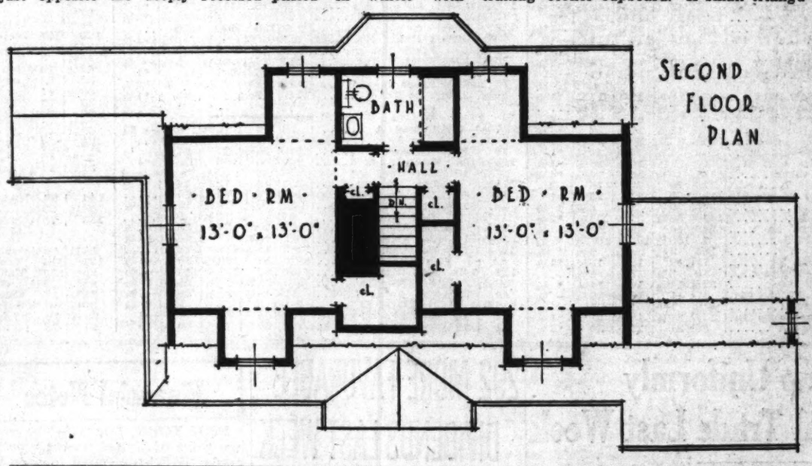

THE living room is a comfortable, well-proportioned room with paneled walls and a beamed ceiling. The fireplace is of native limestone and the large window opposite which faces south has a fixed sash. Here glass shelves carry a well chosen collection of colored glass objects which is amplified in winter with trailing plants. Built-in book shelves occupy the space on either side of the large west window, which looks out over the garden.

The octagonal dining room, another interesting feature of the house, has the wall space paneled in knotty pine. The glass bay looks out over a formal garden which makes an interesting picture at all times. The door that leads to the hall is balanced by a built-in corner cupboard. A small triangular hall opens on a downstairs bedroom, a bath, and the kitchen.

The convenience of a downstairs bedroom is coming to be an important point with home builders. The bedroom in this house connects with downstairs bath and shower.

Stove and refrigerator in the kitchen are recessed and a built-in ventilating fan takes care of any cooking odors. Cabinet space below and above the work counters on either side of the sink is provided.

Two bedrooms and a bath occupy the second floor. Both bedrooms have three exposures and there is ample closet space. Bedrooms are papered and the wood trim is painted. Wainscoting in the bathrooms and kitchen is tile.

WINDOWS are double hung with small lights and the shutters are working shutters. The entrance door is six panel, having two small lights at the top. The slate roof of sea green forms a colorful contrast with the white stone facade. A concrete slab forms the terrace just outside the entrance. The basement is fully excavated and provides for a rathskeller, a heater room and laundry unit. The cubic space is estimated at 28,000 feet and the cost, based on this cubage is figured at about 35 cents per cubic foot. Julius E. Tarling, member of the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects planned the house.

Check List of Questions to Aid Home Buyer

The home buyer who hopes to purchase more than an impression when he sets out to look for a home often is put to it to find just what the sound points are about a house. These questions cover in general most of the principal points to be considered when purchasing a house. There will be instances where some of the questions will not be applicable, and the lack of favorable answers to others does not necessarily mean that the property is undesirable.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. In your column "Questions Before the House," you answered a question concerning waiting for the cold water to drain from a hot-water system. In your answer you suggested the installation of a return pipe for the establishment of a circulating system. How could this be applied to a 1936 model 32-gallon per hour storage type of water heater?

Both the cold water inlet and hot-water outlet are at the top of this heater. There is only about 18 inches clearance between the top of this heater and the basement ceiling and there is about 30 feet of pipe between kitchen sink and heater that presents this problem.

L. K., Normandy, Mo.

A. In order to make your system a circulating hot-water system it would be necessary to put in return water pipes, insulating these pipes thoroughly. Then a booster pump would have to be installed to keep the water circulating. With a circulating system the gas would be burning at all times. We suggest that you consult your dealer regarding the cost of installation.

Q. Our bathroom toilet backs up occasionally. We use a plunger and then it is all right for a while. Have had three new bowls put in, had vent pipe cleaned out, still plumber cannot find cause.

MRS. A. G.

A. The trouble may be in the length of drain pipe from the fixture to the street sewer. Cleaning this pipe may be the answer to your problem. Also, have the plumber check the drain pipes to find out if they are of ample size.

Q. We are all ready to let a contract to build our new home, but some of our friends advise us to wait until spring. What do you think about it? PROSPECT.

A. There are not many reasons to wait and many to urge you to proceed. Building in winter offers few unsurmountable difficulties and is quite often cheaper than building during the usual building season.

Q. There is a double electric plug in my kitchen and the refrigerator is connected with one side; and if I use the other for a toaster or iron, it blows out the fuse. Would it be safe to put in a heavier fuse? J. A. C.

A. It might be, but it would be inadvisable to take a chance. A refrigerator should be on a separate circuit not only for safety's sake, but because when the current goes on, the other outlets on the same circuit go down momentarily. If there are lights on the circuit, the blinking is annoying.

Q. We have a cellar under our house, but the floor of our living room is always cold. It is a single oak floor and the beams are open in the cellar. Do you suppose if we put a ceiling in the cellar, that would help? BEN G.

A. Yes; it should help a good deal. Be sure, however, that the space between the beams at the outside walls is well insulated and that there are fire stops between the studs of the outside walls to stop drafts.

FOR BETTER LIVING

The newest thing in decorative building material is an integrally colored concrete aggregate that comes in vitreous and ceramic materials. These new aggregates make possible brilliantly colored cast stone or decorative borders or panels. Varying the proportions of the colored aggregates allows for all color gradations and the execution of designs and patterns in color in cast stone is possible.

Families with growing children are usually put to it to find a place to stow winter outdoor paraphernalia. A closet in the garage or in an improvised garden house makes a splendid place for storing such things as sleds, skis and hockey stick.

Don't let the leaves pile up against the house if the walls are of frame, for, while they will help insulate the house, they will rot the wood and may act as a means through which insects will get in.

A mirrored cabinet built in the wall of a small reception hall adds interest and is an effective way of furnishing this always-difficult spot. The recessed shelves take up no space, but remove the necessity for furniture to take away the feeling of bareness. Colored glass, china, or your collection of silver bridge trophies may be placed on them.

A mirrored panel in a narrow space between two windows adds to the illusion of space and is decorative as well. A small table in front can serve as a dressing table, and the window draperies heighten the boudoir effect.

If the screens of your porch are not so constructed that they may be taken down and stored for the Winter, it is essential that they be painted to protect them from the weather. Even if they can be taken down, painting won't hurt them, for the wires are very thin and the corrosion will rot them through. Special paints, including a lacquer, are made for this purpose. Inquire of your paint shop and they can advise you.

Financial Markets Relieved by Late Week Developments Abroad But Fail to Advance Materially Wide Buying in Low-Priced Shares Attributed to the Public is Not Liked by Some —Viewed as Too Much Speculation.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Financial markets cast off shackles of worry this week but failed to advance far.

Early in the week concern heightened over the British constitutional problem, some contending that postponement of the King's coronation or the holding of a national election would have been a drag on security markets.

When tension was relaxed by the decision of the reigning monarch to quit the country, however, buying power was released in both stocks and bonds and a fair amount of recovery was chalked up.

Factors cited as providing markets with bullish impetus included further favorable dividend actions, sustained momentum in heavy industry, a new peak for power production, expansion of retail trade and a gain in freight shipments.

Analysts expressed encouragement over the occasional breadth of buying which filtered into rails, metals, steels and equipment shares.

On the other hand wide buying in low-priced issues attributed to the public was not liked in some circles. These observers said it signified too much speculative activity.

Debate on Interest Rates.

In investment circles debate on the outlook for interest rates was revived. Coming on the heels of recent opinions in high places over the trend of money rates, a speech by Chester C. Davis of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System commanded wide attention.

Emphasizing he spoke for himself alone, Davis said he opposed a boost in interest rates as a means of checking "speculative inflation."

Most Wall street observers, believing the speech mirrored the attitude of the Federal Reserve Board, interpreted it to mean the board contemplates no departure from the low money rate rut.

Just so long as interest rates remain low, they hold, prices of bonds should remain comparatively steady.

Sales during the week amounted to 11,439,860 shares, compared with 11,872,470 a week ago and 11,767,373 corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 463,567,905 shares, compared with 361,252,912 a year ago and 314,228,825 two years ago.

Specialties Up at Week-End.

Buying forces gave specialties another rush in week-end market and a number of favorites were lifted one to five points or so.

As in the past several sessions, leaders in other groups stumbled over selling obstacles and many were barely able to hold their own. There were a few sizeable declines in evidence at the rather nervous close.

Farm implements and amusements were easily the star performers of the day. The former continued to find support on indications the agricultural machinery makers are preparing for their best spring season in several years. Moving picture stocks responded to roseate dividend hopes engendered by box office receipts.

The Associated Press average was up .1 of a point at 70.6. Transfers totaled 1,235,910 shares compared with 1,000,580 last Saturday.

Ticker Falls Behind.

The activity in the first hour put the ticker tape behind floor dealings for a while and the recording apparatus was again pressed in the final few minutes of dealings.

The failure of major steels, motors, and rails to pay much attention to optimistic production and earnings forecasts was a bit discouraging to some quarters.

American Can exerted a rather depressing influence on the list, dropping 4¾ points to 110, another new low for the year. Year-end tax selling was seen as a factor in recent weakness of this issue. Continental Can, however, was only a shade down at 65.

Outstanding gainers included J. I. Case at 153½, up 5½ points; Deere 104, up 3¼; International Harvester 102⅝, up 2⅛; Paramount first preferred 167, up 3, and U. S. Pipe and Foundry 62, up 2. Some of these were at new tops for the recovery.

Block of 21,000 Shares.

One block of 21,000 shares of Paramount common changed hands and the issue finished up ⅝ at 22¼. Others out in front were Warner Bros. at 17½, Houston Oil 13½, Electric Power and Light 23⅜, Flintkote 38⅝, Barber Co. 37¾, Standard Gas preferred 25⅜ and Colgate Palmolive 20⅝, Cuban-American Sugar 13⅝ and North American Aviation 12⅞.

On the offside fractions to a point or more were General Motors 68½, Chrysler 123, Santa Fe 71¼, Great Northern 41, American Smelting 95⅝, U. S. Rubber 46½, National Steel 74⅛ and Sears Roebuck 96¼. Numerous other issues slipped a shade either way.

Bonds made headway slowly. Wheat at Chicago rallied 1 to 2⅞ cents a bushel on smaller crop prospects. Corn was down 1¼ to up ⅝c. Cotton advanced 35 to 90 cents a bale. Sterling improved as tension over Edward's abdication lessened. The French franc was off a trifle in terms of the dollar.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY 15 PER CENT OVER '35

The Gains Over Year Ago Reflect Statistical Measure of Rebound.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Industrial activity marched up to the highest level since 1929 during the latest week, 15 per cent above the comparable rate a year ago.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index, with 1929-30 equal to 100, advanced to 99.6 from 99.2 last week and 86.7 in the same period in 1935.

Gains over last year provide a statistical measure of recovery during the 12 months' period. Residential building showed the widest upswing with a 54.6 per cent advantage. The low level at the start of the year was partly responsible, although the shortage accumulated during the past six years was credited with supplying most of the impetus.

Steel mill operations were the best since May, 1930, and 37.4 per cent above last year's figure. Marked revival of heavy industry touched off this improvement.

Electric power output established a new record peak, scoring a 13.7 per cent upturn. Cotton manufacturing nudged ahead, more than one-fifth higher.

Although advancing for the week, automobile production was 23 per cent down on the year. This resulted from the new season established in 1934.

Total freight car loadings picked up less than was seasonally expected following the holiday, the index dipping. It is still approximately 17 per cent over last year.

The seasonally adjusted index, with its indices, based on the latest available statistics and with 1929-30, taken as 100, compared as follows:

ADDITIONAL BUYING OF RAILROAD EQUIPMENT

Further Advance in Steel Scrap Price Is Reported.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Heavy industry's growing back-log of orders was increased today by additional buying of railroad equipment.

At the same time, a further advance in price of steel scrap was taken in trade circles as evidence of underlying strength in the steel industry. Dow Jones & Co. reported the quotation for No. 1 heavy melting scrap had risen 75 cents a ton at Pittsburgh to $19, a new high for the recovery and only 25 cents under the 1929 top.

Bessemer & Lake Erie Railway, subsidiary of United States Steel Corporation, has ordered 10 freight locomotives and two switching engines to cost $1,480,000 from American Locomotive Co.

Another United States Steel unit —Union Railroad—ordered four heavy transfer locomotives costing $429,000 from Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia.

The Grand Trunk Western has ordered 3500 tons of rails from Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation and 1500 from Inland Steel Co., "Railway Age" reported.

The trade publication also said Chicago & Northwestern was inquiring for 500 automobile cars and Baltimore & Ohio for 1500 gondola cars.

Lima Locomotive Works, Lima, O., it noted, was allotted 14 of the Southern Pacific's locomotives in its recently announced equipment buying.

Special $2 Dividend by Bank.

The First National Bank of Wellston directors have declared a semi-annual dividend of $5 a share payable Dec. 15 and also a special Christmas dividend of $2 a share. A bonus or Christmas gift was made to employes.

WHEAT REACHES HIGHEST PRICE IN SEVEN YEARS

Rise of Nearly 3 Cents Based on Unofficial Report Indicating Likelihood of Subnormal Yields in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—July delivery of wheat shot suddenly skyward almost three cents a bushel today to price peaks unreached before in seven years. The companion breadstuff, rye, also outdid former top record quotations.

Chief immediate stimulus for new upturns of wheat values came from private reports indicating likelihood of subnormal yields in the United States the coming season because of widespread moisture shortage. The reports, if correct, would radically change the country's crop prospect at a time when overseas war clouds are threatening, and there is unusually urgent export demand.

A statement from a leading unofficial authority, B. W. Snow, said the United States is facing an outlook for a total 1937 wheat harvest that will not exceed much if at all the nation's domestic requirements.

Closing Prices.

At the close, wheat was 1 cent to 2⅞ above yesterday's finish, December $1.28⅝@⅞, May $1.24@¾, July $1.12⅛@¼, with corn 1¼ cents off to ⅝ up, December $1.06½@⅝, May new $1.02⅜@⅝, July new 99¼ @99⅝c, oats ⅜@⅝c advanced, May 49⅛@½c, and rye showing 1⅝@2 cents bulge. The outcome in provisions was unchanged to 12 cents dearer.

July wheat, which represented the 1937 domestic crop and which led today's rise, vaulted abruptly 2⅞ cents a bushel to $1.12⅛@¼, closing at the day's maximum gain, 22 cents higher than a year ago. The action of July was principally responsible for gains of 1 cent and 1⅛ cents in December and May contracts, lifting them to 28 and 26 cents above their quotations at this time last year.

Big outbursts of buying of wheat futures, especially July, accompanied the soaring of prices. Special attention was directed to estimates that the total domestic territory subject to actual or potential dust blowing because of moisture shortage is at present more than six million acres.

Statement of Expert.

B. W. Snow's statement said extravagant estimates of United States winter wheat acreage have been used as the basis of an expected crop that would furnish a substantial export surplus next year. On the contrary, he says he does not find an acreage increase so large as has been assumed, that a considerable part of the actual acreage was seeded primarily for pasturage, and that there is evidence of probable big abandonment of acreage as a result of winter kill and of failure of fall-sown wheat to establish itself properly before winter closed in.

Preceding the consequent upsweep of prices, most wheat traders were apparently disposed to take profits rather than to increase ventures. A contributing reason was that the Liverpool wheat market today closed in some cases almost a cent lower than.

Rye, corn, oats and provisions all scored gains when wheat prices climbed. Some selling of corn, however, was done against simultaneous purchases of wheat.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Dec. 12.—Wheat and corn futures were unquoted today.

Winnipeg wheat opened ⅛@⅝c higher. The close was 1⅛@1¾c higher.

Liverpool wheat oponed ¼@½d higher and closed ¼@¼d lower.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN

Local wheat receipts which were 49,500 bu., compared with 21,000 a week ago and 6000 a year ago included 13 cars local and 20 through. Corn receipts which were 133,500 bu., compared with 108,000 a week ago and 51,000 a year ago included 65 cars local and 24 through. Oats receipts which were 22,000 bu., compared with 14,000 a week ago and 10,000 a year ago, included 10 cars local and one through. Hay receipts were five cars local and two through.

In the cash grain market Saturday soft wheat was ½c lower. A fairly good demand from mills quickly cleared the offerings. Sales were made at a time when the future market was firmer. Quality of the offerings was better than average. A car of mixed wheat running to hard was taken by a local mill. Inquiry for hard wheat was fair. Corn was unchanged to 2c lower for the low grades, but was no higher for the white. Demand was only fair and some grain was carried over. The mixed corn and a car of yellow went to glucose maker, white white sold locally and yellow with special billing was taken by outside order buyers. Oats were ½c lower. Trading started slowly, but late in the session a demand developed and a clearance was effected. Outside order buyers took the mixed and elevator the white.

SOME POSITIONS OF COTTON AT NEW HIGHS FOR SEASON

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Active near month covering and replacement buying caused cotton to reach new highs for the movement in some positions today.

March advanced from 12.28 to 12.39 and closed at 12.38 with final prices generally 7 to 18 points net higher.

The market opened unchanged to 4 points higher in response to the action of Liverpool. Fluctuations during the first half hour were somewhat irregular with week-end liquidation and some hedging supplying contracts. Trade and Liverpool buying continued and as offerings tapered off fresh outside demand appeared. December and January advanced to new highs for the movement late in the session and final prices were close to the best for the day.

Amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 212,000 bales against 264,000 last year and 115,000 two years ago.

Spot steady; middling, 12.98c.

A GALLON OF WHISKY for AN ACRE OF GROUND

One of the most important land owners in the country region to the southwest of St. Louis had 640 acres that cost him 640 gallons of whisky. Richard Edwards, who wrote carefully and well, in discussing this and other transactions, said:

"It was the golden epoch in the history of whisky. It represented the currency of the time, and was known and esteemed in every domicile. One could have purchased most of the land on which St. Louis now stands for one gallon per acre."

What Our Customers Say:

Joseph E. Burger, President

A St. Louis Grocer Writes: "I bought a used 1934 Chevrolet from you and want to tell you how well pleased I am with the car and the nice service I received from you and your Mr. Grover C. Hess. I have been treated so well at the South Side Chevrolet that I have given Mr. Hess several prospects for good used cars which he has sold and all are more than satisfied. I cannot say enough for South Side and the O. K. used cars they are selling." (Signed) LOUIS U. MAUS, 3316A Humphrey St. Krekeler Groc. Co.

Texas Christian Smashes Unbeaten Santa Clara, 9 to 0

SAM BAUGH'S PASSES AND PUNTS LEAD TO VICTORY

Texas Quarterback's Toss for 39-Yard Gain Sets Stage for Touchdown in Second Period — Substitute Kicks Field Goal.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12.—Led by the greatest passer this football-mad section ever has seen—cool and courageous Sammy Baugh—Texas Christian handed University of Santa Clara its first defeat of the season today, 9 to 0.

Forty thousand cheering fans watched the last unbeaten and untied team in the United States crumble before Baugh's deadly effective aerials.

"Slingin' Sammy" pitched, punted and occasionally ran with the ball for 60 minutes of a bitterly fought battle. He was the big gun, the powder charge and the igniting spark in the Texan's terrific attack.

Behind the clever quarterbacking of this rangy field general, the Horned Frogs leveled the once proud gridiron fortress built up by Santa Clara during a season which brought it seven victories and an invitation to meet Louisiana State in the New Year's day Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans.

Short-enders at the kickoff and outplayed in the first period, Texas Christian turned the tide with startling suddenness in the second quarter.

A Break for Alert Texans.

Glenn Roberts, 170-pound full back from Fort Worth, opened the way for a touchdown, when he snagged a Santa Clara pass on his own 32.

Five plays later Texas Christian chalked up a touchdown while frenzied bandsmen from the Lone Star State nearly beat in the heads of drums.

The scoring march, good for 68 yards, went like this:

Baugh passed to Sub Half Montgomery; Baugh passed to Right End Roach who lateraled to Roberts, who ran 16 yards to Santa Clara's 48.

While the shocked Broncos were trying to muster a shattered defense, Baugh whipped one to Left Half McCall, who was downed on the nine-yard line—a gain of 39.

Then Baugh crossed up the boys—he smacked the line for four yards. The befuddled Santa Clarans then watched Baugh shoot a low swift pass to Roach over the line.

"Dutch" Meyer, nephew and namesake of his coach, came in to try for the extra point, but failed.

He redeemed himself later. With Texas Christian on Santa Clara's 13, Meyer dropped back for a field goal try. The ball split the uprights from the 22-yard line.

That ended the scoring.

All Texas in Second Half.

The Broncos' spirit and drive had crumpled during the touchdown

"Slinging Sam" Baugh Passes Texas Christian to Victory Over Santa Clara

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

The rifle-like arm of "Slinging Sam" Baugh, Texas Christian University quarterback, fired the passes that defeated Santa Clara, Sugar Bowl entrant, 9 to 0, at San Francisco yesterday before a crowd of 40,000. Here is the ball in mid-air from Baugh (right) on its way to Capt. Roach, not visible, that was good for a first down. The Bronchos' charging forwards (left to right) Bassi (16, dark jersey), Farasyn (15) and Wolff (10) were not even close to hurrying the Texas passer. At the extreme left are Holt (43), Texas Christian guard and Halfback White (16, white), who was a decoy on the play.

Texas Christian Asked to Play Marquette Team

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 12. TEXAS Christian University, which defeated Santa Clara, 9 to 0, at San Francisco today, was invited tonight to meet Marquette in the Cotton Bowl here Jan. 1.

E. W. McDiarmid, president of the Southwest Conference and chairman of the T. C. U. Athletic Council said he would ask the T. C. U. faculty committee for approval, then submit the matter to the conference faculty committee.

Sam Baugh, ace T. C. U. back, has been selected to play with the West team in the annual East-West game in San Francisco, Jan. 1.

Keirsey's Long Shots Enable Missouri to Beat Bears, 38 to 34

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 12.—A one-man scoring spree by Harlan Keirsey, sophomore guard, tonight added the winning spark to Missouri's scoring fireworks as the Tigers defeated Washington University, 38 to 34. Played before 3500, the game opened M. U.'s home season and was the second victory for the Tigers.

Up until Keirsey ran amuck with Bear victory chances at the start of the second half, the Bears were very much in the ball game. Four times in the first period the score was knotted and the best Missourians could boast at half time was a one-point lead, 20 to 19.

He Sinks Long Shots.

This sophomore Keirsey, from Butler, Mo., short, stocky and very ordinary in appearance, gave a hint of what was to follow by hitting from near center as the first half ended to give the Tigers the lead then. It looked like just a flash in the pan, but it was, instead, just a drop in the buiket of what was to come.

Keirsey opened the second half just as he closed the first, with a long shot near center, except this one was longer. Then in rapid succession, Keirsey flung accurately with two hands overhead from the side. That put the Missourians ahead by seven points and from there on they stayed ahead at one time leading by as much as 35 to 23. Just to show that his first two long range hits weren't flukes, Keirsey, 10 minutes after his major scoring burst, sunk another from just as long range. That was the one which widened the Missouri edge to 35 to 23.

Apparently satisfied Keirsey had done enough damage, Coach George Edwards took Keirsey out midway through the period. From then, it was simply a matter of protecting a lead for the Tigers.

COCHRAN IN BILLIARD FINAL AFTER BEATING DENTON, 50-27

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12. — Welker Cochran of San Francisco was leading Kinrey Matsuyama of Japan, 25 to 18, at the intermission point of their world's three-cushion billiards championship match tonight. The cautiously played duel had gone 22 innings.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Welker Cochran of San Francisco eliminated Tiff Denton from the world's three-cushion billiards championship playoff tonight, defeating the Kansas City expert, 50 to 27, in 51 innings. Cochran's victory sent him against Kinrey Matsuyama of Japan in the final game of the evening for the world's title.

The three players had tied at the end of regular tourney play. This afternoon, Denton lost to Matsuyama and Cochran's victory over the Kansas City player set the stage for a deciding match.

Cochran was erratic tonight in comparison to the form he displayed yesterday in two victories. He was missing easy shots and Denton's extremely poor form was largely responsible for his decisive defeat.

The San Francisco star led through the game, getting a cluster of four points in the first inning. Cochran's high run was five to three for Denton.

The score by innings:

Cochran —400 230 012 110 001 102
110 002 102 011 005 000
003 103 331 002 002—50.
Innings 51, High run 5.

Denton — —300 000 110 103 001 000
001 103 110 000 101 010
002 120 000 000 21—27.
Innings 50, high run 3 (one off for foul in thirty-fourth inning).

Auburn Drops Santa Clara.

By the Associated Press.

AUBURN, Ala., Dec. 12.—Coach Jack Meagher of Auburn announced a 10-game 1937 football schedule for the Plainsmen tonight. The schedule, with one date still open, lists seven Southeastern Conference foes. Santa Clara, Detroit and Loyola (La.) were dropped. Mississippi and Rice are new opponents. The game with Rice is scheduled for Oct. 30, at Houston, Tex.

Simms' Record Gives Him Little Chance to Defeat 'Brown Bomber'

By W. J. McGoogan.

Eddie Simms will have the chance of his boxing life to prove his real worth tomorrow night when he meets Joe Louis, over the 10 round route in the Cleveland Municipal Auditorium. The fight will feature the annual boxing show conducted for a Christmas fund in that city.

Eddie's career in the ring, the fifth year of which is now coming to a close, has been mediocre He has had some high spots, but generally he has failed to measure up to the promise he set as an amateur.

In 51 contests, he has won 33, 27 of them by knockouts. He has lost 14 decisions, fought one no-decision bout and drew three times.

This year has been a particularly bad one for the Cleveland fighter. He has dropped five decisions and fought one draw in the six bouts on record since January, 1936.

Not There in the Pinch.

Gifted by nature with things generally conceded to be necessary for a boxer, Eddie has always seemed to lack that something at the crucial moment which would have stamped him as a real title contender.

He has fought and defeated some good men, but always when the big chance came he was found wanting.

St. Louis fans know him quite well for his two bouts here last March, in one of which he fought a great 10 rounds with John Henry Lewis, light heavyweight champion of the world, only to lose the decision and, then put up a miserable exhibition in losing to Otis Thomas, Chicago Negro, in another 10 rounder.

Simms Clinches and Holds.

There is a reason, though, and Eddie displayed it on his next trip to the Auditorium when he clinched and held Thomas for 10 rounds. Then it was that ringsiders here began to undertsand the very uncomplimentary name with which the Cleveland boxing writer tabbed him—Eddie "Smell the Joint Out" Simms.

However, the Clevelander is only 27 years of age, stands 6 feet, one inch and weighs about 195 pounds. He has never been knocked out and his long experience and skill give

New Record of 3254 Is Set in Bowling Tourney

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 12.—The Michelob team of Chicago set up a new record of 3254 at the Central States Bowling Association tourney here tonight. Other high standings were Barbasol, Indianapolis, 3227; Marott's Shoes, Indianapolis, 3115; Bowes Seal Fast, Indianapolis, 3086, and P. Schmidt and Son, Hammond, 3026.

High individual scores included F. Mounts, Indianapolis, 2073; Frank Kartheiser, Chicago, 2039; John Fehr, Indianapolis, 2006; Dan Abbott, Indianapolis, 1977; J. Pritchett, Indianapolis, 1956.

Falstaff Beer five fared well by turning an eighth place count of 2924. Walter Hartman led the firing with a 644 series, ably supported by Elmer Yanda of 635. The Falstaffs opening with 879, soared to 1057 and finished with 988.

Charles Stonebarger of Dayton, O., was elected president of the association at the business session held in connection with the eighteenth annual tournament.

Officers re-elected were: Herman Mergard Jr., of Cincinnati, O., first vice president; Pete Howley of Chicago, second vice president; Jess Pritchett of Indianapolis, third vice president, and W. J. Mattison of Toledo, O., secretary-treasurer. Ed Bosler of Louisville, Ky., was named fourth vice president. Harry Feuser and E. C. Gillett of St. Louis were named to the executive committee.

CHAMPION CAN'T MEET JOE LOUIS AS PLANNED

By Davis J. Walsh

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Champion Jim Braddock and Max Schmeling signed contracts today with the New York State Athletic Commission for a 15-round world's heavyweight championship fight on June 3, in Madison Square Garden's Long Island Bowl and thereby brought to an end a seance of haggling which started yesterday and was resumed this morning.

The commission, which at one time during the proceedings demanded a winter fight and later threatened to call the whole thing off, beat the champion and challenger into line without losing a point, even stipulating that Braddock could not go through with a proposed no-decision bout with Joe Louis before meeting Schmeling. Any other fighter would do, the board said—but not Louis, who is second in line for the challenger's spot.

This was written into the contracts along with a proviso that $25,000 be deducted from the winner's end of the title fight, binding him to a defense in this country within six months. It was intimated in this connection that the Braddock-Schmeling winner would, therefore, fight Louis for the title in September.

Gould's Protest Overruled.

The commission left the principals no choice in the matter today, ordering that they meet on the terms as stated above. A protest by Joe Gould, Braddock's manager, against the barring of the proposed Louis bout was promptly ruled out by the commission, along with other objections.

The wrangling resumed with the opening of today's session, was carried through almost to the moment of signing—which took place an hour after they first agreed to sign. Schmeling actually signed at 2:15 o'clock and Braddock two minutes later.

With that formality over, and everybody concerned relieved, Braddock announced that his immediate plans call for a four-round exhibition with his sparring partner, Jack McCarthy at Buffalo, on Dec. 28, and Schmeling said he would leave next week for Germany. The former champion, however, will return here in February for an exhibition tour, he revealed.

Completion of the title fight was something of a victory for Schmeling, who rushed here from Germany Thursday to make a plea before the commission that contracts originally signed be recognized and the Braddock-Louis bout be banned.

Bout Postponed From September.

Both men previously were signed soon after Schmeling knocked out Louis. Braddock, at that time, asked that the proposed match, set for last September, be postponed on account of an attack of arthritis which took him into temporary retirement for a long siege of treatment.

The commission refused to accept the original contracts because they had not been placed on file with the commission, and until today's action definitely sewed up a place for Schmeling against Braddock, the German apparently was being shunted aside.

If Braddock had gone through with the Louis bout before meeting Schmeling and suffered a knockout, Louis would have been recognized as champion, and Schmeling would have been left holding the sack.

The promotional stackup remains the same, with the Garden, holder of Braddock's contract, teamed up with the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, which obtained Schmeling's services for future bouts when he was signed to meet Louis.

While Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century, sought today through his lawyer, Sol Strauss, to have a clause written into the contracts permitting either fighter to sign with any promoter after their title fight, the commission balked at this request, but did agree to write the clause into minutes of the meeting.

Garden Loses Its Prior Right.

This means, apparently, that re-

It Happened Before.

"IF Max Schmeling should defeat Jimmy Braddock in a title bout, would he be the first heavyweight champion to regain a title after having lost it?" asked a ring fan, during a recent fight fanfest.

The almost unanimous answer of those present was "yes." And, as far as modern fights go, that is to be the case. Actually one might credit first honors of the sort to the late Tom Allen, proprietor of the old saw-dust floored tavern on Market street near Seventh, known as "Champion's Rest," famous throughout the West 40 years ago.

Allen operated that resort up to his death in 1904. It derived its name from the fact that Allen, who was widely recognized as world's champion after he came from England and settled here in here in the early sixties, opened and operated the place after his retirement from the ring.

McCoole Given Biased Verdict.

MIKE McCOOLE, another St. Louis tavern keeper and himself a nationally known fighter of the "bruiser" type, challenged Allen for the title and they fought on Chouteau Island in the Mississippi. Allen was winning, but the referee, intimidated by roughs, gave the verdict to McCoole, who claimed the title for four years.

Then he and Allen met again in 1873, and Allen cut him to ribbons and made him quit in seven rounds, regaining his title rights.

Champion by Decree.

IT has been contended that Allen, who learned boxing in England where he fought leading opponents, was not universally recognized as champion. On the other hand, no other man, at that time, had an undisputed claim. Allen seemed to have the best right of all.

His claim to be considered champion was quite as good as that of Schmeling, who came to this country after Tunney had retired and fought Jack Sharkey in what the New York Commission declared would be a title battle. Sharkey had no right or claim to the title nor had Schmeling, before their fight. It was to be a title fight by DECREE.

And when they fought Schmeling won—on a FOUL, after his foe had given him a savage beating for four rounds.

Not a very sound claim for championship honors.

Our own belief is that Allen is

ROLLA LOSES APPEAL FOR INCREASE IN STUDY HOURS

School of Mines Eligibility Requirements as to Hours in Classroom Exceed Those of Rival Schools.

Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association coaches yesterday drew up football schedules for the next two seasons after deferring until next year a proposal to equalize eligibility rules at a meeting at the Statler Hotel yesterday.

The eligibility requirements of all conference schools except Missouri School of Mines, newest member of the league, call for completion of seven and a half out of 10 hours of school studies per year. The Rolla institution requires 12 out of 19 hours and sought to have a uniform standard adopted.

The association appointed a committee to select uniform athletic awards for the teams, such as sweaters and letters, and also decided to hold all future meetings in Kansas City.

Previously, it had convened every other year at St. Louis and Kansas City, but in the future will gather at Kansas City at the same time the Big Six and Missouri Valley Conferences meet, so as to conform with action that might be taken by the larger schools.

Charles G. Clayton of Missouri School of Mines was elected president of the association; W. W. Parker of Cape Girardeau, vice-president, and G. H. Jamison of Kirksville, secretary-treasurer.

Coaches who attended the meeting were Emmett Stuber of Cape Girardeau; Fred Faurot, Kirksville; Andy McDonald, Springfield; E. A. Davis, Maryville; Carl Voltmer, Warrensburg; Harold Grant, Missouri School of Mines at Rolla.

The Bomber and His Prospective Target

Our Necks Out Again.

"WHICH team do you think will win the Rose Bowl and why?" asks a correspondent. game—Pitt or Washington, and why?" asks a correspondent.

Already sensitive in the region of the rear collar button from having put out our neck in several instances of attempted experting, we hesitate to tackle this problem.

In the first place we haven't seen either team in action; and in the second place it wouldn't make much difference if we had. We might have scouted a major game every week of the season without having had in advance the slightest inkling that a defeated Pittsburgh team would humble Notre Dame 26 to 0; that a twice beaten Notre Dame team would rout the Army, 20 to 6, or that the Southern California eleven would tie Notre Dame, after making only one first down and that on a penalty.

No matter what you saw in big games of the current year, most of your observation would only have served to confound your judgment.

That is why we say that failure to have seen in action any of the performers in the Rose Bowl game of Jan. 1, will not hamper us in making a prediction. Nor does it ever hamper our experts far and near when they fearlessly pick the eleven best men of the nation from coast to coast.

When we pick Pittsburgh as the probable winner at Pasadena we figure that we are doing just as good as any other of the legion of guessers who will try their hand at clairvoyance.

There Are Reasons—All Bad.

WHY Pittsburgh? Well, there are reasons to be sure. In the first place this Pitt team is a tough nut even though Duquesne did sneak over a winning touchdown and Fordham a tie game.

And then there's the old "comparative score" gag. You can show two routes to a Pitt victory via this system, both hinging on that 26-0 defeat of Notre Dame.

By one route we find that Pitt is 14 points better than the Huskies and by the other 59 points! Here's the comparison in figures:

Pitt 26, Notre Dame 0.
Notre Dame 13, S. California 13.
Washington 12, S. California 0.

Notre Dame being equal to S. Cal., the difference between 26 and 12 obviously represents the margin in favor of Pitt.

Of course, we know that S. California wasn't the equal of Notre Dame but merely unbelievably lucky; and that by comparison Notre Dame was really a couple of touchdowns superior to the Trojans. That would make Pitt on paper more than 20 points ahead of its Rose Bowl rival.

Now take the line of comparison through Minnesota:

Notre Dame 26, Northwestern 6.
Northwestern 6, Minnesota 6.
Minnesota 14, U. of Washington 7.

This reduces the Rose Bowl classic to a parade—if you believe the figures—and gives Pittsburgh a margin of 59 points!

After which, applying the lessons of the season indicating that nothing is what it seems, we very logically ought to pick the University of Washington team to beat the Panthers by three touchdowns.

However, this is even more than our cynicism will permit and as we go to press at this time, our conviction is that Pittsburgh will probably beat the Huskies by a field goal or maybe only a safety.

Write us before New Year's and we may be in an entirely different frame of mind.

The more you think about football in terms of the 1936 campaign, the more you will conclude that the things which are upside down are really rightside up.

Like the situation in Spain, for example.

Hard to Believe.

FRANKIE FRISCH is quoted as saying that he does not care where Dizzy trains this spring if he can continue to win as he has in the past.

Frankie personally may not care, although that too seems incredible; but the Redbirds' owner and his adviser, Branch Rickey, will hardly be able to see things in that light.

Already one weakness of the Dean situation lies in the special privileges that he has enjoyed, such as other players have not been able to get.

Other stars of the club would have been dealt with summarily had they gone to some of the extremes Dizzy has been permitted to.

Unless the personnel of the Redbird group is different from the usual run of baseball mentality, the players are certain to become restive and indignant. Such a thing as permitting a player to train himself at a place of his own choice would be an entering wedge of discord that might split the team. It simply could not be done.

Frisch and other clever stallers in the past occasionally have delayed their arrival at training camp, but a one-man training camp away from the remainder of the squad has always resulted in penalties for the player.

Dean will train at Daytona, or he will train at some other club camp as a member of some other team. Baseball policy seems to make that certain.

The "Outstanding Star."

RETURNS from the second vote on the Sullivan award to the "outstanding athlete" of the year will be of new interest since the announcement that Jesse Owens has turned professional.

Coupled with the previous blot on his amateur escutcheon—his suspension by the A. A. U.—it is considered doubtful if even this great runner's track achievements can over-ride the handicaps against him.

He may have even disqualified himself as an eligible in the eyes of the award committee, although it must be taken into consideration that his offenses were committed after he had achieved his amateur peak without any other charge against his amateur status than that he was a paid but reputedly non-active page in the employ of the Ohio State Legislature.

There is a good chance, however, that Glenn Morris, decathlon champion, or even a woman, Helen Stephens, will receive the award. Miss Stephens, in her field, was by far the greatest standout of the year, whether men or women be considered. There could be no objection raised if she were finally chosen.

LOS ANGELES SEEKS BERTH IN NATIONAL GRID LEAGUE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The National Professional Football League received applications for franchises from Cleveland, Los Angeles and Buffalo at its meeting today, but deferred action until the annual mid-winter meeting in Chicago in February.

Cleveland was represented by Homer Marshman, Los Angeles by Cam Henderson and Buffalo by Charley Murray.

At the same time the club owners and coaches selected 10 outstanding college seniors for each club's "negotiation list." The players will be offered contracts with the club selecting them for the list getting first call on their services. As in the baseball "draft," the club finishing lowest in the standing was given the first choice as the lists made up in "round robin" fashion.

The players chosen for negotiations were:

him a chance to provide a real test for Louis if it does not turn out to be one of those nights when Eddie is not interested in boxing.

Since he last appeared in St. Louis, Simms, with his new manager, Jimmy Dunn, has quit Cleveland and has made his headquarters in New York. He lost a 10-round decision to Leroy Haynes there in his most recent effort and on the McLarnin-Canzoneri card in October at Madison Square Garden, Eddie held Lorenzo Pack to a draw.

Pack is another Negro heavyweight who came along at about the same time as Louis and through the same school, the Golden Gloves. Many have considered him the equal of Louis. Lorenzo seemed to have an edge on Simms in their fight and at one stage of the fight rocked him so hard with a right hand that it appeared Simms would hit the canvas. He didn't, however, and was there at the finish fighting hard. The draw decision proved unpopular with the crowd.

Have Fought Same Men.

Simms has fought some of the men whom Louis has met. Louis knocked out Hans Birkie in 10 rounds and Birkie held Simms to a draw in 10 rounds. But any fights with Birkie may be tossed out the window as those who saw him box Al Stillman at the Coliseum some years ago will attest. Birkie is a cautious, careful counter puncher who never makes a lead. So he makes himself and his opponent look bad.

Simms won a decision from Al Ettore in 10 rounds last year, while Louis knocked Al out in five rounds in Philadelphia a short time ago.

They both fought Natie Brown 10 rounds, Louis winning a decision, and Simms losing. Louis stopped Charley Massera in three rounds, while Massera won a decision over Simms in 10 rounds in 1934.

However, Louis has never fought Simms and that, after all, is the only real test between two men.

No doubt Simms is on the downward slope of his career while Louis, his supporters contend, has not reached the peak.

Seeking His Twenty-seventh Kayo

Joe will be seeking his twenty-seventh knockout in 32 fight as he has won 30 of 31 scraps, 26 of his victories being by knockouts. He has won four decisions and has been knocked out once, by Max Schmeling.

Since the Schmeling debacle, Louis has fought three times. He knocked out Jack Sharkey in three rounds, Al Ettore in five and George Brescia in three rounds.

None of these men really put the Bomber to the test, but there are many boxing critics, who contend that Louis lost something through the Schmeling knockout which he has not got back since. In two of the three bouts in which the writer saw him since it appeared that Louis was very anxious to get them over with a knockout, that he took more punches than he formerly took and swung more carelessly and missed more punches than he did before Max got to him in the twelfth round at the Yankee Stadium last June.

It has been said that he still is a sucker for a righthand punch, but it seems unlikely that his crafty trainer, Jack Blackburn, has not devised a defense against it by this time. It may be that Simms will provide an answer to the theory although Eddie's best hand, at least in his good fight here with Lewis, was his left.

Contest for Selecting New Name For Browns Closes Tuesday

The poll of fan sentiment on the desirability of a new name for the Browns will close next Tuesday at midnight with the ancient order of name-coiners apparently just getting its second wind.

Latest entries in the contest represent a distinct departure from the conservatism that marked the first ideas for a new moniker. The early birds thought of Lions, Eagles, Rockets and Blue Birds, but the letter writers who believe in thinking things out have come up with some rather startling proposals at the eleventh hour.

For instance, P. J. O'Donnell, 4972 Fountain avenue, points out that the Browns after several years as a mere asset of an estate finally have attained "security" under new ownership. Thus, he proposes the words "Social Security Browns" for the uniforms of the 1937 nine.

Ed Kuechler, 4929 Loughborough avenue, suggests "Snworb" (Browns spelled backwards), but did not venture a pronunciation of his name. W. S. Gwaltney, 4330 McPherson avenue, likes "St. Louis Peppers," and envisions a sports writer pounding out: "The Peppers were hot today—"

"The St. Louis Canaries" appeals to Philip May, 4106 Cook avenue, as a bit more lively than "Browns," and he advises light yellow uniforms for the ball players to match up with the name. J. B. Shanafelt, 6026 Shulte avenue, offers the "St. Louis Mounds," a tie-up, he says, with "Mound City" as well as an ice plant built by the late Phil Ball on the site of an Indian mound.

What the present name lacks, C. H. Bunch of Hannibal, Mo., advised the Brownie owners, is rhythm. "St. Louis Seals" would fill the order, he added, and advertise the Zoo.

Suggestions for new names and letters warmly defending the old one have come to President Donald L. Barnes and General Manager Bill DeWitt from all parts of the country. At the completion of the contest, they will be submitted to a committee of sports writers and radio announcers who will award season passes to the writers of the three best letters.

of the Bear attack. His 11 points edged out Keirsey and Uhlemeyer, a Bear sophomore—each of the latter with 10—for game individual scoring honors. Hafeli, though, did more for the Bears than score himself. His driving style of attack, time and again, was responsible for setting up scoring opportunities for Bear mates.

Both Tigers and Bears played distinctly early season basketball. Neither outfit had its offensive working smoothly and scoring was too much to suit Coaches Hellmich and Edwards via the means of individual rather than team effort.

Missouri opened the second half with a one-man scoring spree by Keirsey, who hit from near center and then went under the basket for two more to push the Tiger lead to 26 to 19. Five minutes of the second period was gone before a Bear could hit the hoop. Uhlemeyer, slipping through for a set-up after Missouri, on a goal and free toss by Brown and another basket by Bredehoeft, had pulled away 12 points.

Four baskets in three minutes, two by Hafeli, a tip in by Beeler and one by Uhlemeyer, kept the Bears in striking distance and Bredehoeft and Gerst connected for Missouri to lead the Tiger edge 35 to 30 midway through the last half.

With just three minutes to go, Beers' short shot matching one just like it by Beeler kept the Tigers ahead.

Uhlemeyer sunk one from directly under the hoop in the last 30 seconds, but Henderson hit a free toss a few seconds later for the Tigers just as the game ended.

Game Notes.

Don Faurot, Missouri football coach and chairman of Intercollegiate Athletics, appealed to the crowd before the game not to boo, smoke or throw sales tax tokens on the court between halves. Don's oratory went for naught. The crowd, as usual with M. U. basketball crowds, enjoyed itself doing all three of things Don asked it not to do.

Hafeli scored a hit with Tiger sports fans tonight with his inspired cage play just as his performance at end against Missouri in football this fall rated him with many as the best wingman to play against Missouri in 1936.

It was largely an all-rookie battle. At the close of the first half M. U.'s lineup was all-sophomore and Hafeli was the only Bear letterman on the court.

All the Bear first year men battled manfully all the way, but, of the lot, Uhlemeyer was the only performer who turned in a game of veteran steadiness.

With both coaches Edwards and Hellmich still in the process of choosing No. 1 combinations, substitutions were free. Missouri used 11 men; Washington 10.

thrust and almost completely disappeared after the field goal. Only once in the second half did Santa Clara cross mid-field. It had its chance to score early in the game—but failed on the same kind of plays which Texas capitalized.

Just before the Texas touchdown Santa Clara crossed the visitors goal on a pass interception by Sub-Half Seramin and Referee C. M. Price called it a touchdown. But the referee had not seen a clipping violation spotted by his colleagues.

It was the third successive annual triumph of Texas Christian over Santa Clara.

After the game fans scuffled with police and exchanged blows among themselves but in the end, battered the goalposts into bits.

SHAMROCKS MEET UNDEFEATED SPARTA TEAM IN GAME TODAY

Zensen and Kane Will Get Chance With Locals — Chicagoans Will Show Experienced Eleven.

By Dent McSkimming

If any team in the midwest has what it takes to break up the smooth short-pass game of the undefeated Shamrock soccer team it may be Sparta of Chicago, which opposes the crack St. Louis team at Public Schools Stadium today. The poise that comes with many seasons of keen competition is the element most necessary to thwart the weaving tactics of Gonsalves, Watson, Roe, Nilsen, McNab, Begley, Strattman and Lehman. Sparta's veteran players have that poise in a fuller measure than any team in this section with the possible exception of Slavia-Bartunek of Cleveland.

There is not a single untried youngster in the Sparta backfield. It will probably be very difficult to befuddle such old campaigners as Tom Scott, Laddy Mrnka, John Tomich, Einar Pearson, John Nudera, Baba Vicek and Jimmy Wolfe. They know all the answers, and while it is doubtful whether their attack will be strong enough to shatter the Shamrocks' winning streak, their defense is certain to provide a problem for the St. Louis play makers.

Pearson Is Wise Player.

McNab and Gonsalves, forming the Shamrocks' right wing, will have football wise opponents in Pearson, Vicek and Mrnka, the classiest soccer players the Shamrock stars have gone up against this season. On the other side, Strattman will have to be at his best to get results against Tom Scott and Bamba Tomich. Size and weight will be all in favor of the Chicagoans when they run up against little Jimmy Roe and Strattman, his wing mate. It would seem to be wise for the St. Louis boys to keep away from the Sparta heavyweights.

Scotty Nilsen, the St. Louis center forward who has kept pace with Billy Gonvalves in goal scoring, probably will find his path well crowded because Scott and Mrnka and Nudera know Nilsen's style as well as he knows it himself. They believe that if they can keep the ball off Nilsen's right foot they have nothing to worry about. Scotty played a full season in Chicago with some of the Sparta players as his teammates.

Two New Sparta Forwards.

At the other end of the field, Munro, at outside right and Wolfe, at outside left, are apt to give the Shamrock defenders most trouble. They will be very dangerous any time they get beyond the St. Louis wing halfbacks. It is difficult to tell how serious Watson's task may be for his private foe, the Chicago center forward, Wright, is a newcomer here. If he and Inside Right Vicek are of the same caliber as Wolfe, Vicek and Munro, there may very easily be two or more goals for Sparta by half time.

Manager Alec McNab plans to give Milt Zensen another chance to win a fullback berth and he will squeeze Eddie Kane into the lineup if he can possibly do so. Roe has been suffering from a "charley horse" and may not go further than half time, but he will surely start if he can run at all. Rodriguez, dividing the goal assignment with Hamm, will return to duty. The Shamrocks are fortunate in having two such excellent goal guardians.

The Shamrocks will be seeking their eighth straight victory.

Sparta was beaten once in 15 games this year. One match resulted in a tie score.

Ribby Murphy will blow the starting whistle at 2:30 p. m.

Several other world famous professional figure skaters have also been invited to take part in the charity event by Mrs. Brown. Among them are Bobby Duffy and Eric Waite, famous clowns of the ice, and Evalyn Chandler, for several years international professional skating champion.

Champion and Former Titleholder Sign for June Bout

gardless of who wins, Madison Square Garden will be without first call on the champion for the first time since early in Tex Rickard's regime as promoter.

At the conclusion of today's formalities, Schmeling was first to say he hoped and expected to win.

"And I would be glad to come back to defend the title—even if I didn't have that $25,000 forfeit up," he remarked.

Braddock, customarily grim visaged, said:

"It's a laugh to me, everybody picking Schmeling. We'll see about that on June 3."

Why Braddock Backed Down.

There was much speculation as to what caused the overnight right-about-face of Braddock and Gould.

One report was that Mike Jacobs, feeling an indoor show between Braddock and Louis would mean little or no profit, was ready to toss the Atlantic City idea out of the window and that he promised Schmeling last night he would not let Louis, whom he controls, meet Braddock.

According to the same source, Schmeling communicated this promise to Chairman John J. Phelan in private today. When Gould heard of it, he gave in.

Gould said he figured there was nothing to be gained by delaying longer if Jacobs was weakening on a Braddock-Louis go for which the champ had been guaranteed $300,000.

Phelan talked with both Schmeling and Braddock privately. Then he called in Commissioners Bill Brown and Col. D. Walker Wear. Ten minutes later the match was made.

"We are ready to accept a contract for a June fight with the understanding that both Braddock and Schmeling can fight anybody in the meantime except Joe Louis," he announced.

"That is goot. I am satisfied," said Schmeling.

"And you, Mr. Gould?"

"Why do you mention Joe Louis?" asked Gould. "His name hasn't been mentioned here. Can you stop me from fighting in New Jersey?"

"We have nothing to do with New Jersey," replied Phelan. "But we feel Mr. Braddock should act for the best interests of boxing and meet Schmeling first."

"I want to talk to Jim a minute," said Gould.

The two whispered in a corner, then returned to announce: "You win."

"We are on record here," Gould said, "as accepting the judgment of this commission."

Taylor, disappointed at his failure to sign Braddock for the Atlantic City bout, said: "It is too bad, I think the show would have been a money maker. The offer stands."

JOE LOUIS' MANAGERS CHALLENGE JURISDICTION OF NEW YORK BOARD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 12.—Authority of the New York State Athletic Commission to call off a proposed Braddock-Louis no-decision contest was challenged today by Julian Black and John Roxborough, co-managers of Joe Louis, Detroit heavyweight contender

Informed that Champion Jim Braddock and Max Schmeling today signed a contract for a heavyweight championship fight next June 3, and that the contract included a proviso that Braddock can not go through with a proposed no-decision fight with Louis, Black said:

"The New York State Commission has no jurisdiction in Atlantic City (site of the proposed match with Braddock). I don't know what the Braddock-Schmeling agreement is all about: but if the promoters arrange a Louis-Braddock fight, we're ready to go through with it.

"If we don't meet Braddock next year, that perfectly agreeable with us. We already have signed for $400,000 worth of work next year including a match with Maxie Rosenbloom in Los Angeles."

Louis himself had nothing to say about the announcement from New York, and referred questioners to his managers. He is in Cleveland winding up training for a fight Monday night with Eddie Simms, Cleveland heavyweight.

Southern Conference Athletes Must Maintain Higher Scholastic Average Than Student Minimum

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 12.—College athletes, under a regulation adopted by the Southern Conference today must maintain a higher scholastic standing than the minimum required of students to remain in the various schools.

This action climaxed the final session of a stormy annual meeting which saw the controversial Graham plan for eliminating subsidization abolished, but a substitute proposal adopted which still kept the organization firmly pledged to anti-subsidization policies.

The University of Virginia's resignation, which came with dramatic suddenness when the conference convened late yesterday, was "held in suspension" for a period of a year with an expression of hope that the Charlottesville charter member would reconsider and return to the fold.

Virginia, however, lost the annual boxing tournament which it had held since the inception of the event 11 years ago when in view of the withdrawal of the institution, the site was transferred to the University of Maryland. This move will break the Cavalier's spectacular string of six ring championships and will take from the old dominion what was regarded as one of its most colorful athletic spectacles.

The conference scholastic measure will require participants in intercollegiate athletics to have passed 21 semester hours, or the equivalent, for the preceding year in 1937-38. For the next session, 1938-1939, the requirement was advanced to 24 hours. Exceptions were made in the case of graduate students, who will be certified as eligible by the deans of the respective schools. The conference previously had no uniform scholastic minimum.

Dr. William H. Wannamaker, dean of men at Duke University and an outspoken foe of many of Dr. Graham's anti-subsidization proposals, was elected president of the conference to succeed Forest Fletcher, Washington and Lee.

FALLS SCARCE IN AMATEUR MAT TOURNEY

Athletes who worked in deadly seriousness entertained a good crowd of spectators with plenty of defensive skill as the semifinal matches of the North Side Y. M. C. A. amateur wrestling tournament were fought to a conclusion last night. Over two hours were required to settle the issue in 10 matches, leaving finalists in five weight divisions.

It was all work and little play as the boys battled grimly to avoid being pinned, and as a result a fall was gained in only two of the 10 semifinals.

About 300 persons witnessed the program and generously applauded the more skillful moves of the wrestlers. They were really quite excited over the Joe Szuch-Ivan Oberdan match, a semifinal in the 155-pound class, in which two extra periods were necessary to determine a winner. Blood ran from several battered noses, but the boys took their punishment without the face making and grunting of the professionals. Bert Kleeman, in one of the heavyweight semifinals, became a bit too ambitious and lifted his opponent, Hubert Roe, too highin making a body slam, and the fall was ruled illegal. The amateurs are not permitted to lift an opponent higher than the knees in effecting a slam. Kleeman had his foe shoulder high. After the illegal drop, he started over and won quickly with a legal fall.

The results:

SEMIFINAL RESULTS.

ZACH TAYLOR SIGNS AS SAN ANTONIO MANAGER

Zach Taylor, former Brooklyn coach, has been signed as player-manager of the San Antonio Club of the Texas League, a farm of the Browns, it was announced by the Browns yesterday.

Taylor, a catcher, broke in with Brooklyn in 1920 and later played with the Boston Nationals, the Yankees and the Cubs when Hornsby was manager.

He will take over his new duties when the club goes into training.

GREEN BAY IS 2-1 FAVORITE TO WIN "PRO" LEAGUE TITLE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The Green Bay Packers and the Boston Red Skins will meet tomorrow in the Polo Grounds for the championship of the National Professional Football League.

The Packers, who went through the regulation 12-game league season with 10 victories, one defeat and one tie, are held as 2-to-1 favorites to whip the young and rugged Red Skins, but in the event of rain it is likely they will be backed down to no better than even money.

Boasting one of football's greatest "pitchers" in Arnold (Flash) Herber, and the league's outstanding "catcher," Don Hutson, the Packers depend almost entirely on their aerial offensive. However, their overhead attack is not so delicately executed that just a little rain will strip it of its effectiveness.

But, if the game is played under conditions similar to last Sunday, when the Red Skins sloshed their way through a morass of mud and rain to a 14-0 win over the New York Giants, it is probable they'll have their hands full with the Boston Brownies.

Beat Redskins Twice.

The Packers trimmed the Red Skins twice during the season, but Coach Curley Lambeau is fearful that his charges are holding the Eastern division title holders too lightly.

"Personally, I have a high respect for the Red Skins," said Lambert. "They have a tremendous psychological advantage over us. They're on the rise, having scored decisive victories in their last three games. I'm afraid my boys are holding them too cheaply."

Ray Flaherty, the red-headed farmer who has signalized his debut as a coach by piloting the Red Skins into the playoff for the Ed Thorp Memorial Trophy, believes the Bostonians have at least an even chance, provided the field isn't frozen. Then their running attack, centered around Cliff Battles, will be handicapped.

PICARD SHOOTS A 63, FIVE UNDER PAR, TO LEAD NASSAU GOLF

By the Associated Press.

NASSAU, Bahamas, Dec. 12. — Bushy haired Henry Picard took a four-stroke lead today in the $4000 Nassau golf open with a 63 that was five under par.

Par on the short course is 68.

The field of 95 golfers will play 36 more holes tomorrow and finish the 72-hole tournament Monday in quest of the $800 top money.

Except for a lapse on one hole, Picard's chipping and putting were deadly. He rapped in a 20-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the sixth hole, negotiated the other outgoing holes in par figures, and rounded the turn in 33 strokes.

Coming home he really hit his stride and clicked off five consecutive birdies. After a prosaic par on the fifteenth hole, his touch deserted him on the sixteenth. There his second shot went over the green, he chipped back weakly and three-putted for a six, one over par. He fashioned par figures on the last two holes, however, for a 30 on the second nine.

Eight golfers finished the day even with par 68. John Bulla of Chicago, Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., Dick Metz of Chicago, Willie MacFarlane of Hollywood, Fla., Harry Cooper of Chicago, Pat Sawyer of Minneapolis, Sam Parks Jr. of Pittsburgh, and Joe Belfort of Detroit were five strokes of the pace.

Leroy R. Mallory of Noroton, Conn., last year's winner with a 271, nursed a wrist sprained in the P. G. A. championship at Pinehurst, N. C., and was far back with a 73.

C. C. Tauntner of Washington, D. C., scored a 75 to lead the amateur competitors.

AKRON U. SUSPENDED BY OHIO CONFERENCE

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 12.—The Ohio Athletic Conference expelled the University of Akron from membership last night by a vote of 32 to 8 for using ineligible football players during the 1936 season.

Dean Fred Ayer of Akron protested that each of the five boys ruled ineligible by the conference was eligible under University of Akron rules but that they were banned through retroactive legislation passed by the conference last May.

VILLAGE HAS CHANCE TODAY TO CLOSE IN ON LEADERS

Whereas in most cases the group leaders are opposing tail-end clubs in this afternoon's Municipal Soccer League schedule, there is promise of a real contest at Fairground Park Grounds. Two where the Irish Village team opposes the league-leading St. Edwards. Only two points separate these two clubs and a victory would boost the Villagers into at least a tie for second place, possibly a tie for the lead.

The Stag club, tied for second place now with the Piegges, seems to be in position to add two points to its total in meeting the Breimeyer team, but the latter club is not any push-over. Last Sunday, in their first game of the season, the Breimeyers knocked off the Irish Village team, 1 to 0.

In the Intermediate Division game at Carondelet Park the Nebcos, champions of the Junior Division last season, are out to win their fifth straight league game, facing the Kriegshausers. They tuned up for this game by defeating the German Sport Club team, 3 to 0, in an impromptu night game last Thursday. In the Fairground group of the Intermediate Division, Andy Fredrick's steamroller bears down upon the Haps team. Two good games are in prospect at this grounds (No. 4) with the Carlstroms meeting the St. Edwards in the first game.

Soccer League Leaders Meet Optimist Club

Amelio Cueto's Spanish soccer players will be out to protect their one-point lead in the St. Louis Professional League race when they oppose the Optimist Club in the first game of the doubleheader at West Side Park this afternoon. Their closest pursuers, Club Lotus, oppose the Town Criers in the second game.

Joe Garcia, valuable utility man of the Burke team, is scheduled to start at center forward this afternoon, according to Manager Cueto, Garcia has played at left fullback for many seasons, but in the absence of an outstanding center forward, he is now doing a rescue act at that position. Julio Gonzales is expected to return to his center halfback position after a one week's absence.

In the absence of Elmer Benoist and Jack Simmerman, the Town Criers are forced to do some drastic maneuvering to put a winning team on the field. Manager Phil Kavanaugh is making no change in his regular lineup.

SEABISCUIT SETS TRACK RECORD IN WINNING $8000 STAKE

Makes Runaway Out of World's Fair Handicap at Bay Meadows Track Before 25,000 Fans.

By the Associated Press.

SAN MATEO, Cal., Dec. 12.—Seabiscuit, owned by Mrs. C. S. Howard of San Francisco, made a runaway of the World's Fair Handicap at Bay Meadows today, leading all the way to win the season's prize event by five lengths.

Wildman was second and Giant Killer third. Seabiscuit ran the mile and three-sixteenths in 1:55 4-5, a new track record, and only four-fifths of a second off the American record held by Discovery.

The victory was worth $8000.

Mutuels paid $4.10, $3.40 and $2.20 on the winner. Wildland paid $8.20 and $3 and Giant Killer $2.20.

Twenty-five thousand fans saw Seabiscuit, three-year-old son of Hard Tack and Swing On, sweep to the front at the break and quickly race into a commanding lead. With Jockey Jack Pollard aboard, Seabiscuit pulled away from every challenge, and coasted to victory after two brief thrusts by Wildland and Giant Killer.

Infantry, high-ranking stablemate of Giant Killer, carrying top weight of 117 pounds, made an early bid but flattened out and finished last.

Today's triumph was the second in as many starts at Bay Meadows for Seabiscuit since the colt came west from New York. He was made the favorite today on the basis of his other appearance here when he established a track record of 1:36 for the mile.

Seabiscuit was acquired from the Wheatley Stables for $8000 last summer. The colt is a nominee for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and will be pointed especially for that event.

A field of seven horses went postward, Coldwater being a late withdrawal. Tick On, eight-year-old fading star, finished sixth ahead of Infantry. Noble Count was fourth and Watersplash fifth.

Eight Boxing Bouts on Mayor's Charity Card

Winding up the boxing portion of the program, George Tracy and Ed Burke, matchmaking committee for Mayor Dickmann's boxing and wrestling show at the Municipal Auditorium Tuesday night, signed Monroe Harrison and Charley Richardson, light-heavyweights, yesterday for a three-round match.

This is the eighth amateur boxing match signed by the two matchmakers for the program and will augment a program that includes two heavyweight wrestling matches and the annual Fireman's wrestling tournament.

Harrison is one of the hardest hitting boxers in the district and was formerly Negro light-heavyweight champion. He was forced out of competition last winter because of a broken hand but is training hard at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A., for a comeback.

Seven other outstanding amateur fighters have been signed so far and in each case they will take on a champion from Illinois. The list of amateurs on the card contains the name of all the principal champions and contenders for Ozark A. A. U. titles in the past two years.

The flyweight division is represented by Forest Potts, who represented the Ozark A. A. U. in the national championships last winter; Eric Koberg and Lew Wallach, featherweights; Al Brendle and Jack Conway, lightweights; Al Beauhuld, welterweight, Clarence Jones, middleweight, and Harrison, the light-heavyweight.

Five entries have been received for the firemen's tournament and include the defending champion, Otto "Whitey" Brexler, Piesti Pistorius, Matthew Matesick, Charles Thotus and Tommy Godfrey.

Proceeds of the show will go to defray expenses of the Mayor's Christmas dinner for the needy and underprivileged of the city.

SILAS COMES FROM BEHIND TO WIN BY HEAD AT NEW ORLEANS

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 12.—Silas, three-year-old son of Crucifixion, owned by Mrs. X. Franzheim, won the Jefferson Park Handicap by a head at the Fair Grounds today and rewarded his backers $8.20 for $2 in the mutuels.

Silas came from behind under a rousing ride by Porter Roberts in the $1500 added feature. The horse was forced to race to the outside rail to pass and wear down Reelon, Coward and Coffey Fily. The drive was exciting and thrilled a large crowd.

The winner paid $4 to show and $3.40 to place. Reelon paid $11.80 to place and $7 to show.

Mrs. Nick Burger's Bon Centime came in a well-beaten third and paid $3.60 to show. Mrs. Ed Haughton's Cascapedia was fourth.

Maracabala, owned by B. Hernandez, set the pace, closely pursued by Reelon, Bon Centime and Ste. Louise. Silas was far back in the early running, but made up for lost ground while skimming the rail.

Entering the stretch, Roberts pulled wide to avoid the soft footing near the rail, rounded the stragglers and set sail for Reelon which seemed to have opened up a safe lead over Maracabala.

Silas proved equal to the occasion and slowly wore down Reelon. Bon Centime raced in the running all the way, but retired to third after making a mild bid to get to the front.

The race was a one mile event.

AGED VACILLATE BEATS BUCK LANGHORNE IN CHARLES TOWN RACE

By the Associated Press.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 12.—Leading all the way, Vacillate, veteran nine-year-old mare owned by A. C. Compton, barely lasted to earn a head decision over the favored Buck Langhorne in the running of the Mingo purse, a sprint of about four and a half furlongs for all ages, feature of the closing day program at the Charles Town track today. Sun Sweep was third.

Vacillate took the lead at the quarter and was leading Sun Sweep by two lengths coming into the stretch. Outrun up to this stage, Buck Langhorne closed with a powerful rush and quickly disposing of Sun Sweep, was wearing the winner down.

Jockey F. Cusimano had the mount on Vacillate, which ran the distance in 53 4-5 seconds and returned $23.60 for a $2 mutuel ticket.

EASTERN HOCKEY LEAGUE TEAMS WILL BE BUSY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The International - American Hockey League standing, a tighter affair than ever because of the revision made after Buffalo withdrew from the circuit, may be in for a thorough overhauling this week-end.

Springfield, Eastern section leader by a point over Philadelphia, and the Providence Reds, in third place a point behind the Ramblers, each are slated for two games in as many days. Syracuse and Pittsburgh, just as close together in the Western section, both play with the Hornets tackling a pair of games and Syracuse limited to one by the cancellation of the game with Buffalo originally carded for Sunday.

The other three teams are due for a game apiece and as a result, counting in the win-lose-tie possibilities, almost anything may happen to the standings before tomorrow night.

Providence and Philadelphia come to grips in the Quaker City today, while Springfield takes on Pittsburgh's Hornets and Syracuse plays at Cleveland. The Reds and the Syracuse Stars each hold a decisive decision over their Saturday rivals.

Tomorrow night Springfield's Indians move on to New Haven to meet the Eagles, whom they have walloped twice, while Pittsburgh visits Providence. There may be all kinds of action in this contest as the Hornets try to duplicate the 9-0 victory they scored at home and the Reds try to gain revenge for that licking.

CUBA TO SPONSOR AMERICA'S CUP TENNIS

HAVANA.—The America's Cup international tennis tourney was announced today by Carlos L. Henriquez Jr., Cuban Sports Commissioner. The tournament, the first of its kind in Latin America, will be conducted in conjunction with the Cuban National Sports Festival at Havana between Dec. 26 and Jan. 2.

Cognizant of the fact that Latin American netmen do not at present rank with the first 10 players in the United States, Henriquez is ready to propose a plan with a twofold purpose to the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

First, he would rather have the United States send a team of outstanding junior tennis players from this country and thereby make more evenly contested matches. The plan, Henriquez believes, would lead to the improvement of the brand of tennis the island republic. The improvement of technique in all lines of sports endeavor is the central purpose of the new national program of sports for all in Cuba.

Secondly, the plan would be beneficial to youngsters of America fortunate enough to be selected for the play in the America's cup. It would serve as baptism in international play.

There will be no effort to emulate the Davis Cup competition in this tournament but the purpose is the same.

DRAKE WILL PLAY MIAMI U. IN 1937

By the Associated Press.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Dec. 12.—The University of Miami announced today it had added Drake University of Des Moines, Ia., to its 1937 football schedule. The game will be played here Nov. 25.

The Hurricanes also are negotiating to bring Catholic University of Washington, 1936 Orange Bowl winners, here Nov. 12. Both games are two-year agreements.

Flyers, Seeking 13th Victory In Game With Tulsa Six, Have Scored 48 Goals This Season

Not only are the Flyers making a runaway of the race for first place in the American Hockey Association but the chief battle for individual scoring honors is largely between members of the St. Louis Club.

The Flyers now have won 12 of 14 contests and the other two were ties giving them 24 points. The St. Louisans lead their nearest competitors by 16 points, or eight full games.

Tonight Coach Johnny MacKinnon's men meet the Tulsa Oilers at the Arena and are not at all afraid of the 13 jinx. A triumph for the Flyers would be their thirteenth of the season.

Pete Palangio tops the individual scorers with 22 points, representing 12 goals and 10 assists, four more than Oscar Hansen, who has counted 10 goals and has eight assists. Pete Mitchel is third with six goals and six assists, while Frank Ingram, showing great improvement over his early season play, has three goals and eight assists to be fourth. Bobby Burns is seventh with seven goals and two assists, while Ollie Mulvihill has four goals and three assists.

48 Goals in 14 Games.

All told the Flyers have counted 48 goals in 14 games, while St. Paul is next with 20. Only 19 goals have been counted against St. Louis, the lowest of any of the six clubs in the circuit.

MacKinnon is particularly anxious to win in order to keep the Flyers' record clean before meeting the Chicago Blackhawks of the National League in an exhibition match at the Arena Wednesday night.

The Hawks are having tough sledding this season, being last in their division of the major league, but MacKinnon knows, as does everyone who has paid any attention to hockey, that there is a difference between minor and major league play in hockey about the same as between American Association and major league baseball.

They're Still in the Minors.

Thus, while the Hawks are in the cellar, they are still big leaguers and the Flyers, on top in the Association, still are not in the majors.

However, St. Louis fans have been anxious to see their favorites take a crack at a big league team and the Hawks, anxious for any kind of a victory, may surprise by turning on the heat more than is customary when a major club plays a team of lower classification.

Tulsa will, of course, present Shrimp McPherson, former Flyer coach, at center ice on one of the forward lines.

The Oilers have been hard for the Flyers to beat this season. In two games St. Louis won one, 1 to 0 and tied the other 2 to 2.

Cliff "Fido" Purpur, speedy skater of last year's Flyers, who has just signed his contract is expected to be dressed and will get into the game for a time. He arrived here in time to workout yesterday.

May Drop Two Forwards.

There will be quite a struggle among the forwards for the next two weeks as probably two or more of them may be dropped after the first of January when the teams will be forced to cut to 12 men. After that only 12 may be dressed for a contest but others may be retained on the payroll for emergency purposes.

Right now there are 16 on the Flyer roster and the four who are expected to fight it out for a job or two are Don Olsen, Purpur Duke McDonald, Walter Harnott and Desse Roche.

After tonight's game, the St. Louis player will spend tomorrow and Tuesday preparing for the Hawks. They are scheduled to play Minneapolis at the Arena Friday night and St. Paul next Sunday night. The Flyers will not leave home again until New Year's day when they go to Kansas City for a game.

APPLING HIT .388 TO WIN AMERICAN LEAGUE SWAT TITLE

27 Players Hit in Select Circle for 1936 Campaign, Official Figures Show—Several Records Set.

By Herman Wecke.

When the major league baseball magnates voted to "de-rabbit" the baseball at the meeting held in New York last week, they probably had before them the American League's official batting averages, released today.

The figures bring to light some interesting facts. The statistics showed that 27 men hit .300 or better—five more than was the case in 1935; 24 players scored 100 or more runs; nine made more than 200 hits; 18 batted in 100 or more tallies; nine hit for more than 300 bases, while three athletes had more than 40 home runs to their credit. So much for the individuals. In team batting, new figures were established or tied for runs scored, runs batted in and home runs. The clubs hit for a total of 758 four-baggers, with the Yankees showing the way with 182.

That the Browns need more "punch" is indicated by the statistics. Of the 27 who batted for .300 averages, only two were members of the Browns. Beau Bell, up from the Texas League, was the leader for Hornsby's clan with a mark of .344. Harlond Clift was next in line with .302. Other averages for the Brownie players were as follows: Bottomley, serving his first year in the American League, .298; Coleman, .292; Solters, .291; Lary, .289; Pepper, .282; West, .278; Carey, .273, and Hemsley, .273. Bell's .344 placed him tenth among the league's regulars.

Browns Sixth in Batting.

As a team the Browns finished sixth, ahead of the costly Red Sox and Athletics, with a mark of .279. Hornsby's men scored 804 runs in the 155 games played and yielded more tallies than any other club—1064. These figures show that whereas the Browns averaged 5.2 runs a game, the rival clubs had a mark of 6.9.

Luke Appling, of the White Sox, is the new batting champion of the league and is, incidentally, the first shortstop in the history of the junior organization to gain the honor. Appling finished with an average of .388, 39 percentage points better than the figure with which Buddy Myer of the Senators captured the title in 1935. Earl Averill, Indians' outfielder, was second to Appling among the regulars with an average of .378.

In team hitting, the Indians took the honors with .304, while the Yankees and Tigers finished tied for second, each with a .300 mark. The combined average of the eight clubs was .289, with the batters pounding out 12,657 safeties. Included in this number, in addition to 758 home runs, were 2400 two-base hits and 548 triples. The clubs piled up 558 bases, with Lyn Lary, Browns' shortstop, the individual leader with 37 to his credit.

Gehrig Proved Real Star.

Although he did not win the batting championship, Lou Gehrig, the Yankees' first sacker, who ran his streak of consecutive games to 1808, was an outstanding star. Hitting .354, Columbia Lou scored 167 runs, made 205 hits, made 403 total bases on his safeties and hit 49 homers to top the league. It was the eleventh consecutive season in which Gehrig scored more than 100 runs; the fifth time he hit for better than 400 total bases; the sixth time he drove in more than 150 runs; the fifth time he hit more than 40 homers and the third time he topped the league in four-baggers, his total of 49 being the best he has accomplished during his big league career.

Among the clubs, the Yankees "stole the show." Among the marks which fell in the pennant drive of Joe McCarthy's men were the following: 2703 total bases, 315 doubles, 83 triples, 182 home runs and 1065 runs scored.

During May the Yankees put on a swat spree, which toppled seven records. The veteran Tony Lazzeri led the barrage which began May 21, ran through a doubleheader on May 23 and finished May 24. The team had 11 homers in the May 23 nightcap and the May 24 contest. Lazzeri hit seven homers in the four games, six in the last three and five in the last two. In the May 24 battle he twice hit for the circuit with the bases filled. In that contest the Yankees batted in 25 runs and amassed 27 extra bases on long hits.

Other record-setting outbursts were staged by the Yanks again!—on July 17, Washington on Aug. 22 and Cleveland on July 9, each team hitting three home runs during the course of a single inning. Joe DiMaggio, sensational Yankee rookie who made 206 hits to become the twelfth major leaguer to top the 200-mark in his first season, went the team totals one better by contributing two homers himself in a single inning on June 24, that feat also tying a mark.

The best batting streak of the year was put on by Trosky. The Cleveland star hit safely in 28 consecutive games from July 5 through Aug. 2, making 52 hits in 126 times at bat.

MADELYN HORN TO SEEK SKATING TITLE AT ARENA ICE CARNIVAL

Madelyn Horn of Oconomowoc, Wis., one of the country's outstanding women speed skaters for the past three years, yesterday sent in her entry blank to the Missouri Skating Association for the annual Silver Skates ice-skating carnival at the Arena Sunday afternoon, Dec. 27.

Miss Horn will make a determined bid for the Silver Skates open division title, a crown which she has just missed here the past couple of years, and also will defend the Southwestern championship which she won in the 440-yard event at the Arena last winter.

The Wisconsin skater will undoubtedly rank as favorite in the women's division this year, as her nemesis of the last two seasons, Kit Klein of Buffalo, will not be here to defend her championship. Miss Klein won Silver Skates title in 1934 and 1935 and Olympic championships last winter. She has retired from active competition.

Bee Slater to Seek Title.

One of Miss Horn's leading rivals in this year's event probably will be the present leader in the city championship series, Bee Slater, speedy skater and softball player. Mrs. Slater entered the Silver Skates last week and is working out daily at the Winter Garden for the championship trials.

In addition to the Southwestern Silver Skates title which she owns, Miss Horn is Great Lakes open women's champion, Wisconsin State champion for the past three years, and was North American indoor champion in 1934.

A third important entry registered during the past week was that of Lamar Ottsen of St. Louis, Silver Skates open division champion and probably the greatest blade artist ever developed locally. He has held one or two Silver Skates championships each year since 1931.

Outstanding Skaters Invited.

Other entries from leading local skaters and from many of the outstanding speedsters of the country are expected in the next few days. Invitations have been sent to more than a score of the country's principal stars.

There also will be classes for novice skaters and for beginners. Entries for these events are being received by officials of the Missouri Skating Association at the Winter Garden and at the Arena ice rink.

President Henry Kemper of the Missouri Association said last night he anticipates one of the largest entry lists ever recorded for the event. Assisting him in arranging the carnival are Ted Young, secretray; E. J. Wallace, chairman of the board; Art Willow, Charles Geve

STARS OF MINOR SCHOOLS HONORED IN 'LITTLE ALL-AMERICA'

AND FIGURES INDICATE THEY EQUAL BIG FELLOWS

Outstanding Players Picked from Schools of Between 500 and 1000 Enrollment by Associated Press.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—This year's "Little All-America," selected by Associated Press survey from the small-college footballers who romp the gridirons from coast to coast, presents an aggregation of talent that belies its designation.

With a line averaging 200 pounds and 6 feet 2 inches, from end to end, clearing the way for a quartet of unusually versatile ball-handlers, the team's manpower qualifies for competition in any league.

The selections represent the pick of players who annually perform without benefit of ballyhoo or headlines, except for such recognition they get in their own bailiwicks or when they tackle the bigger fellows. From their ranks each year professional teams gather talent that often steals the big league show from more illustriously built-up All-America performers.

With the exception of Norman Cooper, captain of the Howard (Ala.) team and choice for center on the 1936 "Little All-America," the selections have been made from colleges with a student body well under the 1000 mark. Most players represent schools with less than 500 undergraduates.

Two Notable Exceptions.

Dividing lines, however, have become increasingly difficult to draw, on the basis of either the size of the student body or the competitive class involved. For "Little All America" purposes Western Reserve, although not playing in a major conference, has been omitted because of the size of its enrollment, exceeding 9000. On the other hand colleges like Colgate and Gonzaga, with less than 1000 students, compete in the so-called big leagues and likewise have been passed up in the accompanying selections.

Kicking off, we find the East, back in power after many mediocre seasons, filling four places on the "Little All-America" eleven. The South, Middle West and Far West occupy two places, the Southwest one.

Lone repeater is Trinity's Mickey Kobrosky, powerhouse back of the Hartford (Conn.) college. Mickey is rated tops as an all around back by New England observers. His running mates are: Di.. Riffle, another versatile backfielder at Albright (Pa.) College; Douglas Locke, diminutive but spectacular performer for St. Mary's of Texas; and Dick Weisgerber of Willamette College (Salem, Ore.), 215 pounds of ball carrying dynamite who has picked up the "Little All-America" trail where his teammate, Johnny Oravec, left off.

Lots of Good Ball Toters.

Riffle, in rugged small-college company, averaged around 130 yards from scrimmage per game, while also doing heavy duty on defense. Weisgerber was on a scoring spree all season in the Pacific Northwest, passing for long gains between his touchdown dashes. Locke, 60-minute player despite his size, has electrified observers from Washington, D. C., to San Francisco with his elusive ball-carrying. Locke gained 151 yards from scrimmage in eight games.

Texas produced a flock of fine backs, including Jim Neill, of Texas Tech, credited with outpassing the great Sammy Baugh on the day Tech upset Texas Christian. Johnny Stovall of North Texas Teachers was another standout.

In the Southern California sector, Howard Yeager of Santa Barbara was a terror, averaging 10.6 yards per crack from scrimmage. Jalvin Hutchison of Red Oak, Ia., tallied 84 points for Whittier College.

The Eastern crop of stars included Fred King of Hobart, Roger Keith of Tufts, Joe Szur of Canisius, and Ted Mazza of Moravian. For Baldiwn-Wallace, in Ohio, Ken Noble did most of the blocking for the high-scoring Norman Schoen. Another great blocking back was George (Sage Brush) McConnell, of Monmouth, Ill., a 205-pound converted tackle.

In the South, Jud Hudson starred for the unbeaten and untied Tennessee Wesleyan team. Mercer's Allan Bloodworth was hailed as the "Mighty Mite" by Georgia writers. George Miller of Rollins, Fla., turned in a flock of dazzling performances, including one game in which he tallied four times on dashes of 25, 70, 70 and 75 yards.

Guard Is 6 Feet 4½ Inches.

Pro league scouts already have had their attention called to exploits by "Little All-America" linemen. Henry Hammond of Southwestern at Memphis, which upset Vanderbilt, is rated next to Louisiana State's Gaynell Tinsley by many Southern observers. Leo Deutsch, giant St. Benedict's (Kan.) wingman, captained an unbeaten, untied team by doing everything the book calls for and, a la Larry Kelley, adding a few touches of his own.

By being classed "among the best tackles in the Pittsburgh district," George Mike of West Virginia Wesleyan needs no further recommendation. They don't come any tougher-fibred, in any part of the country. Mike was the No. 1 reason for Wesleyan's upset of Duquesne, conqueror of Pittsburgh.

To make room for Ralph Niehaus, giant tackle playing for Dayton, O., Douglas Oldershaw of Santa Barbara State was moved to one of the guard positions. Oldershaw, a Coast standout, can handle either job. George Anderson of the undefeated Middlebury (Vt.) team, picked for guard, is the tallest "Little All-America," towering 6 feet 4½ inches.

PASADENA GAME ELEVENS READY TO BEGIN TRIP TO CALIFORNIA

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 12.—Adverse hullabaloo over the Rose Bowl football game having quited down, bigwigs of Pasadena's tournament of roses and the rival schools, Washington and Pittsburgh, are making strenuous efforts to put the affair over in traditional fashion.

Present plans call for the Pitt squad to entrain for the coast Dec. 16, arriving three days later. Coach Jimmy Phelan and his Washington Huskies should pull in from the Northwest along about the same time.

Athletic officials of Washington claim some 50,000 tickets have been ordered and paid for and express belief that the bowl and its 85,000 seats will be occupied Jan. 1.

Advance agents for Pitt, feeling a little like orphans of the story or unwanted relatives, slipped into town and inquired if it was safe to remind the countryside that the Panthers, whether wanted or not not have a powerful football team.

The answer was that no one ever doubted Dr. Jock Sutherland had a powerful team, and that the Panthers, with their crushing defeat of Notre Dame, Nebraska and similar elevens, would offer Washington a whale of a battle on even terms.

The anti-Pitt attitude, it was explained, was based on the fact that the Panthers performed dismally in three previous appearances in the bowl, the fact that sentiment among patrons and sports writers favored a bid to Louisiana State or Alabama, and the final act that this sentiment was never sounded out before the selection was announced, although Southern California football fans pay the freight, or most of it.

19 PRINCIPIA GRID PLAYERS GIVEN LETTERS

The Principia College has awarded football "letters" to 19 members of the 1936 squad. Of the total eight players are seniors who played their last game against Culver-Stockton College last month.

Capt. Tom Mills, University City, the Stitt brothers, Earl and Bob, from St. Louis and Paul Haines, San Diego, Cal., were awarded numerals for the fourth successive season. Mills played tackle while the other three were backfield players.

Charles Spaulding, Norwalk, Conn., newly elected captain and Dick Clute, St. Louis, were awarded their third successive football letter, Spaulding played end while Clute was a tackle.

The Principia team won three of its seven contests during the season. Culver-Stockton College was the only team able to defeat the Elsah, Ill. squad by more than one touchdown. The Canton (Mo.) eleven won 12 to 0.

Culver Poloists Win.

CULVER, Ind., Dec. 12. — Culver Military Acedemy defeated the Lawrenceville (N. J.) interscholastic indoor polo champions 12 to 11 here today. Robert Osmun, Lawrenceville back, led the scoring with six goals. During the contest the lead changed hands four times. Rubio, Culver captain, and Marcus Day were spearheads of the Culver offensive with five goals apiece.

SOUTHWESTERN SCHOOLS ASKED TO PAY WORTHY ATHLETES WAGE

DALLAS, Dec. 12.—As a "feeler" in the direction of action either taken or proposed in several other major conferences, Dr. J. C. Dolley of the University of Texas athletic council, today proposed to the meeting of Southwest conference officials that athletes should be subsidized.

Dolley did not attempt to mask his meaning. He declared he personally favored "open subsidization," uggesting that worthy students who display both on the athletic field and in the classroom should be given a monthly salary of $50.

The proposal had been foreshadowed by previous motions in conference officials' meetings. At least once before a similar plan had been voted down.

Dolley's suggestion was referred to a committee, consisting of himself as chairman, Dr. J. S. McIntosh of Southern Methodist, and Dr. J. T. McCants of Rice Institute. A report is expected at the meeting of the circuit officials next May, at the University of Texas in Austin.

Nebraska Engages a Coach.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 12. — Adolph J. Lewandowski, head basketball coach at the University of Montana, will join the University of Nebraska coaching staff next year, Head Coach D. X. Bible announced tonight.

The association awarded the Western amateur tournament to the Los Angeles Country Club, Aug. 31-Sept. 6, and announced that the Western junior tournament will be held in August, either at the Cherry Hill Club in Chicago or at the Plum Hollow Club in Detroit.

Without discussion, and on recommendation of the board of directors, the association decided to continue without the stymie for at least another year. The association abolished it last spring.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.

IT was Christmas eve, 1917, in the midst of the World War when Mrs. Wilson handed her husband a little gift. It was from the committee in charge of the Theodorus Bailey Myers Mason House, the war relief center of the Woman's Naval Service. The package that the patriotic women who had prepared it called a "Christmas Good Cheer Bag," and more than 50,000 of them had gone to the men in service overseas. One went to President Wilson as commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy as visual evidence that the women of America had not forgotten the American soldiers at the front.

With the eagerness of a small boy the President unwrapped his Christmas Good Cheer bag. Within it were little comforts and gifts, trench mirror, pocket comb, chewing gum, tooth paste, handkerchiefs, games, writing paper and envelopes and several other items wrapped in a bright colored comfort bag. He declared that it was his best Christmas gift that year because it told him that the men under his command were, indeed, not forgotten by the people of the land.

WHAT a President feels on Christmas day in the White House was expressed once by President Theodore Roosevelt in a letter he sent in 1902 to a young friend, now James A. Garfield of Cleveland, son of the former President of the United States thanking him for a gift. The letter follows:

"Jimmikins: Among all the presents I got, I don't think there was one I appreciated more than yours; for I was brought up to admire and respect your grandfather, and I have a very great fondness and esteem for your father. It always seems to me as if you children were being brought up the way that mine are. Yesterday Archie got, among his presents, a small rifle from me, a pair of riding boots from his mother. He won't be able to use the rifle until next summer, but he has gone off very happy in the riding boots for a ride on the calico pony Algonquin, the one you rode the other day. Yesterday morning at a quarter of seven all the children were up and dressed and began to hammer at the door of their mother's and my room, in which their six stockings, all bulging out with queer angles and rotundities, were hanging from the fireplace. So their mother and I got up, shut the window, lit the fire, taking down the stockings, of course, put on our wrappers and prepared to admit the children. But first there was a surprise for me, also for their good mother, for Archie had a little Christmas tree of his own which he had rigged up with the help of one of the carpenters in a big closet; and we all had to look at the tree and each of us got a present off of it. There was also one present each for Jack the dog, Tom Quartz the kitten, and Algonquin the pony, whom Archie would no more think of neglecting than I would neglect his brothers and sisters.

"Then all the children came into our bed and there they opened their stockings. Afterwards we got dressed and took breakfast, and then all went into the library, where each child had a table set for his bigger presents. Quentin had a perfectly delightful electric railroad, which had been rigged up for him by one of his friends, the White House electrician (Irwin H. Hoover, 'Ike' Hoover of later days), who has been very good to all the children.

"Then Ted and I, with Gen. Wood and Mr. Bob Ferguson, who was a lieutenant in my regiment, went for a three hours' ride; and all of us including all the children, took lunch at the house with the children's aunt, Mrs. Captain Cowles, Archie and Quentin having their lunch at a little table with their cousin Sheffield.

"Late in the afternoon I played at single stick with Gen. Wood and Mr. Ferguson. I am going to get your father to come on and try it soon. We have to try to hit as light as possible, but sometimes we hit hard, and today I have a bump over one eye and a swollen wrist. Then all our family and kinsfolk and Senator and Mrs. Lodge's family and kinsfolk had our Christmas dinner at the White House, and afterward danced in the east room, closing up with the Virginia reel."

THE newest means of communication in a modern world of easy communication and swift transportation is as old as Cleopatra—the pigeongram. Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick amused some friends from Washington the other day in Chicago by displaying a pigeongram from her daughter Constance in California. The message was neatly folded in a little tiny container. Its bird carrier had alighted on Mrs. McCormick's window sill and tapped for admittance.

HELEN PIERCE BREAKER, PHOTOGRAPHER, DIES

Mrs. Helen Pierce Breaker, member of an old St. Louis family, who became one of the most widely known portrait photographers in Europe after she went to Paris 10 years ago to develop her talent as an amateur photographer, died there yesterday.

Mrs. Breaker, who was 45 years old, left St. Louis in 1926 after her divorce from George J. Breaker, an attorney. She was in poor health last summer, but recent letters to her brother, Richard A. Pierce, and her sister, Mrs. Reginald M. C. Ormrod, both of St. Louis, indicated she had recovered and was going ahead with her work. Her sister departed for Paris today.

Her two sons, Lawrence, 17 years old, and Manly, 15, lived with her. Her father was Lawrence B. Pierce, who built and operated the Pierce and Boatmen's Bank buildings. Her mother, Mrs. Lucie Alexander Pierce, died last Oct. 13. Pierce left his estate, valued at more than $1,000,000, to his wife and she willed her estate to her three children.

In St. Louis, Mrs. Breaker had converted the third floor of her home at 5227 Westminster place into a studio, where she pursued her hobby of photographing friends. In Paris she studied her craft under tutelage of the photographer, Rabinovitch, and herself developed an informal method of portraiture in which she received sitters in her apartment as social callers, chatted with them as she had tea or cocktails served and took their photographs at a time unknown to them.

She photographed royalty, St. Louisans on a visit to Paris, figures of the literary and theatrical worlds, but her favorite subjects were children. Among persons photographed by her were Ernest Hemingway, the writer; Simone Berriau, French actress; the former Princess Helen of Rumania and Andre Baurois, French novelist.

Dr. Theodore R. Meyer, Health Commissioner, has promised his support of the movement, and will appear before the judges this week.

ART EXHIBIT REVIEWS 50 YEARS OF GUILD

A retrospective and contemporary exhibition of the work of members of the Artists' Guild, from its inception in 1886 to the present, was opened yesterday at the Guild gallery, 812 Union boulevard, as a part of the organization's semi-centennial celebration.

It is an inclusive review of the various arts in which members of the guild work, but as a survey of developments in those fields during the last 50 years is a little skimpy in the early years, most of the exhibits being of comparatively recent production.

Paintings in oil comprise most of the 130 exhibits. Also shown are sculpture, water colors, drawings, batiks, etchings, metalwork, pottery and textiles.

Striking Contrast.

In the main the earlier paintings are grouped together on the north wall of the large gallery, where both canvasses and frames form a striking contrast with the paintings of later years. Most of the earlier paintings are characterized by naturalism and subdued colors. They are shown in grandiose gilt frames and shadow boxes. On the other walls are the modern paintings in brilliant, striking colors and in frames subordinated to the pictures.

There are among the older paintings some which would not be out of place if hung with the more recent work.

Nowhere is the contrast between the old and the new more marked than in two pieces of sculpture, on by the late R. P. Bringhurst, a character member of the guild, the other by his son, Walter S. Bringhurst, which stand side by side. The Father's piece is a bronze bust of Mrs. Bringhurst, done in the conventional Victorian manner. The son's is a sleek ebonized female figure in the modern style entitled "The Faun."

Art Museum Lends Works.

Paintings in the "retrospective" group were difficult to assemble because many of the artists are not known to the younger generation and their works are largely privately owned. Several were borrowed from the City Art Museum, some were supplied by the artists, and others were lent by their private owners.

In connection with the semi-centennial celebration the guild has published the story of its first 50 years in booklet form. The account was written by Prof. Holmes Smith of Washington University, George S. Johns, associate editor of the Post-Dispatch, and Scott McNutt, president of the guild.

The exhibition will remain on view until Jan. 9. This afternoon there will be a private showing and reception for members of the guild and their friends. The gallery is open to the public on week days, except Tuesdays, from 1 to 5 p. m., and on Sundays from 3 to 5 p. m.

CHAMBER MUSIC SOCIETY ANNOUNCES OPENING PROGRAM

Entering on its third season next Sunday night, the St. Louis Chamber Music Society will give a concert at the Woman's Club, 4600 Lindell boulevard, which will introduce three works not presented before in St. Louis. Pergolesi lived only 26 years, but in that period left several world-famous musical masterpieces, including the Stabat Mater Mass and the opera, "La Serva Pardona."

The players in the ensemble, all members of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, are Guidi, first violin; Felix Slatkin, second violin; Herbert Van den Burg, viola, and Martin Teicholz, 'cellist. 1000 CAROLING GROUPS FOR CHRISTMAS EVE

Effort to Be Made to Eliminate Self Seekers and Aid Accredited Agencies.

Final call for volunteers will be issued today in St. Louis and St. Louis County churches for carolers to sing in city and county streets on Christmas eve. More than 1000 bands, representing schools, churches, Scout troops and other organizations, have been enrolled, the St. Louis Christmas Carol Association announced yesterday.

Beaumont High School leads the enlistments with 59 groups organized to date. They have set their goal at 1000 singers, 100 more than they had last year. The project is sponsored in the school by the Mothers' Club and directed by Wilbur N. Fuller, principal, and Miss Ada LaBerge, a teacher.

Followup Campaigns.

Active followup campaigns that have been carried on in the schools and by church young people's organizations during the past several months have increased enrollments in all divisions, the association stated. Some denominations have enlisted all of their churches.

"To eliminate any scattered attempts by unaffiliated groups of singers to use the caroling as a means of securing money for their own private purposes, the official carol bands will again carry candle-shaped collection cans with special labels, and wear large red and green buttons bearing the association's insignia. Prospective givers are asked to look for these identification marks before dropping their gifts into any collection can.

"Some such plan had to be devised several years ago," William H. Danforth, president, said, "to keep our friends from being imposed upon by outsiders, who from all appearances were co-operating in this city-county program, but who were actually collecting for some purpose other than that of the public charities which benefit through our collections. The plan is working to eliminate and discourage all abuse of the custom. Our association, which now includes all organized community interests that follow the caroling custom for the sheer joy of serving, cordially invites everyone who wants to sing to join with us. Our funds are distributed through recognized child welfare agencies for the benefit of children of all creeds."

Last Year's Groups.

Last year the following charities shared in the carol fund: Children's Aid Society, city and county branches; social service departments of the St. Louis and Washington University hospitals; Mothers' and Babies' Home of the Salvation Army; Junior Red Cross, Webster Groves; St. Louis Society for Grippled Children; Lutheran Children's Friend Society; American Youth Foundation; Valley Park milk fund; playground for underprivileged children on the grounds of the St. Francis Xavier School; milk fund of the Federation of Catholic Alumnae; County Welfare Association, Kirkwood branch; Community Music Schools Foundation; Miss Gregg's Kindergarten School for underprivileged children, and the Wheatley Y. W. C. A.

Carol headquarters are at 610 Rialto Building, Fourth and Olive streets.

Galli-Curci Sings Tonight In Broadcast

Gladys Swarthout on KSD Tomorrow — Damrosch Will Change Character of Concert Friday.

FEATURES of this week in the broadcasting of fine music include the final concert by the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra this afternoon; the appearance of Gaspar Cassado, the 'cellist, with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Amelita Galli-Curci's singing tonight in the Detroit symphonic concert; the playing of Moritz Rosenthal, the 74-year-old Polish pianist, in the Erno Rapee concert tonight, and the change next Friday afternoon in the character of Walter Damrosch's Music Appreciation Hour.

There will be the usual piano recital by Alexander Semmler at 9:30 this morning on KMOX, and the Radio City concert on KWK at 11:30 a. m., when Henrietta Schumann, the pianist, will play the Strauss "Burlesque."

Kennedy will sing the "Vision Fugitive" aria from "Herodiade" and several songs in the concert at 1 p. m. today on KMOX. Orchestral music will include a March by Saint-Saens, Schubert's "Moment Musical," waltzes from Tschaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin," Lecuona's "Malaguena" and the Tschaikowsky "1812" overture.

Cassado has programmed his own arrangement for 'cello and orchestra of Von Weber's concerto for clarinet for the New York Philharmonic broadcast at 2 p. m. today on KMOX. John Barbirolli will conduct the Beethoven Fourth Symphony and music by Delius, Mendelssohn and Respighi.

Marion Talley's songs in her concert at 4 p. m. today on KSD will be "Waltz Huguette," "Some Day," Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Song of India," Gounod's "Ave Maria," Chaminade's "Lete" and "A Little Love, a Little Kiss." Sigurd Nilssen and Helen Marshall's Fireside Recital of familiar songs is scheduled as usual at 6:30 p. m. today on KSD.

Galli-Curci, who sang in a Chicago City Opera performance recently, "hopes to prove to the radio audience," the announcement of the Detroit concert at 8 o'clock tonight on KMOX, says, "that the operation on her throat, performed a year ago, did not rob her of her singing voice." Tonight, she will sing the "Un Bel Di" aria from "Madame Butterfly," Delibes' "Les Filles de Cadix," Arditi's "Il Bacio," "La Paloma," the Neapolitan folk song, "Carme," and "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes." Mme. Galli-Curci takes the place of Grace Moore, who was originally billed for tonight's broadcast. Jose Iturbi will conduct Boilldieu's "Caliph of Bagdad" overture, a March by Saint-Saens and excerpts from the Bizet "l'Arlesienne" suite.

Rosenthal, who is playing concerts in this country after an absence of several years and still is regarded by critics as one of the great pianists, first came to the United States in 1888 as assisting artist for that "very promising 14-year-old violinist," Fritz Kreisler. Tonight, he will play Liszt's Hungarian fantasy for piano and orchestra, Strauss' "Blue Danube" waltz and Chopin's A-major and F-major preludes. Erno Rapee will lead the orchestra in the Intermezzo from "Jewels of the Madonna," De Falla's "Fire Dance" and Tschaikowsky's "1812" overture, and in accompanying the singing by Donold Dixon, a young American baritone, of the Prologue to "Pagliacci."

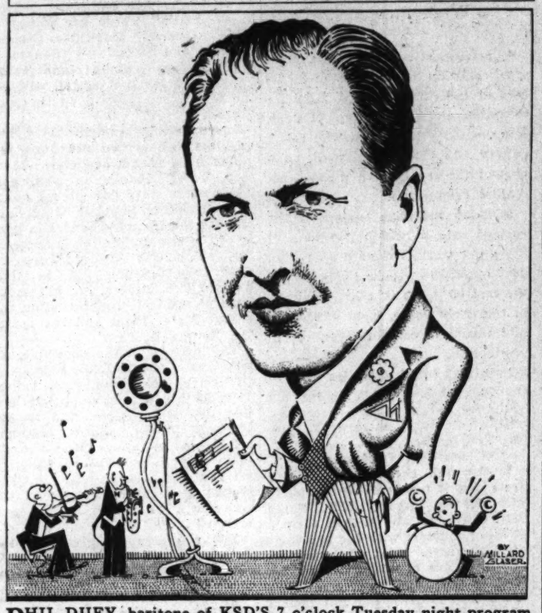

Gladys Swarthout, the Metropolitan Opera mezzo-soprano, will be the featured soloist with Margaret Speaks and orchestra at 7:30 tomorrow evening on KSD. She will sing "Estrellita," "Moon Melody" the "Amour Viens Aider" aria, "Could I Be in Love" by William Daily, who was conductor of the orchestra in these concerts until his death last week, and, with Miss Speaks, the "Barcarolle" from "The Tales of Hoffman."

Beginning next Friday afternoon, the Walter Damrosch Music Appreciation Hour will be changed in character for the first time since this series was inaugurated in 1928. The time on KSD, from 1 to 2 o'clock, will not be affected, but the hour will be given over to dramatizations of events significant in musical history. Dr. Damrosch probably will play some of the leading roles.

In the first half of next Friday's program, the first performance of Handel's "Water Music," in July, 1717, on the River Thames, in England, will be dramatized. Handel, a German who was expatriated in England, had fallen into disfavor with George I, the German-born King of England, and seized the opportunity afforded by a royal boating party to regain favor by a performance of a new piece of music dedicated to the ruler.

The second half hour will dramatize the dinner party given by Beethoven for his friend, Johann Maelzen, inventor of the metronome. Beethoven, in playful mood, wrote a three-part canon, or roundelay, with the regular, measured ticking of the metronome as the motif. The canon later was developed by Beethoven and used as the theme for the second movement of his Eighth Symphony. This symphony will be played during the program, which will end with its finale.

Latin-America Programs on Daily Basis

NBC Will Start Tomorrow Seven Days a Week Schedule on W3XAL, on 6.10 Megacycles.

THE special program service by the NBC, planned for competing with European stations for the South American audience, will be formally launched tomorrow on a daily schedule. At the outset the broadcasts will begin at 7 p. m. St. Louis time. They will be put on the air by W3XAL, the NBC short wave station at Bound Broom, N. J., operating at that time on 6.10 megacycles.

Plans call for broadcasting press news comments in Spanish daily, augmented several times during the week by entertainment and feature programs.

Four regular sustaining programs of entertainment already have been booked, and arrangements are under way for a fifth. Mondays, in collaboration with Cine Mundial, a New York Spanish publication devoted to movie news, NBC will broadcast a variety program. Francesco Ariza, editor-in-chief of the publication, will be master of ceremonies and commentator. Movie stars and others connected with the films will be presented as guests. Jerry Sears and his NBC orchestra provide the music.

Vaughn De Leath will be featured on Wednesdays, singing popular songs in Spanish and English.

A musical program, usually featuring Joseph Littau and his orchestra, will be broadcast Thursdays. Saturdays, NBC will feature the Three Silhouettes, a group of woman singers.

Arrangements are being made to put a "woman's page" on the air Fridays. This will include music, news of interest to women, interviews and dramatic skits.

School Program From Buenos Aires At 1:15 Tomorrow

First Exchange of Formal Educational Programs Between South America and This Country.

ANOTHER move in the plans of the national networks to compete with European stations for the Latin-American radio audience will be made at 1:15 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, when the first exchange of formally prepared educational programs between South America and this country will take place in the American School of the Air period on the CBS net and KMOX and on the Argentine stations. This program will come from Buenos Aires, Argentina, and will consist of folk music and other features. All announcements will be made in English.

The American School of the Air period Tuesday will be broadcast on the CBS network and KMOX and sent out by short wave for reception in South America.

A series of educational broadcasts from abroad is planned for the School of the Air broadcasts, beginning Tuesday, Feb. 4, from 1:30 to 1:45 p. m., and continuing each week at the same time until April 29, the end of the semester.

The Feb. 4 program will come from London. In succeeding weeks the traditional music of various European countries will be presented from Paris, Rome, Budapest, Prague, Warsaw (or Cracow), Berlin (or Vienna), Stockholm, Copenhagen, Amsterdam, Glasgow and Dublin, in the order given.

This series, which will mark the first time that radio's trans-Atlantic facilities will be used on a sustained weekly basis for educational purposes, is to consist of music native to the countries in which the broadcasts originate—music which will be familiar as well as music which will be new to listeners in the intermediate grades for which the programs will be designed.

As far as possible, it is planned to have children participate, both musically and by sending greetings to the children of this country, with the idea of promoting understanding and good will between pupils in America and abroad. A commentator, speaking in English, will give essential historical facts about the country presented and its geographical position, between musical selections.

SCOUTS SEEK TO ADD 200 TO MEMBERSHIP

More than 1400 boys have joined the scouting activities of St. Louis Council of the Boy Scouts of America since November, Scout headquarters announced yesterday in an effort to increase the number to 1600 boys and qualify for the Acorn Award, given by the National Council.

This award will be presented early next year to those councils in the country which have attained membership objectives, named by the National Council.

Col. H. D. McBride, scout commissioner of St. Louis, said that the Council here must enroll 200 more boys before Jan. 1, 1937, to attain the award.

E. D. Nims, president of the local council, presented 187 streamers to scouting units at the Scout Circus at the Arena last week as awards for unit advancement in membership and rank. At present 10,282 boys have joined scouting in St. Louis, according to Nims.

The following boys received awards at courts of honor held by their troops: William Stephens, of 168, bronze palm; Eugene Schneider, of 168, gold palm, George Hoffman, also of 168, a silver palm; Theo Pilgram Jr. and Herbert Ault Jr., both of 175, Eagle Scout; Harry Davis Jr., of Maplewood 3, Eagle Scout.

GIRL SCOUTS.

The annual Christmas party for the 425 Girl Scout and Brownie leaders of the St. Louis area will be given Thursday at St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, 5000 Washington boulevard, at 8 p. m.

The chairman for the party is Mrs. D. W. Southward, also chairman of the executive committee of the Leaders' Association. Other committee members of the party include the following representatives of the four Girl Scout districts: Miss Elizabeth Bergtold, West District; Miss Mariana Wieda, North District; Miss Rose Lierman, South District; Miss Carolyn Wells and Mrs. J. Burton, County District. Mrs. W. J. Bauer is the representative of the Brownies.

Girl Scouts distributed the 2000 dolls which they individually bought and dressed, to charitable institutions last week. The dolls will be given to relief clients at Christmas.

MAPLE AV. OVERPASS PLANNED

Elimination of Grade Crossing Estimated to Cost $300,000.

Plans for elimination of the Wabash Railroad grade crossing at Maple avenue near the city limits by construction of an overpass for the railroad tracks were discussed at a meeting of the Regional Plan Association at the Lennox Hotel Friday.

Estimated cost of construction, exclusive of cost of right-of-way, is $300,000, which would be paid out of Federal allotments to the State Highway Commission for elimination of grade crossings. The remaining cost probably would be borne by the communities in which the right-of-way would be situated, St. Louis, St. Louis County and University City.

CORONER CRITICISED OVER DENTIST AS AID

Medical Society Bulletin Says Assistant Should Be Physician.

An editorial in the Bulletin of the St. Louis Medical Society, issued yesterday, condemned the appointment of a dentist as Deputy Coroner by Coroner Louis R. Padberg and urged Dr. Padberg to replace this assistant with a physician.

Dr. Padberg, who was elected in November and took office recently, said he had no comment for the present, when his attention was called to the editorial by a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday. His deputy, now serving, is Dr. J. A. Perry, dentist.

A second place as deputy has not been filled. It has been retained temporarily by Harold H. Schulz, a deputy in the preceding administration and son-in-law of Dr. Padberg.

The society's editorial said: "We read with dismay that the newly appointed Deputy Coroner is a dentist. While having only respect for our great brother profession, we think this a great error." Continuing, the article recalled that the society urged election of a physician as Coroner and was pleased that both Dr. Padberg, a Democrat, and his Republican opponent were physicians.

"We thought then," it was added, "that the affairs of the Coroner's office must of necessity be in good hands and said no word in the election campaign. We think now that organized medicine has been betrayed. There are many physicians who would gladly accept the position of Deputy Coroner and who are by their very training fitted to intelligently conduct inquests. A chief duty of the Deputy Coroners is to hol dinquests. For some time it has been the custom for Soroners to engage physicians to make autopsies. The medical profession in the past has made clear its preference for a physician as Coroner.

Retail Credit Men's Election.

Ira Bloom has been elected president of the St. Louis Retail Credit Men, to serve during 1937. Other officers elected are: William Preusser, vice-president; Marcellus Becker, treasurer, and A. J. Kruse, secretary. Directors include George Neuman, Edward Schulz, Harry Zollinger, Mrs. Julia Garrison, Miss M. Crane, E. E. Paddon, Roy Manker and Charles Reno.

Lecture on Salesmanship.

The first of a series of eight lecture-discussion meetings on salesmanship, offered by the Young Men's division of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at Hotel Mayfair. William H. Bryan, past president of the Sales Managers' Bureau, will speak on "The Most Important Thing in Life."

TEST CASE ON SUNDAY DELICATESSEN SALES

Prosecuting Attorney Finnegan Seeks Court Interpretation of State Closing Law.

A test case is to be made to determine whether delicatessen stores may remain open on Sundays without violating the State law limiting storekeepers to the sale of drugs and "immediate necessities."

The plan for a test case on delicatessen goods was announced yesterday by Prosecuting Attorney James P. Finnegan, following a conference with district police captains on the Prosecutor's order for strict enforcement of the Sunday law.

In 1930 police sought to enforce a city ordinance against delicatessen shops, but the proprietors obtained an injunction in Circuit Court preventing the police from interfering with the sale of prepared foods. Finnegan is seeking to determine whether the courts will hold that delicatessen products are "immediate necessities" under the meaning of the State law, which provides a $50 fine for violation.

The Prosecutor, at the meeting with police captains and Police Commissioner Albert Bond Lambert, decided that drug stores, besides dispensing drugs, may operate odsa fountains, but may sell nothing else on Sunday. Filling stations will be allowed to sell oil and gasoline, but no accessories. Groceries and meat markets must remain closed.

Last Sunday two employes of the Katz Drug Co., Seventh and Locust streets, were arrested after one of them sold a radio to a city detective. Finnegan, after meeting representatives of merchants last week, announced there would be no prosecution of that charge, but that police would strictly enforce the Sunday law in the future.

ANTI-SMOKE BILL CAN'T BE IN EFFECT UNTIL NEXT FALL

ADVISES UNHURRIED ACTION ON MEASURE

Head of Belleville Mine Owners Opposes Ordinance—E. J. Wallace, St. Louis Dealer, Favors It.

No relief from the usual winter smoke pall could be expected this season from the anti-smoke ordinance sponsored by Mayor Dickmann, which was introduced in the Board of Aldermen Friday, the Mayor said yesterday.

The bill, which includes a provision requiring that low grade soft coal be treated to remove part of its smoke-producing content before sale in St. Louis, should be considered unhurriedly and "calmly," he added. He thought passage within the next few months would make it possible to set up the required organization and develop an educational program before next fall.

Mayor's Two Points.

Mayor Dickmann repeated his views expressed in a letter to the board, which was read at the introduction of the bill by President William L. Mason. The Mayor said he was much concerned about two problems presented by the smoke situation.

One was to avoid placing a hardship on the poor by making necessary an increase in the price of low-grade coal. The other was to prevent an economic loss by excluding coal from Southern Illinois, which is an important part of the St. Louis trade territory.

How Coal Men View Measure.

The coal trade looked on the proposed ordinance from different viewpoints. E. J. Wallace, St. Louis coal dealer, hailed the bill as one which should command the support of the industry. He suggested some minor amendments.

Clarence G. Stiehl of Belleville, president of the St. Clair-Madison Counties Coal Operators' Association, contended the required washing of coal would entail a prohibitive expense for producers of low grade fuel and increase the retail price about 50 per cent. In the Belleville district, he said, not more than half the producers could afford participation even in establishment of a co-operative washer.

About 85 per cent of the coal mined in the Belleville district is marketed in St. Louis.

HOW TO MARK DINNER CHECKS TO AVOID UNNECESSARY TAX

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Cites Example for Restaurants and Clubs.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has called to the attention of club, restaurant and hotel managements the necessity of separating food charges and excess charges on dinner checks in order to avoid unnecessary taxation.

A hotel conducts a New Year's Eve party at $6 a plate. The regular price of the dinner is $3 and the additional $3 is for favors, music and other extra expenses. Unless a separation of the charges is noted on the invitation or admission ticket, the tax is 60 cents at the rate of 1 cent on each 10 cents or fraction thereof under Section 711A of the Revenue Act of 1932. If the separation of charges is noted, the tax would be 30 cents on the excess charge, no tax to be collected on the price of the food.

VETERAN DETECTIVE

SERGT. LEONARD E. BLAKE.

SERGT. LEONARD BLAKE RETIRED ON PENSION

Thirty Years a Policeman, Detective Who Solved Fur Robbery of 1921.

Detective Sergeant Leonard E. Blake, who walked some of the toughest beats in the city when he joined the department in 1906 and who turned in the tip that led to solution of the $50,000 fur robbery of the Leppert-Roos Fur Co. in 1921, has been retired on pension at his own request after 30 years of service.

Advised that western sunshine would improve his sinus ailment, he has gone to Phoenix, Ariz., where he will ride a beat of his own in an automobile trailer, "just taking things easy" in an effort to recover his once robust health.

Assigned to investigate the fur robbery, in which burglars had entered the Leppert-Roos building by breaking into a penthouse on the roof and descending an elevator shaft on a rope, Sergt. Blake soon obtained information from a woman which resulted in the arrest, conviction and five-year prison sentence of Henry W. (Monte) Bostelman. He is now serving a 15-year sentence in Colorado for robbery of a Denver department store in 1931.

But that did not end Blake's work on the robbery. He went to Chicago, where some of the stolen furs had been sold, and picked up information which led to recovery of $18,000 of the merchandise. The remainder was recovered in St. Louis.

Before he joined the Police Department Blake was a mate on a Mississippi River steamboat in the days when, as he expressed it, "mates were mates and deckhands sometimes were at the wrong end of a belaying pin."

They Have Lead in College of Liberal Arts Except in Junior Class.

Woman students of the Washington University College of Liberal Arts earned better grades than men, except in the junior class, in the second semester of the 1935-36 college year, it was announced yesterday by Dean Frederick W. Shipley. The women's general grade average was 1.4485 and the men's 1.3282.

The dean attributed the women's lead partly to the higher scholastic standards for initiation into sororities, compared with fraternities. Another reason, he said, was the tendency of men in the freshman and sophomore ages to mature and acquire a sense of responsibility somewhat later than women.

The average of all students in the college who were candidates for degrees was 1.3873 for the semester, a slightly increase over the preceding half-year. By classes, the averages were: Senior, 1.906; junior, 1.682; sophomore, 1.480, and freshman, 1.0937. The dean thought it natural for the average to go up by classes, because of the natural elimination of poorer students and the departure of some students for the professional schools after the first two years.

CAHOKIA CREEK RAIL FILLS ORDERED CUT

Acting East St. Louis Mayor Directs Terminal Road to Open Old Channel.

The Terminal Railroad Association has been instructed by John T. Connors, Acting Mayor of East St. Louis, to cut openings in fills the road has made under five of its trestles in the channel of old Cahokia Creek south of the new diversion canal. His action followed a survey made by engineers of the Illinois Division of Waterways, who found that the fills had blocked the flow of the stream, creating a public nuisance by causing sewage and storm water to accumulate in the creek bed.

In his letter to Henry Miller, president of the Terminal, Connors said that many complaints had been received from owners of property adjacent to the creek, protesting against the sewage, and cited Illinois sanitary laws giving the city power to compel railroad companies to keep open drainage ditches under railroad tracks so that stagnant water would not be permitted to stand and so that natural drainage shall not be impeded.

Connors also directed the National Stockyards Co. and the North American Provision Co. at National City to discontinue discharging sewage from the Bogard avenue outlet into Cahokia Creek. Connors said that if the companies failed to take voluntary abatement action, the State Sanitary Water Board, which has jurisdiction over sources of stream pollution, "would have no alternative but to proceed in accordance with law."

Col. Walter M. Smith, chief engineer of the Division of Waterways, in a formal report of his findings on stream pollution made to the East St. Louis City Council, declared the creek a natural waterway, and said there were three principal sources of pollution. The Bogard avenue sewer, leading from the North American Provision Co. at National City, was reported discharging the largest volume of sewage. City sewers emptying into the creek at Division and Trendley avenues, whose by-pass gates were closed tightly by the city, were reported to be leaking, and it was recommended that both outlets be closed permanently with concrete plugs.

The engineers also reported observing a numbe rof private outlets, among which were thoes of the Terminal and Big oFur shops. It was recommended that all private sewers be found and users ordered to make proper connections to public sewer systems.

Old Cahokia Creek meanders southwards for four miles through the western part of East St. Louis, emptying into the river near the Municipal bridge. It begins in National City, where the new diversion canal cuts off its headwaters by tapping into the original creek and diverting the flow westward to the river.

AGAIN SEEKS RESALE OF SKOURAS PROPERTY

Unsuccessful Chicago Bidder Files Petition in Federal Court.

A petition seeking a new sale of the assets of the bankrupt Skouras Bros. Enterprises, Inc., former St. Louis movie holding concern, was filed yesterday in Federal Court by Arthur Greene, Chicago business man and an unsuccessful bidder for the assets.

Greene also asked the Court to set aside an order of Referee in Bankruptcy John A. Hope of Nov. 4, approving a bid of $342,000 for the assets, made by the Central Properties Corporation Bondholders' Committee.

The assets had been sold originally at public auction to the bandholders' committee for $317,000, which was raised $25,000 to meet a id of $342,000 made subsequently by Greene, who had objected to the original sale on the grounds he had been unable to bid because certain information relative to the value of the assets had been withheld by the trustee of the bankrupt company. The bandholders' new bid was approved by Referee Hope, who ruled the trustee did not have to disclose the information sought by Greene as it constituted a trade secret.

:Nov. 14, Greene submitted petitions in Bankruptcy Court seeking to set aside the sale and asking that the order approving the bondholders' bid be reviewed, but permission to file the petition was denied. Greene's motion filed yesterday contended Referee Hope was without authority to refuse a review of the order, and asked also that he be declared the successful bidder if a new sale were not ordered.

The principal asset involved in the sale is a controlling interest in the St. Louis Amusement Co., operator of 22 St. Louis neighborhood motion picture theaters. Green is asosciated with a firm operating a chain of theaters in Chicago and Wisconsin, but was said to be interested in obtaining the St. Louis houses personally.

Prize Packages, and How They're Wrapped By Hollywood Stars

Christmas Season a Busy Time for Movie Players Who Personally Take Care of Presents.

By MARGARET POST NIEMEYER

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 12.

HOLLYWOOD does its Christmas shopping early. It has to, or at any rate, the stars have to, for you'd be surprised to know just how many presents, of one sort or another, the big names of the film world have to make. First of all there are the relatives, a lot of them poor, who expect to share in the $5000 a week salaries at least once a year. Then there are the fellow players (giving Christmas gifts back and forth is a tremendous pastime in the movie colony) and the studio employes with whom the stars, and lesser lights among the players, come in contact while making pictures. And there are always a few fans scattered around the world who have managed to become postal friends of the actors and who must be remembered.

Anyway it takes a lot of time, to say nothing of a lot of money, to keep up with the gift parade and so the Colberts, the Merkels, the Crawfords, and all the rest began weeks, or even months ago to play Santa Claus. Marion Davies is probably the most prolific giver of presents. Also she is probably the most extravagant with a long list of private children's charities under her wing.

But then Marion scatters presents rather widely all during the year. Every time she finishes a picture she gives something to everyone connected with it, in any capacity, ranging from $10 bills to the prop boys to diamond bracelets or diamond-studded watches to her most important fellow players.

Miss Davies' gifts are so many and so scattered that she goes about it in rather a business-like way with a large staff to attend to things for her. Most of the other screen players prefer to "roll their own" and shop and tie up their gifts themselves. The tying up is quite a stunt and the women players spend a lot of time devising new attractive ways of arranging ribbons and bows and gold and silver paper. So thinking that if I hurried around and asked some of the stars how they individually were wrapping their gifts this year it might be interesting and perhaps also offer some suggestions to you as to how to do up your own. I have spent the past week putting my questions and here are some of the answers:

GINGER ROGERS, who is one of Hollywood's package-wrappers de luxe and scouts all over town for unusual papers and ribbons, says that one of her favorite ways of doing up gifts is to wrap the package first in a metallic paper and then cover it with bright colored cellophane. "I've just finished wrapping several packages in silver and then covering them with the blue cellophane," said Ginger. "They looked most attractive, and especially those which I tied with silver or a combination of silver and blue ribbon. Then when I want to 'give my all' to the spirit of decorative art, I top off the package with a tiny cluster of silver grapes or berries tucked in the ribbon bow."

—o-o—

I CAUGHT Una Merkel red-handed, so to speak, when I went up to her home in the hills last night. For there was Una busy as a bee in the kitchen with a whole table of jars filled with homemade jellies and mince meat which she was wrapping most attractively and originally in California colors. Una had discarded the traditional and standard Christmas ideas entirely and instead was using the colorful papers of Old Mexico. "These are my practical gifts," said Miss Merkel with a sweeping gesture at the array on the table, "but, of course, I make many others of quite another nature and these I am tying up differently."

—o-o—

JEAN HARLOW has been vacationing in Arizona for the last few weeks, but before she left she showed me some of the fancy wrapping paper she had selected and which she was taking with her to do up some of her gifts while away. Incidentally she showed me a few of the gifts and I could tell you that there are going to be some very pleased people this Christmas, but to tell anything more than that at present would be disclosing confidences. These gifts will be wrapped in a "brownette" paper which exactly matches the present shade of Jean's hair and will be tied with gold ribbon and fluffy pompons.

BARBARA STANWYCK dropped in at our home, which is right on the way to her newly acquired ranch in San Fernando Valley, this morning and I seized the opportunity to question her. Barbara, it seems, is using many odd and interesting color combinations carried out in tissue paper and ribbon. Among her favorite wrappings, she said, were chartreuse paper tied with yellow ribbon, violet-colored paper tied with magenta and turquoise ribbons, and flame-colored paper tied with a ribbon of coppery tones. Like Ginger, Barbara adores cellophane, she says, and often buys a gaily decorated box for a gift to fit in, and then wraps the box in the bright glistening material. If the box or gift is round, she sets it in the middle of a large sheet of cellophane or whatever wrapping she may be using, and brings the paper up around the box so that it sticks up in a perky fashion. The paper is then drawn together just above the wrapped object and tied with metallic ribbon.

When it came to tying up an enormous electric train with its circular track, high signal towers, tunnels and what-not which she purchased for her young son, Dion, Barbara admits that her ingenuity was taxed to the limit. "But," she said "I think I will just have it all set up on the nursery floor, then run a broad red ribbon all the way around the whole outfit, tying it in a big bow on the cow-catcher of the engine, and put a Santa Claus in the engine cab and a load of holly and tin toys in the coal car.

ANNE SHIRLEY has spent a lot of time over her gift wrapping. "If the gift is especially good-looking" she told me, "I sometimes think it is a pity to detract from it, so I just tie it with a gay ribbon, curling the ends with scissors. And I like plaid papers. These I tie with cellophane ribbon and black boxes are simply stunning tied with broad silver ribbon with a bit of holly nestling in the bow.

SIMONE SIMON'S packages will be rather unusual, recalling her French Noel in Paris. Simone will use glistening white paper unadorned, and the ribbon will be red. On the top of the box Simone will place a small white candle surrounded by crisp trimmings of bright red cellophane. Incidentally, little Simone, who has been keeping her well-known temperament under cover for weeks and weeks, is reported to have broken loose again and upset things on the set the very first day her new picture started. Nothing very serious

KAY THOMPSON

KAY THOMPSON

St. Louisan's Rise To Radio Stardom

As Kitty Fink, She Attended Soldan High and Washington University; Received First Training Before Microphone At Local Station

By Blanche Robinson

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.

NOT all child prodigies come to a bad end. Sometimes Little Junior, who gave such promise of becoming a second Steinmetz, turns out to be a first-class street car conductor. And maybe Minnie, who, at a tender age could dance almost as well as Fred Astaire, or anyway, nearly as well as a Municipal Opera chorine, proves that she can deal them off the arm at the neighborhood hamburger palace just as well as the next.

It even happens occasionally that a prodigy sticks to his specialty through life, and once in a while sticks to it hard enough to keep his margin over the other neighborhood children who did not have the start the prodigy's proud parents saw fit to give him.

Yes, sometimes Little Mortimer may keep up his painting even after he has left grade school. It is even possible that instead of devoting all his time to dashing off abstract compositions and sneering at such persons as use their art as a means of making a living, he may some day paint a picture that someone will be willing to buy. He may strike a medium between art for art's sake and money grubbing for money's sake, and break into what is vulgarly known as the big time.

And that, in brief, is the story of St. Louis' own Kay Thompson, better known to her friends at Soldan High School and Washington University as Kitty Fink until a sponsor persuaded her to pick out the new name she has used continuously since. At the age of 5 Kay had been pigeonholed as a musician, and now she is to be heard weekly on a coast-to-coast radio network, singing and leading her choir in her own arrangements on behalf of a brand of cigarettes.

Perhaps, after Kay is dead, her name won't be under the titles of pieces in the volume of Music That Lives, for fractious little boys to curse at as they fumble through the afternoon piano practice. Maybe those who love fine music may some day say, "I've heard of Sibelius, and of Stravinsky, but you'll have to give me another guess on Thompson."

Such may be the future, but Kay thinks the present is all right. Anyone who listens to the radio has heard her, her pictures are splashed all over the radio fan magazines, and the money is pouring in faster than one ordinary mortal could spend it.

—o-o—

INTENT on interviewing Miss Thompson, your correspondent went to her new apartment on Madison avenue. Kay met the writer at the door, dressed in severely plain black broadcloth trimmed in silver fox. A black hat with a veil formed a frame for her Titian locks. Numerous sparkles of light proved to come from a diamond bracelet and a large solitaire ring. Behind her frisked a cocker spaniel, Schultz—also in severely plain black.

"Miss Thompson," the correspondent began, between puffs (her apartment is on the fourth floor, sans elevator), "I have read innumerable radio magazine stories about you, and the more I read, the less I seem to understand your many-sided temperament. For instance"—

"It's a long climb, but it's worth it, isn't it?" my hostess smiled, showing me into a surprisingly spacious apartment. The huge living room with skylight, the big white grand piano, the parquet floor and the Chippendale couch and tables, made an ensemble to please any interior decorator's heart.

"Yes, Miss Thompson," we replied, "it's simply charming. And about your career, now. Some of the magazine stories make you out to be simply a cold-blooded heartbreaker, others say you were the ugly duckling of your family, while others—"

"And the balcony!" she answered. "You must see the balcony." She flipped the Venetian blinds and opened some doors, and there, sure enough, was a balcony overlooking Madison avenue. "I suppose all this to-do about a little balcony seems silly to anyone from St. Louis, where a nice green back yard is taken for granted. But in this town it's a different story. No back yards, no trees, no front porches. So I'm quite pleased with my balcony. I still call it a balcony, although all my New York friends insist it is a 'terrace.'

"And I like New York, too," she added, as we were seated on the big yellow couch, "even though I did miss St. Louis at first. But I go back there sometimes to visit my family on big occasions like becoming an aunt, celebrating Christmas and the like. I have to fly to make it between programs, but flying has become my favorite, and almost my only, means of travel. I used to fly down to Los Angeles from San Francisco for a weekly Merrymakers' program, and then I flew here from San Francisco. The only trouble is that my plane always manages to be forced down for one reason or another,

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.

THERE are always giggles a'plenty, even in the midst of Manhattan's most outrageous madness. The town positively guarantees at least one good titter a day. And after long and prayerful thought I don't think any cheerier note is struck here than the frequent visits of Hollywood's doll-babies to this preoccupied yet ever pop-eyed hamlet.

Take the recent visit of lovely Kay Francis, one of my favorite gals, on and off the screen. She met the boy friend, Writer Delmar Daves, at the Newark Airport with one of the finest hug-and-kiss exhibitions that osculatory spot has ever seen, and as soon as she had caught her breath she told reporters that she would never marry again—oh dear me, no! And when she and her Delmar were found to be sailing to Europe on the Normandie, lovely Kay gave a good old studio start and chirped, "My, but it certainly is nice to find a friend on board!" Neither, obviously, had the faintest notion that the other would be aboard the mighty French canoe! . . .

IT'S SO cute, this game the movie stars play! Compared with them, an ostrich is a genius at deception! And then Dream-Boy Francis Lederer, the Czech and double-check, got off the Century the other morning with little Margo, of "Winterset" fame. Engaged? My, my! Margo's eyebrows almost met the hair-line! "We're very good friends, but we've only known each other a few months! He's so nice!" The flashlights boomed.

Of course, we're used to these didoes by now—too often have we heard these little speeches, only

MY OPINION

by Martha Carr

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a girl of 16 who wants to bring you my problems, which are relatively unimportant, but mean a lot to me. I smoke wholly for the pleasure it gives me—not to show off. My parents disapprove, but what do you think wrong about smoking?

My mother insists on staying in the room when a boy calls on me. I am embarrassed and unable to make conversation on account of this. How can I convince mother that chaperones are no longer necessary? She has very old-fashioned ideas. I do not wish to be unconventional, but feel that this is going too far.

My kid-brother studies in the living-room of our small apartment, and he is always butting in on my conversations with boys. He mimics me in front of my father and gives my father a wrong impression of me.

I want to thank you very much for any advice you can give me about modernizing my parents. And I hope some of your readers will give their opinions of my ideas. Sincerely,

MODERN MISS.

I believe you would make a good start by inviting another couple over or perhaps one or two couples, the evening you are expecting your friend.

Perhaps your mother then would feel that you were sufficiently chaperoned. Under certain conditions, the chaperone is still correct. These are not always "old-fashioned" notions; sometimes, you must remember, parents believe in the safest methods and do not want to take the chances of having their daughters criticized because they defy the convention. As for the little brother, your parents should take charge of that; it is ridiculous to allow a child to be guilty of such rudeness.

Many young girls smoke now; but it would be much better if they would wait, at least, until they have developed their normal physical maturity.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● I HAVE A VERY LOVELY picture of my grandmother taken in her young days. I should like very much to have the picture in my house, but it is too large for a table frame. I am told that it is not good taste to have large photographs hanging on the wall. What is your opinion? Just what kind of frame would you suggest that I get? It is a brown tone finish. I thank you.

DAILY READER.

You can have a very good reduction made of the photograph, in which the likeness and the general effect of the picture will suffer no loss of beauty, and you can then use it in a frame suitable for a table. You must, however, have this done by a good photographer or at a shop where such things are done, in order to preserve the values of detail and atmosphere. A frame could be of tooled leather, or a pretty moulding, having a tone which harmonizes with the tone of the photograph.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAVE WAITED late, I know, to write you, but our plans have not been settled. I, with my sister, expect to entertain during the Christmas holidays and would like some suggestions from you with regard to decorations, party games and refreshments, if you have any you can print in the column before that time. With thanks in advance,

ERMA K. V.

This would take much space in the column. Why not send stamped, addressed envelope in which I can mail my "Christmas Decorations," "Christmas Menus," "New Christmas Games," "Christmas Party," and "German Christmas Cakes"? If you do not care for all these, specify which ones and write promptly and you will have them in plenty of time.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● WILL YOU PLEASE advise what is the correct procedure for the following problem which is of much concern to me. I am keeping steady company with a boy. I am well acquainted with his family and would like to know whether I should give presents to his sisters, brothers, mother and father? My family is very large and as I buy for all of them, I feel that I cannot afford to buy for all of my acquaintances, even though I would like to. Sincerely,

WONDERING.

I do not think this would be expected at all; in fact, they might think you were overdoing it and currying favor with the family.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM WRITING to ask you the name and address of the foreign correspondence bureau, you have often mentioned in your column. I meant to be sure to cut it out the last time I noticed it, but carelessly failed to do so.

INTERESTED.

The International Friendship League, 706 Boylston street, Boston, Mass. This will answer "J. K." 's request also.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

TO THE PERSON signing herself, "Yea, A Maid," answering a letter written by a "Mrs. M."; she states, "If Mrs. M. (or Mrs. Anybody-else) cannot afford to pay more than $6 a week for a "maid," she should just do without a maid —And where, may I ask, could these girls without office or selling ability find work?

Most selling positions pay from $12 to $15 a week; out of that the girl must pay board at home or elsewhere, car fare and lunches for six days out of the week; to say nothing of buying suitable clothes (much more expensive than those required of the maid). It seems to me "Maid" winds up at the end of the week a good deal farther ahead financially.

And what employer asks the girl whether she has enough money for car-fare and lunch? So why should the girl expect this of her employer in the home? Besides, this lady offers a comfortable room and three good meals a day.

I'll admit there is quite a bit to be said on both sides of the question and perhaps "Yea, Just A Maid," has been unfortunate about finding the right place. Perhaps the word "maid" has been overdone; but if the place where I was working paid me $6 a week, and was pleasant, I'd just as soon be called "maid" as anything else. And I probably will be if you print this letter. Sincerely yours,

D. B.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

SHE THROWS A BOOK OF WORDS AT MEN

Feminine Leader Writes That Most of the World's Ills Are Due to Influence of the Male

By VIRGINIA IRWIN

WOMAN, it is said, must always have the last word.

And Eudora Ramsay Richardson certainly has not only the last word, but the last book, in the argument started a few months ago when Prof. John Erskine got himself in a lather and wrote a satirical little volume called "The Influence of Women—and Its Cure."

Now Mrs. Richardson has answered Mr. Erskine, and in "The Influence of Men—Incurable" (Bobbs-Merrill, Indianapolis), she proves not only that women have little influence in the world today, but that the influence of men is responsible for all the crimes on the civilized calendar—exploitation, the depression, Big Business, war and what else can you think of?

"Man as an individual is a very lovable creature," admits Mrs. Richardson, "but man in the group—in politics, in business, in organizations of all sorts—dominant, assertive, egotistical, illogical, has exerted an influence that would have wrecked civilization had woman of other days not been able to deal with him swiftly, subtly, effectively.

"The restraining power of love for father, husband, son or brother has prevented women from recording the devastation wrought or contemplated by organized men—by men on the march, by men in quest of power and authority. The time has come, however, to set down solemnly a few facts, for men are about to exert an influence, not only subversive to progress, but of a magnitude unprecedented in history."

Man's egotism, believes Mrs. Richardson, is at the root of everything from the firing of married women in jobs to the fact that trains provide little else but a hair receiver in the way of conveniences in women's washrooms. Man's egotism, she says, has led him to actually believe that woman reaches her highest destiny when she inspires, rather than influences, a man, but Mrs. Richardson thinks that the job of inspiring should be a side issue and not a 24-hour job.

"IF we should apply a little efficiency to the task," she suggests, "it might be possible to devote an eight-hour day to other work and reserve the evening for inspiring the gentlemen of our households. Such an arrangement, of course, might not prove satisfactory to those men who yearn to be the beginning, middle and end of some woman's existence—or, to be more accurate, of several women's existences. Women have done little to curb the egotism of man both because they have not taken it very seriously and because a deflated man is a rather unpleasant thing to have about the house."

In recent years Mrs. Richardson has done quite a bit of traveling about the country in an effort to wake the female of the species from the lethargy that has overtaken her, and on these travels has encountered many things that illustrate the all-enveloping influence of men on the world today. The hotels she has decided are run by men for men.

"How the hotels do cater to the peripatetic salesman," she groans. "From the corkscrew, bottle opener, razor-strap attachment, to masculine laundry and pressing services, pincushion equipment and coat hangers, women find everything screamingly out of her gender. Men dress in bathrooms. So the lighting above the bathroom mirror is always excellent. Women, however, can't very well dress in bathrooms. There has to be a place for all the jars and cleaning tissue and boxes and tubes and bottles and whatnots. Imagine how the paraphernalia would clutter the little glass shelf beneath the bathroom mirror. Rare is the hotel, morever, that provides any light at all beside the bureau."

As other instances of man's egotism, Mrs. Richardson cites the fact that although statistics prove that women drivers have fewer accidents and are guilty of fewer traffic violations than men, the arrogant male still holds that women are rotten drivers. Men at 40 think themselves still young, but consider women of 40 as well along in life, and on this point Mrs. Richardson drags out biological findings, life insurance figures and irrefutable logic to prove that old women "are constitutionally more youthful than old men." And in answer to man's egotistical claim that men have "always been the producers, the providers, the oaks for clinging parasites," she says:

"Anthropologists are agreed that women were the first agriculturists and invented the first farm implements; that they were the first carpenters; and that women began all the arts and skills that now make up modern industry. The plain ungarnished truth is that some woman originated every trade, occupation, or profession at which men are working today."

The author of the "Influence of Men" does not resent the fact that men have usurped what in the beginning was woman's work, but she does object to the way they have done it. Exploitation, depressions, Big Business, the profit motive, war and every other evil of our present system, she traces to the way men have gone about satisfying a well-nigh insatiable ego.

Even the creation of that class of women whom Erskine so enthusiastically panned — the non-tilling, non-spinning lilies who have maids to do the housework and wipe their children's noses—Mrs. Richardson blames on the man who panders to his own ego by making a luxury out of his wife, the man who does not consider the economic waste involved in developing a parasitic class and thinks only of the envy he must be creating in the hearts of men who cannot afford to provide their wives with seal coats and servants.

Obviously one of the major pains in Mrs. Richardson's neck is the agitation men have stirred up to eliminate women from all work outside the home.

"Section 213 A of the National Economy Act has caused the dismissal of married women from Government positions," she reviews. "Fewer women now than five years ago are being elected to public office; discriminatory legislation has been introduced into practically every General Assembly and City Council; school boards all over the country are dropping married women who have chosen teaching as their life work and demoting women from executive positions; and private business is dismissing women that places may be filled by men.

MRS. RICHARDSON, herself, is a wife and mother and described by her publishers as well-equipped to present woman's cause. She was graduated from Hollins College, Virginia, and from the University of Richmond. She holds a Master of Arts degree in English and Comparative Literature from Columbia University and has been head of the English Department in a woman's college. At one time she was Field Director of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, Director of the Woman's Division of the War Loan Organization of the Fifth Federal Reserve District, Field Representative of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and an officer in many women's organizations. Since 1930 she has been a member of the Virginia State Board of Public Welfare.

Of her book answering Erskine's complaint that organized women are stealing the reins of the universe, Mrs. Richardson says:

"I've tried to set forth no mere ideas of my own but these facts:

"The influence of individual men amounts to nothing at all. The influence of organized men, however, is very dangerous. It grows out of a defensive egotism in which an awareness of biological inferiority is basic. The masculine movement is new on the historic stage. The world did not once belong to man and has not been stolen recently by woman. When men and women were co-producers and co-providers, sensibly dividing creative work, they could justly claim joint ownership of the world. In bringing about both the woman of leisure, and the exploited slave of industrialism, men have injured themselves, women, and society as well. The profit motive, undeniably conceived and brought forth by man with no impregnation by women, aided now by the machine, mass production, and the monopolistic system, is wrecking the social order. It has been a basic factor in all recent wars and is leading the countries of the world toward a war that may destroy the anomaly known as civilization."

Man who read Mrs. Richardson's book will probably have trouble with their blood pressure and accuse her of being just another dame with an urge to run the world, but Mrs. Richardson admits to nothing of the kind. She even says that the influence of man should not be cured. The purpose of her book is to point out that unto the influence of man "must be added the influence of women."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

FOR the first time in 25 years, there are signs of life in the old Henry Clay Pierce mansion at 40 Vandeventer place. Wreckers are razing the house to save taxes. You can see them through grimy windows, going about their work. In the emptiness of those vast tapestried and paneled rooms, a distant hammer echoes. It's a ghost house now, but long ago, in the Edwardian heyday, it was alive and sparkled with laughter, music, fine wines, and jewels, for its bon vivant master was fond of entertaining and had the money to indulge his extravagant tastes, foreign as they were to his modest, gentle wife.

She was a Miss Minnie Finlay, daughter of John R. Finlay, who was rapidly building a fortune in illuminating oil. Pierce was working for her father when he married her. After the marriage he edged right into the business, which later, as the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, yielded him many millions.

Once on a sure footing, he took St. Louis by storm, and started, in 1886, the baronial mansion which cost him reputedly $800,000, and raised himself to magnificent heights, only to fade completely out of the picture 20 years later, when he moved his family to New York and contracted a second marriage. The Vandeventer place residence is almost the only remaining tangible evidence of the wide swath which the H. Clay Pierce family cut in St. Louis society for a few seasons. And now the home is coming down!

WHITE-HAIRED, courtly Charles Wiggins, once a ranking man-about-town, recalls the ball and reception the night the house was officially opened, for at Pierce's request he assisted with the entertaining that evening. The other day in his office in the Cotton Belt Building Wiggins lifted half-moon spectacles from a fine nose and rubbed his eyes contemplatively as he recalled that night in the distant past.

"Pierce was president of the old St. Louis Club at that time," he said, "and I was secretary, so of course we had become well acquainted. This opening blow-out was to be a very elegant affair, and Pierce was anxious that it go off well. So he asked Will Finlay, a brother of Mrs. Pierce, and me to stand in the reception hall to greet the guests, all of whom we knew well. Then we took them into the green room, the west parlor, and presented them to the host and hostess who stood on a raised dais, looking down on their guests. It was a little bit comical and caused a good deal of talk at the time, that platform."

Pierce was known as the least approachable of St. Louis' rich men. In contrast to the democratic manners of the late Adolphus Busch, James Campbell and other multi-millionaires, he kept his fellow men at a distance. But hospitality was not stinted that evening.

Wiggins remembers that "it was a very moist evening, no harm liquor, nothing but champagne, and plenty of that." Pierce was fond of game and sea foods, and the buffet tables that night were heavy with choice delicacies.

"You know in those days we took our invitations seriously," Wiggins smiled, "so that most of the 400 guests had arrived by 9 o'clock, which was the appointed hour. We held forth in the clubroom at the back of the house and danced in the ballroom on the third floor until long after midnight."

TODAY rich fabric—there was no wallpaper in the house—hangs in shreds from the high ceiling of the ballroom, and the white woodwork of dormer window seats and fireplace, sooty with many winters, is gloomily reflected in the wall of mirrors opposite, but it is not hard to visualize the splendor of that house-warming.

Everything the Pierce family did was on a lavish scale, which Pierce thought becoming to one of his great wealth. The house itself was remarkable not only for its costly furnishings, many of them offensive to modern taste, but for its advanced mechanical improvements. Fans concealed in the walls assured an even temperature the year around. A refrigerating system did away with the necessity of ice, and underground sprinklers kept the lawns green the year around. It took a retinue of 27 servants to run the St. Louis household, six months out of the year, and for the remaining six, from June until Thanksgiving, a summer home at Pride's Crossing, north of Boston, on the seashore. That house, near President Taft's summer place, faced the ocean and although all that could be seen from the road was the stable, the attention of passers-by was invariably attracted by the magnificence of the estate.

On Being Chic

By MARJORIE HILLIS

ONE out of every 10 letters I've had lately asks if I can't give some rules for being chic without spending much money. As a matter of fact, I can—but they're rules that everybody knows, and the people who wrote the letters probably won't follow them anyway.

The first rule is to have one basic color scheme straight through the wardrobe and stick to it. Certainly everyone knows that one—and disregards it about half the time. But it's the very backbone of economy. Choose black or blue or brown and have every single thing in your wardrobe in that color or a shade to go with it, and you cut in half the number of accessories you need, besides knowing that you'll never be caught with a dress and no hat or shoes, or have to go out with a black coat and a navy-blue bag (which would make anybody feel like an orphan).

A second rule is to make out a chart of what you need, at the beginning of a season, and follow it. (This matter of smartness is turning out to be mostly will-power.) The extravagances are the little extra dresses that tempt you from a window till you convince yourself that they'd be useful, though you know better, and the hat that is definitely an extra, but too enchanting to pass by.

Third on the list is the rule of putting the largest part of your money into good daytime clothes to wear when you go out. Well-made clothes of this type outlast three cheap sets. Buy (or make) inexpensive dresses to wear around the house, and inexpensive dinner clothes but put every cent you can afford into a coat or suit for general wear and dresses to go under the coat.

The fourth trick is to plan so that everything is interchangeable—hats that look well in town or out, accessories that go with everything, a suit that is as smart with sweaters as with blouses and has a top-coat that can go over dresses. A really smart woman can think up a four-piece outfit that will turn into eight or ten costumes. But you'll have to figure this rule out for yourself.

Black is, of course, great economy for evening. One simple black evening dress of flattering lines can be made into half a dozen costumes and go to any kind of a party. Add a great splash of scarlet chiffon flowers (the department stores have marvelous ones) and scarlet slippers (inexpensive) and you have one costume. Slip on an emerald-green taffeta jacket and black slippers for another. Change to a little pink velvet coat, buttoned and demure, for a third. Put two huge coral clips at the neck-line, add a coral bracelet, and flaunt a coral chiffon handkerchief. Or swing a glittering sequin cape around your shoulders and carry a bag to match.

The real secret of smartness is to put a little thought and ingenuity into your clothes. Haphazard buying is responsible for most of the dowdiness in an all too dowdy world.

THERE SEEM to be two ways to be really interesting right now. You can be as modern and chic and up-to-date as tomorrow, or as courtly and reminiscent and other worldly as day before yesterday. Either one has its charm.

A few days ago, when I was in New York City, I went to a luncheon at the Waldorf, made up of people who come under the first head. The hostess wore a dress that must have just come from Paris, sleek and black and shiny, with collar and cuffs as big as Pierrot's, made out of silver lame, and a silver fox stole so long that it twisted round her arms like a fur in a fashion sketch. The men on each side of me had landed from Europe the day before, after a trip of several months, and somehow they looked as smart as she did. (I wouldn't know why.) They had skied somewhere up in the Arctic Circle and been to an incredible dinner-party during the Salsburg festival, and visited all the smart world on the Riviera, and seen the best plays in London. They knew what every one was doing and saying and wearing, and they had known all about Mrs. Simpson before you and I even heard of her. Everybody hung on their words!

The very next day, I drove back from a party on Gramercy Park with an older man who came into the second class. Somewhere in the twenties, he showed me a corner where the first modern art show in New York had been held. He had helped hang the pictures, and all New York thought that he and the rest of the committe were crazy. At Thirty-Fourth street, he pointed out the spot where a station had once been—one took a shuttle there, he said, in order to get to the main station way up at Forty-second srteet. And at Forty-second street and Park avenue, he said he used to visit the farm that occupied one corner. Then he handed me out of the taxi with a courtliness that the gay young traveler couldn't approximate.

I don't know which was more charming or more interesting. I liked being with both types, and so did every one else. The answer is, I suspect, that you can be very, very modern, or cultivate a nostalgic charm—but you mustn't be just a little bit passe. Tomorrow is exciting and day before yesterday is endearing, but the day that is just going by is musty and rather dull. People are through with it—for the present. Which is something to remember, if you want to be interesting.

Beauty Fads An Influence On Business

Industry Would Suffer If Women Didn't Care How They Looked.

By Helen Jameson

WOMEN are the money flingers of the world. The majority of wives handle the family funds, giving papa what he needs for spending money, even selecting his shirts and ties with his consent and approval.

Every passing beauty fad has influenced business. When the reducing mania was at its zenith, bakers complained bitterly abou the reduced sales of bread and pastries. The boyish figure put a crimp in wheat. The consumption of vegetables and green salads is constantly increasing. Good for business, good for health, good for the high spirits of the family.

The chemise frock, built on the plans and specifications of a pillow case, worried the textile manufacturers. Three yards of fabric made a dress. They're happier now with the voluminous skirts of period gowns calling for yards and yards of lovely silky stuffs. This is a good year for every merchant who has to do with women's wear. More costly decorations are used. A swing back from the lean days of the depression when a made-over gown gave one social distinction. It was fashionable to be poor.

WHEN STAYS were chucked into the furnace, there was dismay in the hearts of corset makers. Didn't stay there long. The foundation garment came in to act as an understudy to the old steel riveted bird cage, serving the purpose much better and permitting the intake of a man's sized meal instead of a few morsels.

The stockingless era sent hosiery makers into a panic. Didn't last long. Women soon found out that legs sheathed in chiffon are prettier. Feet that are slipped into shoes without any protective covering feel horrid.

Think what would happen to the beauty shops if women decided to accept the mannish haircut. Thousands of shops are busy now. The largest part of the business has to do with shampoos, trims, permanents and finger waves. One can get along without facials, one can put the blood red polish on finger nails, but when it comes to hair curling one must have professional help.

Cosmetics shake money from women's purses, but the investment brings in good returns. There is something about powder, lipstick and perfume that soothes the soul, makes a woman happier, nicer to live with. Instead of being a menace they are a help. The friction required to apply a creamy cosmetic gives exercise to the fibers of the face, prolongs youthful appearance.

When women don't care how they look, industry will be in a bad way. But that will never happen.

family traveled East in a private railroad car, "Zamorra," the most luxurious the Pullman company had built up to that time. Pierce sent his fine horses on to the searshore, too, for the summer months. In St. Louis they were stabled across Enright back of his home, where the carriage house, adjoining the caretaker's 10-room "cottage" still stands. Up until 10 years ago, it housed a hansom cab, an opera bus, two broughams, and a 1906 model Renault touring car.

Wiggins chuckled as he remembered how the young men used to vie with each other for an evening with Pierce's daughters, Violet, or Perle, "because," said he, "Pierce was so very proud of his turn-outs that he used to send one for his daughters' beaus. And in the days when they used to stick you as much as $5 for a carriage, that was a great help."

The children shared their father's love for fine horses. When she was a little girl named Margaret Lee, Mrs. Taylor Carter lived in Vandeventer place and remembers looking up from play in the park to see Violet Pierce drive by in a Hackney pony tandem. Behind, as rigid as a ramrod, sat a full-liveried, top-hatted footman, with arms tightly folded.

Mrs. Carter also has a recollection, a comic one, of the dispute Pierce got into with the Swedish artist Anders Zorn, over portraits he painted of the family which did not please the master. At frequent intervals, Margaret Lee used to see a messenger carrying the huge canvases approach the Pierce door. Usually he was not admitted and went on his way again only to try a few days later to deliver the unwanted goods. If he did succeed in getting past the butler, it was only a question of minutes before he and his paintings were forcibly ejected. The squabble finally resulted in a lawsuit in which Zorn was awarded $12,000 for work for which he expected $30,000.

That front-door butler—he was English and all the servants were white—must have been forbidding. He was always in full livery, with knee pants and silver buckles on his pumps, and his poker face was never seen to relax a muscle.

On formal occasions a lesser flight of butlers assisted in the dining room, one behind each chair. This love of pomp was consistent with the tastes of a man who always sent his linen to New York to be laundered.

Not content with the mansion in Vandeventer place, a town house on Fifth avenue in New York, and the so-called "country home" on the North Shore, Pierce maintained a hunting lodge in Texas and another in Wisconsin, with extensive fish hatcheries, and he kept a seagoing yacht for fishing excursions.

Pictures of the oil magnate with his sporting companions were reproduced in stained glass and still serve as windows of the club room in the addition behind the house. This, it is safe to guess, was the master's favorite room. Here the billiard table stood, and here he had his stuffed trophies, a caribou, a moose head, horns and hunting arms. Before the fireplace stretched a gigantic grizzly bear skin. Sometimes the boys, Clay Arthur, Roy and Theron, had their lessons on it, with a private tutor, employed to supplement their instruction at the old Smith Academy.

A DIRECTORY of Vandeventer would have read like a social register in miniature in those gilded days. Next door to the east of the Pierce mansion was the Kerens home, scene of much lavish entertaining, which frequently included visiting celebrities; and to the west lived the Joseph Chapman family, in the house still occupied by the Chapman daughter, Mrs. John Lawrence Mauran. Across the street was the residence of one of the Granite Mountain bonanza kings, who struck gold, Charles Clark, father of the present Charles McLure Clark. The private place also boasted the wealthy homes of Edward Mallinckrodt, founder of the chemical company; the Edmund Wickhams; J. B. N. Kehlor, who made a sizable fortune in the milling business; the Dexter Tiffany family, now scattered; John and Horatio N. Davis, who are still represented in St. Louis society, the elder Daniel Catlin, John A. Scudder, Miss Mary Lionberger, W. H. Lee (father of Mrs. Taylor Carter), and the Lamberts, who, according to one source, "were just getting ready to strike Listerine."

HATS for the SOUTHERN RESORTS

You Will Want to Know the Styles Even if You Aren't Going Away

By Prunella Wood

THE PICTURE HAT, RIGHT, IS POMPANO BROWN STANTUNG STRAW, WITH HUGE PINK TAFFETA ROSE AND NATTIER BLUE VELVET TRIM.

EVEN if you are not headed for the sunny Winter playgrounds, you'll get a kick out of inspecting the new hats intended for the tourists' trade.

It is consoling to rush in from the freezing weather to try on huge, giddy garden hats, caress the silk flowers, study what's new in snappy little brimmed hats intended for golf courses that are emerald green in mid-January.

—o-o—

ONE widely known American hat designer, G. Howard Hodge, has gone into fish story lingo for his new designs. His vivid pink is matched to red snapper, his blues and greens are carrot or angel fish tints, he matches his new, delicate yellow shade to the yellow tail. And this department will glow with the rage of a fighting Siamese fish if it doesn't get a chance to trek South some time this winter, arrayed in some fish tone or other!

RATHER high crowns, surrounded by brims large enough to shade the eyes and set off the profile nicely, are the mood of the new straw sports hats, both active and spectator. Huge cartwheels and croopy picture hats, richly colored and dramatically trimmed, spell the feeling of the afternoon hats. Three colors are not unusual on the dress hats—wine, with crimson and deep blue; yellow, with pale pink and parrot green; pale pink, with pale blue and a dash of fuchsia.

SPEAKING of Kay again, I think she rates her "best-dressed movie actress" title, awarded by a jury of her press agents. Kay has both a notably fine taste in duds, and the figger to wear them—even though I'm afraid she's getting a bit too thick here and there.

I'M DARNED sorry that the romance of Rosa Ponselle, the Metlark, and Carle Jackson of Baltimoh has been jinxed by the newspaper men, who put the hex on it by referring to the happy man as "the ideal husband." What an unbearable handicap for a young fellow in love! The consensus of the world's best thought is that the "ideal husband" is rarer than the Panda which Mrs. Harnkess caught in Mongolia.

Local first-nighters are in a state! Connie Bennett, who was known as a menace to playgoers a few years ago, arrived at Noel Coward's little plays here the other night with her handsome shadow, Gilbert Roland, and was actually calm and gracious when there was a mix-up about her seats! In 1931 she would have blown the roof off the theater with a dandy Bennett tantrum. Gosh, does Connie soften and grow sweet? And why? . . .

OUR FAMED Women's Symphony, conducted by Antonia Brico, has begun its season—with 10 men sawing and tooting with the ladies, to the great alarm of feminine diehards! Is nothing exclusive? Must men chisel in everywhere? Conductress Brico says, "I'm a musician, not a feminist. I've already proved the competence of women. Who plays the music is of little import." Just the same, 'Tonia, have you let us gals down?

WITH THE upturn in the Debutante Market a fact and not a dream, no fewer than 400 18-year-old girls are making their party bows and courtseys this season—and now the ax is falling on this crowd! About 25 years ago Mrs. Arthur Murray Dodge started three small dances yearly called "Junior Assemblies." Now they have become instruments for picking the top 125 of the season's deb mob. The current 125 have already been picked. The other 275, nursing their sorrow, realize that they nave come out—but not quite far enough! . . .

THE dance-lesson madness shows no signs of abatement. Arthur Murray, of here, has turned it into a major industry. He has over a hundred instructors of both sexes, and business and society people go to learn, as much for exercise as for social grace. Mary Lewis, major store exec, is taking tap, not because she expects to compete with Ruby Keeler, but because it makes her feel good. And I saw Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. coming out of Arthur's the other day after his tango lesson. Neely says a tango is a great builder-upper. . . .

Fried Tomato Dish

An excellent tomato dish that can be served at breakfast, luncheon or dinner is fried tomatoes. Slice fresh, solid, ripe tomatoes into quarter-inch slices, roll in flour and fry in, preferably, bacon drippings until the flour is deeply browned. Care should be taken in turning so as not to break the tomatoes, as they become very soft. If a medium size skillet is used, do not fry more than three slices at one time.

This New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.

THEY had a time the other evening on the Astor Roof, pleasing a slightly stewed medical student who had got himself in gaudy shape and who, in a restrained but still insistent way, began asking for request numbers from Vincent Lopez, who is the current maestro on Mr. Muschenheim's premises. "It's a song about somebody whose emotions are being stimulated subcutaneously," he kept muttering. That gave the waiter captains pause. "Subcutaneously," repeated the medico, "you're giving me injections." The waiters were pawing at their temples. Suddenly Mr. Lopez had an inspiration. He dislodged the pianist and played a few bars. The medical stew's face lit up, he clapped his hands, that was it! The band had swung into "You're Getting Under My Skin."

THE LAST STAND of the embattled Bohemians of Greenwich Village, a sort of annual Little Big Horn in Eleventh Street, is Cynthia White's Greenwich Village Ball, which this year is exploding at Webster Hall on New Year's eve. Cynthia is the last of the old Villagers to withstand the assaults of the real estate promoters who have insisted for the last decade or so that this is one of the town's most respectable faubourgs.

In the name of walk-up flats and kitchenettes the realty men, who have curious notions, have robbed the Village of all the charm they could lay hands on, but the shindigs at Webster Hall still maintain a tradition of frontier gayety and whoops-a-daisy abandon in the old manner.

Cynthia gathers all the oldtimers, like Barney Gallant and Reggie Marsh and William Gropper, for her committees and adds a filip of professional celebrities like James Montgomery Flagg, Margaret Rourke-White and Art Young, and half of Mayfair descends on Webster Hall before the night is over. aware that at any moment the celebrants may tear the premises quite apart and desirous of being in on the fun. A sure sign that Babylonish doings are afoot is the inevitable switching, soon after 2 a. m., of the signs on the boys' and girls' powder rooms. From then on the house policemen earn their keep.

THE FAVORITE of the town's theatrical florists, stage doormen tell us, with the possible exception of Max Schling, who has the opulent allegiance of Mr. Coward, Clifton Webb and the Gilbert Millers, is the Fifty-seventh Street posie vendor named Goldfarb, who has himself known commercially as "My Florist." Mr. Goldfarb has drawn up for us a chart of who likes what, and it may help you the next time your play-actor friends have opening nights.

Katharine Cornell is a notorious rose enthusiast, simply daffy over tremendous long-stemmed ones that set you back a pretty penny. Helen Hays favors roses, too, but won't turn up her nose at orchids, the yellow ones, and when sending flowers to her friends, she sends them all arranged in a vase full of water, ready to smell, as it were. Lily Pons has, of course, adopted lilies as her hallmark. . . . Mrs. Fritz Kreisler goes in for chrysanthemums; Arthur Spalding has a yen for tulips when they are available; Mrs. Frank Chapman (Gladys Swarthout) contrives to get white daisies all year round; Lanny Ross is a fall-flower lover, chrysanthemums.

Mary Pickford remembers her friends with large baskets of assorted flowers or bowls of orchids, and always showers them with flower gifts on the various holidays. Even on St. Patrick's Day those who love "The Wearing of the Green" are remembered with pots of shamrock. Roland Young leans toward the unconventional for his house flowers. He prefers nasturtiums, English ivy, pepper berries and wheat. Mrs. Cole Porter always buys white antharium for the house when they are in season.

Katherine Hepburn goes for violets and camelias in a big way. Helen Gahagan prefers the flamboyant purple orchid for her personal adornment and sends fresh flower plants to her friends — chrysanthemums, azaleas, poinsettias for Christmas and begonias in the spring.

Tallulah Bankhead loves to surround herself in her home with the pungent tuberoses and gardenias and for color chooses large, tawny-colored chrysanthemums. Kay Francis sends large baskets of flowers to all her friends in the East. Miriam Hopkins is partial to the beautiful talisman roses and the stately lily. When Josephine Baker is in town she has a standing order for a bracelet and necklace of gerbera (African daisies to you). Kate Smith loves the magnificent white orchids with purple lips. Any questions?

The House You Live In

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

TO paraphrase an old favorite, Mr. Lewis Carroll:

The time has come
The readers say
To talk of Christmas things,
Of trees and wreaths and mistletoe
And all that Yuletide brings.

Christmas time is apt to be such a busy time, what, with shopping and the making of Christmas goodies that festive decoration for the house and gay wrappings for the presents are apt to be put off until the last minute. As a consequence, these little furbelows, which add so much to the spirit of the day, are done in a haphazard manner or not at all when, had they been planned in time, they would have provided the final touch of holiday cheer.

There are two schools of thought on the decorating of houses and trees and the wrapping of packages, but whether you are the type that loves a good old-fashioned traditional Christmas or one who feels that these things should keep up with the modern spirit of the times, do put some thought and effort into their planning. For fortunately, ingenuity rather than money is the main requisite for getting individual effects.

● IN TRIMMING the house for a lovely traditional effect, nothing is more heart-warming than touches of greenery, whether it be shiny laurel leaves for a swag decoration over the mantelpiece or bunches of evergreen boughs either worked into wreaths or tied into clusters with bright colored ribbons. For more modern effects, there is a tendency to combine fresh fruits and even vegetables with this greenery, either in wreaths or in long strings which may be swagged over important points of interest in a room. But, whatever you choose, see that it expresses your personality rather than merely buying a wreath ready-made and letting it go at that.

Aside from greenery, however, there are many other methods of given your rooms a festive air. A deep fringe of cellophane hung around the edge of the mantel shelf will give a needed touch of glitter while cellophane drinking straws have proved a boon to Christmas decorators in the past few seasons. These latter, tied with bright red satin bows would make an unusual front door decoration or might be tied to the lighting fixtures.

SPEAKING OF lighting fixtures, they are one of the grandest spots in a room to get a Christmasy effect, easily and inexpensively. Simplest of all methods and yet one of the most charming, is to remove all the electric light bulbs and replace them with burning candles. The soft glow shed by these candles not only gives an authentic old-fashioned feeling to a room but is extremely flattering to the feminine occupants.

● LAST YEAR, at a most attractive Christmas party I attended, the hostess had covered all her wall brackets with Santa Claus faces which she had made herself. She had saved up the cardboard that came in her husband's shirts from the laundry, cut holes for the eyes and nose which she covered from the inside with red tissue paper so that the light would shine through, and finished it off with a flowing beard made of white cotton. By simply curving the cardboard around the light and fastening it to the wall on either side with adhesive tape she achieved a most merry effect. These little Santa Claus faces were topped off by stocking caps made of red crepe paper with a tiny gold bell at the peak of each cap.

The tree, however, has, without question, the leading role for the occasion and should be accorded its proper share of attention. And here again, individual taste determines the trimming with the old-fashioned addicts sticking to a colorful array of balls and ornaments while the modernists demand a carefully worked out color scheme. But even the traditionally minded will be tempted to add to their usual equipment the adorable little cotton snowballs which are being shown this year for hanging on the tree.

● THE BASE of the tree is often neglected in the trimming and there are such possibilities of making this portion add rather than detract from the finished product. Simple and yet effective would be a huge red satin bow tied around the trunk at the base of the tree. And most delightful and individual was the base of a tree I saw several sasons ago. One of the gifts for the smallest member of the family was to be a very grand set of blocks. Instead of wrapping these, they were placed around the bottom of the tree in a design with the center portion spelling out the legend "Merry Christmas."

—o-o—

IT MAY be true, in the giving of presents, that "it is not the gift but the giver" but to this I would add—and the way the gift is wrapped. Today, people have become so wrapper conscious that all the stores, in addition to having a wide selection of attractive papers, ribbons and seals also have large displays of effective ways of using these wrappings in individual effects. In addition, there is a tendency now to tie some type of little gadget to the top of the package. Individual packages of this type that I have seen used in the past include brown crepe paper wrappings with tiny white trees tied upright with white satin ribbon; and candy striped paper tied with red ribbon and a real candy cane.

But more of all this anon.

Into a buttered baking dish place a layer of cooked peas, then a layer of chopped pimentoes and a sprinkling of cheese. Continue until the dish is full. Pour in three-fourths cup milk and bake in a moderate oven for a half hour.

REMEMBERING ADULTS at YULETIDE

By Elizabeth Boykin

THE glitter of tinsel, the rustle of tissue, the delicious fragrance of cranberry sauce bubbling in the pot, the pleasure in having the family collected for a gay, noisy, good time . . . who said that Christmas was only fun for children?

We love everything about Christmas—even the fuss and feathers of preparation . . . especially the marketing, because there are so many fat rosy fruits and vegetables to choose from and such fine, plump birds! We like to wrap gifts, too, and think up nice surprises, as we're trimming the Christmas tree. Oh, well, maybe we're partial to Christmas because we have a yellow-haired little boy who was born one snowy Christmas eve. But it's a tender day for everybody and we shouldn't let anything spoil the basic sentiment that inspired the celebration of the day.

There's a gentle aura of home so bound up with the festivities of Christmas that makes gifts for the house especially appropriate. It's funny how many different people enjoy gifts they can use during their hours away from the hubbub of the outside world.

Even a bachelor will thank you for a lamp that provides really adequate satisfying light to read by. Or for a table that keeps his smoke, his book and his lamp in pleasant reach of his easy chair. A bachelor also would appreciate a really good humidor for his pipe tobacco.

If a bachelor can come in on home gifts—what about the man of family? We've been listening long enough to jokes about the indifference of the American man to the details that give a house charm . . . that's an inaccuracy if not a complete fallacy. The average American husband is as proud as a prince over his domicile and will skimp on lunches and do without a new suit to afford a new rug or manage to squeeze out enough for a new sofa.

So while you're throwing up your hands at the idea of what to give a man for Christmas, why not trip into the furniture department and select something he'd really use and enjoy—a leather arm chair is the most obvious thing, because it happens to be something that every man would appreciate. Now that leather is fashionable again, and available on chairs in grand colors and washable surfaces, a gift like this could have a place of honor in the living room. And would father be proud and possessive! He'd like that idea of lamp, table or humidor as much as a bachelor, and he'd also enjoy a good desk if he doesn't already have one at home.

A handsome highboy is another good idea for a man if he doesn't already have enough drawer space in the family dresser. Less ambitious gifts that a man would appreciate include oversize bath towels, some very spiffy garden tools or else carpenter's tools if he works around the place, an electric clock, a movie camera or a portable typewriter, a scientifically accurate weather forecaster, a good big dictionary.

AND if there are as many home gifts as these for the men, you can imagine how many lovely things there are to give a woman! We vote for the fancier things for a house—the extras she's not likely to get anyway. Wedgewood or Spode plates, for example, a Haviland cake platter or a coffee set of bright pottery. In table linens we'd choose something lacey—and in bath linens something bright. The table we'd buy the lady of the house would be the daintiest one we could find—little and spindly and only good for feminine occasions like a tea party for two or to hold the prettiest lamp in the world. Or if her house is more simple and provincial we'd get her a maple table that recollects Christmases of pioneer days. A piece of silver or something electrical, a silken down or feather puff comforter . . . all are things she'd be so grateful for.

Another gift for a lady is a vase for flowers. Not just any vase, but one with distinction to set off both the flowers and the room they will be used in. Crystal, porcelain or silver would appeal the most to us, but there are modern things in Kensington metal, chromium and copper that would fit glibly into a contemporary room. If you're feeling especially generous, add candlesticks to match.

A gift of furniture is a good idea if the family wants to club together and get mother a big present. Something she's been wishing for—a bedroom suite or a down cushioned sofa, a mahogany secretary or a beautiful living-room mirror, a fine rug or material for new draperies.

For a young girl's Christmas, give a dressing table mirror, a chaise longue, boudoir pillows, a dresser set of silver or enamel, a pair of dainty lamps, a bed spread with curtains to match, a china tea set.

We hope these suggestions start your thoughts in the direction of home gifts . . because the radios are making us a nation of stay-at-homers. So a gift for use at home will mark you as a modern who's keeping up with the times!

Keeping Silver Wrapped

The housewife who is thrifty about her time keeps her silver wrapped and put away against the tarnish of the season of fires and smoke. Of course, silver is ornamental about the house, as well as useful, but the wise woman who would have it always presentable for use is the woman who keeps it wrapped. Otherwise, the job of polishing, especially at this season, is an unremitting and daily one. Better far to pour the coffee from a brightly burnished silver pot when the occasion arrives than to look at that same coffee pot tarnished to a dull bronze on a side table.

For Cocktail Mixer

Little gadgets for the cocktail mixer are sufficiently interesting to cause a host to buy himself a Christmas gift. Any number of cleverly styled bar towels are included, and among the most striking is a gaily striped linen towel which has a pocket at one end to hold the cocktail shaker. There's no danger of the shaker slipping out of the hands when this towel is used. A towel and apron set is another idea for the bartender who ruins a suit every time he mixes drinks. Red and white provide the most festive color scheme.

Hints for the Busy Housewife

HERE is a miscellany of hints that we hope will prove of use to the busy housewife:

Rummaging through drawers often brings to light crumpled and tired-looking leftovers from the summer wardrobe. Generally, the first impulse is to throw these old things away. Yet very often the only thing required to make the garment serviceable is a thorough cleaning. Anyway, it isn't wise to keep soiled clothes. If it's good enough to keep, each garment should be properly cleaned and put away.

Flannel coats and skirts, of the type so popular during the summer, should go to the laundry or the cleaner. Sports blouses, light pullover sweaters and undies can be beautifully washed in lots of warm, soapy water. The pullovers and silk things should be carefully squeezed between the hands, then wrapped in a towel to dry. Before washing, examine each article carefully and repair where necessary.

Doeskin or suede gloves can be made to look like new by washing them in warm, soapy water and rubbing them gently while on the hands. When dry, put them away carefully. Linen shoes can be made to look fresh and wearable by brushing with warm, soapy water and rinsing with clear, warm water. Dry them on shoe trees, then wrap in tissue and put away. The linen or panama hat can be freshened up by brushing it with warm, soapy water and rinsing in warm water, taking care not to get much moisture on the hat.

To keep pillows fresh and healthy, use your vacuum cleaner. Unstitch one corner enough to admit the nozzle of the cleaner. Send a jet of air through the feathers and you will find that the pillow is as fresh and soft as new. But always take care to hold the pillow tightly around the nozzle of the vacuum to guard against the escape of feathers.

A BABY'S FIRST CHRISTMAS TOYS

WHAT TO GIVE ON A BABY'S FIRST CHRISTMAS IS SOLVED BY THIS COLLECTION OF NURSERY TOYS. THE LARGE-EYED ANIMAL AT CENTER IS MADE OF CELLULOID, WHILE THE DOLL PERCHED ON ITS BACK IS A FLAXEN-HAIRED "RAG" MODEL. MULE, DUCK AND DACHSHUND ARE OF WASHABLE MATERIALS AND ARE MOST COLORFUL.

The Pleasure In Crocheting And Knitting

OUR great-grandmothers knitted and crocheted for dear life, to say nothing of weaving. It was serious business to them because they had the responsibility of keeping their families clothed by their own handiwork.

Wouldn't we feel sorry for ourselves if we had to be responsible for making everything our clan wears, along with sheets, rugs and tablecloths, too? And making things in those days meant making the cloth as well as fashioning the article.

Today we knit and crochet for pleasure and make handwork because it is rare and lovely rather than from necessity.

Take the bed of a girl whom we shall call Nell. It's beautiful and old and very large—a massive poster that was in the White House once upon a time. Of course, there are lots of spreads that she could have used on it. But none of them half as suitable as an old-timey crocheted one—white and rather thick.

So Nell went to work and made herself the loveliest white crocheted bedspread we've seen. It took ages, of course—she said she thought she'd turn to a square before she was through. But what a stunning room that turned out to be—she had the walls papered in a figured paper predominantly orchid. Then used a flounce of white dotted swiss around the bottom of the bed with this same material for the canope ruffle.

The rug in this room was lavender broadloom and the draperies were shell pink taffeta over white dotted swiss glass curtains. And for the dressing table skirt dotted swiss with a draped yoke of shell pink. Then the culminating touch of femininity—a chaise longue in a light gray corduroy slip cover (because corduroy washes so beautifully) with a shall pink afghan and a heap of lavender and pink cushions.

Eyeglasses

Fashions in eyeglasses change, as do fashions in dresses. One must keep up with the pageant. Some designs suit one, some suit another. And the time has come when these matters can be explained. If you must see the eye doctor, go into the business thoroughly. See all the new offerings in frames and lenses.

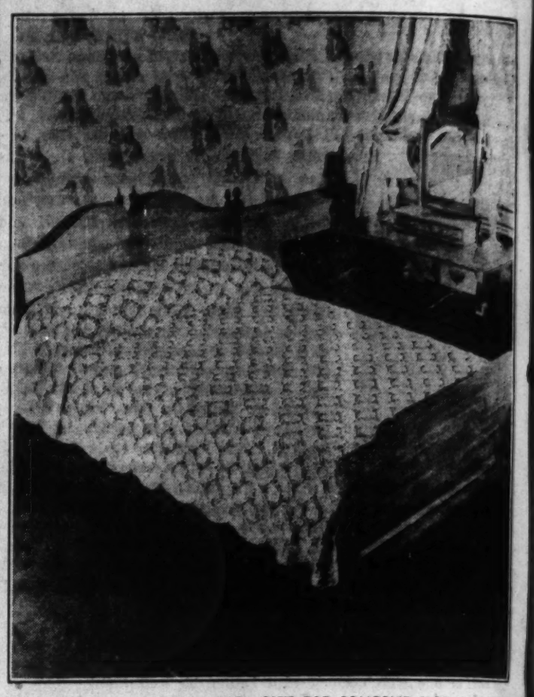

If you have notions of your own, your lenses will be cut to order, though, of course, you will be told what is best for vision if you wander too far afield in your original projects.

Be kind to your eyes. If you aren't, they'll get even with you. When they suffer neglect they can summon any number of sorrows that are not easily banished.

Throat Silhouette

For the perfect silhouette the throat should be slightly thicker from front to back than it is from side to side. The lower portion should have a slight indentation. From that point there should be a gradual fullness of the chest. A glance at one's figure in a triple mirror will prove revealing. A front view isn't as satisfactory as the profile of the body.

Crocheted Spread

WAYS OF DECORATING YOUR CHRISTMAS TREE

SOME like it pine, some like it spruce, some like it cellophane glittering bright. A Christmas tree is an idea, so it doesn't matter so much just what kind of timber it happens to be as long as it's festive and laden with surprises. Where we grew up, the cedar was the official Christmas tree, and to this day nothing smells half so Christmasy to us as cedar.

It's fun to have a white Christmas tree, for variety, trimmed with emerald green glass balls. Wrap the presents in green metallic paper, tie them with white or silver ribbon and heap them around the base of the tree. Or have a white tree with red glass balls—or blue ones — or silver.

But the most exciting way to celebrate is to have a whole room decorated specially for the tree. An attic, basement or playroom is the ideal place . . . keep it closed mysteriously till the moment when the tree is lighted and Santa is on hand. If you're having a white tree, hang the walls with white tarleton and stretch white cheese cloth or white domestic on the floor, then sprinkle artificial snow over it and hang bells and mistletoe about with ribbons the color of your tree ornaments. If you're having a beautiful natural Christmas tree, hang the walls in dark green tarleton and han evergreen boughs and branches about to create the effect of a winter forest . . . have the floor white with artificial snow. Then set the decorated Christmas tree in the midst of this setting and light it brilliantly.

It takes all kinds of celebrations to make Christmas around the world. Some nations put out their shoe instead of their stockings for gifts, and others don't have presents at all.

In the Scandinavian countries it's often a custom to have a reindeer or goat made of straw with presents strapped to his back. And here, too, the holiday calls forth goats and other little figures in gingerbread. In Russia of olden times, the villagers put on animal head masks—bear, goat and stork, and cavorted in the streets. And in the southern part of the United States to this day firecrackers mean Christmas rather than the Fourth of July.

Generally speaking, it's the Teutonic people who go in for Christmas trees . . . Queen Victoria is responsible for the popularization of the custom in England. The Latins center their Christmas in the creche—a miniature replica of the manger scene. In some countries the Nativity scenes are amazingly well conceived and executed and their display dramatically beautiful. Recently there have been many of these shown in the United States — of olden types as well as very modern angels.

In many countries gilded pine cones and gilded spruce are symbolic Christmas decorations. And turkey for the Christmas dinner is mostly an old American custom. In Europe the goose or the pig is much more Christmasy.

Breakfasting in Bed

The luxurious and almost lost art of breakfasting in bed will have to be revived—at least for the holiday season. Designers of elegant gifts have assembled such an array of accessories for lazy breakfasting that givers will find them tempting and recipients can't be ungrateful.

Individual breakfast services of gay pottery or very dainty china are noteworthy as are new versions of the individual coffee set in tiered arrangement. Tray sets of hand-embroidered or hand-blocked linen, hand-painted trays, tufted back rests with satin coverings, and numerous reading stands and lights are included. A maple game table that serves as a breakfast table also is desirable as gifts for a lazy or a recuperating individual.

New Gadgets for the Kitchen

THE household engineers always are busy devising new gadgets that make for less work and better results in the modern kitchen. One of the latest is a sizzling platter that has compartments for meat, two vegetables and gravy. A whole grilled dinner can be cooked and taken to the table with the aid of wooden handles that fit the sides of the hot dish.

—o-o—

A SKEWER SET always comes in handy. The small skewers can be used to close a Christmas turkey, to hold rolled meats and for testing cakes.

—o-o—

To get best results with pot roast, Irish stews, fricasseed chicken or goulashes you should have one of the new Dutch ovens that are built on stream lines with self-basting cover and black handles. If you like pans that you can use on top of the stove or in the oven this answers both purposes.

—o-o—

NOW THAT broccoli is in the market and at its best, take a look at one of the new aluminum steamers, especially designed to cook that tasty vegetable. It steams in an upright position, assuring perfectly cooked heads and stalks and comes out intact with the natural color and real flavor.

—o-o—

SOMETHING NEW in a way to sprinkle clothes is the latest effort of a smart designer. It is a chromium-plated sprinkler, which you fill with water and has adjustable nozzle which provides a heavy or fine spray. The fine spray will enable you to dampen your clothes while you iron.

—o-o—

CUP CAKES or muffins will never stick in the new cake tins that have shallow grooves in the bottom of the pans. They keep the cake from sticking by distributing the grease and help the cakes to brown evenly.

—o-o—

IT TAKES a long time to slice a batch of string beans by hand, and that's the only way they are really good, but an inventive cuss has come to the rescue with a little gadget that does the job perfectly. It also hulls peas in a jiffy.

—o-o—

AN ELECTRIC teakettle, that fills through the spout, toots cheerfully when the water boils.

—o-o—

You can do most anything with the new kitchen shears. They can be used to cut vegetables, fish or poultry. In addition the top is a combination bottle opener, nut cracker and lemon squeezer. One blade has a serrated edge and what a grip that has on slippery bacon! The handles come in gay colors and the blades are chromium plated.

—o-o—

A KITCHEN TABLE can be smart these days. One seen recently had a metal top and cromium steel legs.

—o-o—

WOODEN SPOONS can be found now in new forms, notably a salad spoon and fork together and asparagus server.

Rector's Own Recipes

By George Rector

A FRENCH dressing should be made from olive oil—either French or Italian. You can decide this point yourselves by selecting the one that appeals to your taste. Here is the basic French dressing recipe that we used in Rector's for years and from this simple formula it is possible and quite within the bounds to add any one of a dozen flavors for variety. Namely—a clove of garlic, Worcestershire, tabasco, curry powder, celery salt or cayenne. Also chili sauce, finely chopped chutney, walnut ketchup, tomato ketchup, or Roquefort cheese. And last, but not least, when we add finely chopped chives, parsley, vinegar pickle and capers to our French dressing, we come out with a delightful dressing known as "Vinaigrette," which is especially good on cold artichokes or asparagus salad.

In the restaurant we found it practical to shake the French dressing, rather than mixing in a bowl, using Sauterne wine bottles that we fitted with good corks. The bottles were never filled to capacity, but only half filled, as we wanted empty space for a thorough shaking. Please don't get the impression that I've mentioned an empty Sauterne bottle to make it sound difficult—like the little boy adding the elephant to the riddle—any transparent bottle with a tight cork will do.

Here is the French dressing recipe:

One and one-half cups olive oil, one-half cup vinegar, two level teaspoons salt, one level teaspoon white pepper and one level teaspoon paprika. Shake the ingredients thoroughly and keep in the refrigerator until wanted.

—o-o—

A MIXED green salad, when garnished with finely chopped beets and hard-cooked eggs, earns the pretty name "Chiffonade." This salad can always be a novelty, because you can select different greens from time to time for the salad. Here is the list to choose from: Lettuce, romaine, escarole, chicory, dandelion, watercress and endive.

Wash and dry thoroughly the variety of greens you wish to serve and keep them in the refrigerator until well chilled. Just before serving put them in a salad bowl and sprinkle over the top one hard-cooked egg, finely chopped, and two tablespoons of chopped beets. Add one-half cup of French dressing and toss lightly until mixed.

Possibly the most popular salad dressing among men is Roquefort cheese dressing—poured liberally over hearts of lettuce or romaine. This type of salad is always served individually and since it is salad and cheese combined, it should come on as a separate course.

—o-o—

HERE IS the way I go about making the dressing for this "hefty" salad: Cream one-quarter pound of Roquefort cheese by forcing it through a fine sieve; then gradually beat in one cup of French dressing. This method of creaming the cheese will produce a thick emulsified dressing, which I am very fond of. However, if you like to see little pieces of Roquefort on top of your salad, then don't use the sieve—but with the prongs of your trusty fork crumble the cheese until it is the size that you would like to have it.

Now a cooked fresh vegetable salad is a meal in itself, and when artistically arranged it becomes a picture to behold.. A large wooden salad bowl is the ideal frame for this, and the first procedure is to rub the bowl with garlic. (Rubbing salad bowls with garlic has become a ritual with me.) Then break into small pieces one head of lettuce, which will just about cover the bowl.

—o-o—

ON TOP of the lettuce arrange small bouquets of the following cooked vegetables:

One-half cup shredded string beans, one-half cup diced carrots, one-half cup lima beans, one-half cup thinly sliced beets and one-half cup green peas. Sprinkle over the top one-half cup of fresh raw cauliflower which has been chopped into rather small pieces. Don't be afraid to do this, as chopped raw cauliflower is delicious in a salad. Why not? We eat raw cabbage, and cauliflower is of the same family, but with a college education.

It almost seems a shame to disturb this colorful salad—but since we can't have our salad and eat it—then the thing to do is go to the ice box—reach in for the French dressing and, after shaking it well, pour a goodly quantity over the top. Toss it all together and when thoroughly marinated with the dressing—well, you should know what to do—just begin.

Cookies Which Norway Makes For Christmas

Recipes Listed From a Land of Ancient Customs and Traditions.

NORWAY is a land of ancient customs and traditions. Traces of customs prevalent in Viking days are found in the Christmas festivities now observed throughout the land, especially in the rural communities.

Preparations for Christmas begin well before the first week in December. The house must be cleaned from garret to cellar. Floors and woodwork must be scrubbed and rubbed to bring out their natural grain and colors. Handwoven rugs and drapes must be beaten and dusted. Stoves, andirons and kettles must be polished until they mirror their surroundings. But, above all, the pantry must be stocked with a large variety of choice cookies and other good things to eat—and all this takes time.

Berlinerkranser are the aristocrats of the Norwegian cookie jar. If properly stored, they are always ready for any emergency or occasion. For a sweeter cookie, increase the sugar to 1¼ cups, and add flavoring as desired.

BERLINERKRANSER

Four egg yolks, hard cooked
Four egg yolks, beaten until thick
One cup sugar
Two cups butter
Four cups sifted flour (about)
Two egg whites
Two tablespoons water
Crushed loaf sugar

Force hard-cooked egg yolks through fine sieve; add beaten egg yolks and one-half cup sugar and beat until smooth. If butter is very salty, wash it in cold water to remove part of salt, then cream until soft and smooth. Beat in remaining sugar and egg yolk-sugar mixture. Gradually stir in flour until dough is smooth, using hands when it becomes too stiff to stir. Chill. Force dough through cookie press, using plate with round die about three-eighths inch in diameter, or roll dough on board in pencil-thick sticks, cut in three-inch lengths and shape in rings with ends crossed. Dip tops in egg white beaten with water until frothy, and sprinkle with crushed loaf sugar. (Place egg white and water in shallow saucer.) Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees to 400 degrees F.) for eight to ten minutes, or until delicately browned.

These paper-thin, rolled wafers with their elaborate scrolls are as tempting on a cooky tray as they are fragile looking. Krumkaker or cornucopias are baked in a special waffle-like iron. If one is not available, try dropping this rich mixture from a teaspoon on the lightly greased bottom of an inverted baking pan; spread with knife into thin circular shapes and bake in moderately slow oven (325 degrees F.) about 10 minutes, or until delicately browned. Remove and shape at once, top side out, over handle of spoon.

KRUMKAKER

Four eggs
One cup sugar
One-half teaspoon crushed cardamom seeds
One-quarter teaspoon vanilla
One-eighth teaspoon almond extract.
One cup butter, melted
One tablespoon konjakk (brandy)
Two and one-quarter cups sifted flour

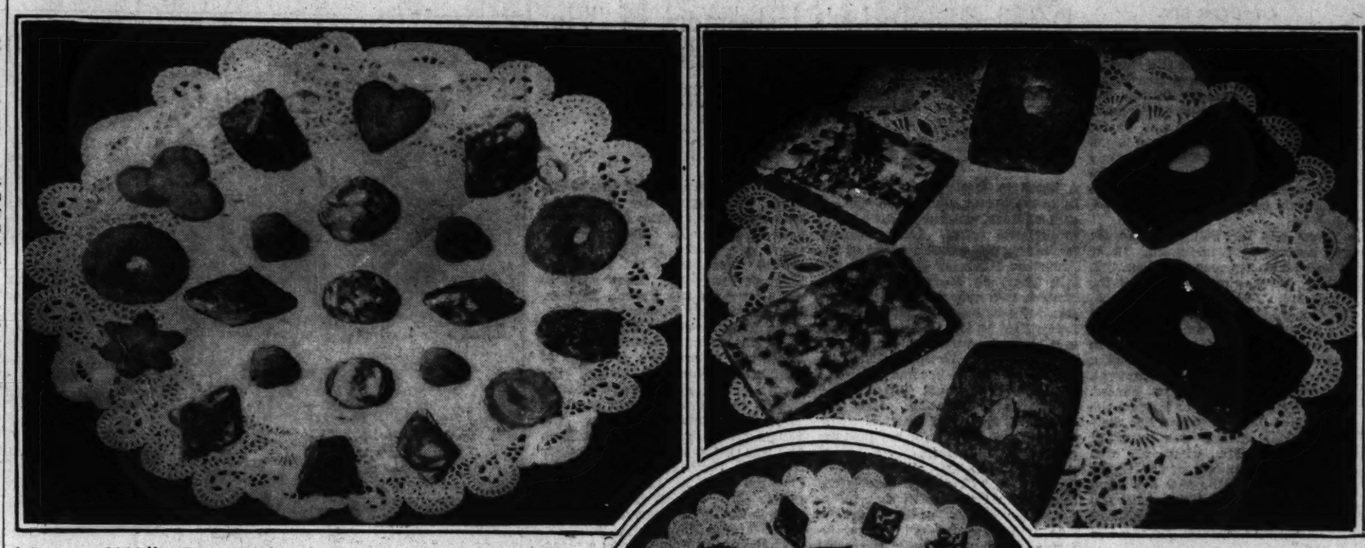

Beat eggs until light; gradually beat in sugar, then flavoring. Stir in melted butter, brandy and flour. Place one teaspoon in center of moderately hot krumkake iron and press iron together tightly. Bake about one minute, or until delicately browned. Remove from iron and roll at once into cone shape, or fit into cup. If cake becomes brittle before shaping, place in warm oven to soften slightly. Serve plain, or fill with whipped cream or ice cream and serve as dessert. Approximate yield: 50 cookies.

FATTIGMAND

Six egg yolks
One-third cup sugar
One-eighth teaspoon cinnamon
One-quarter teaspoon crushed cardamom seeds
One-quarter teaspoon grated lemon rind
One tablespoon konjakk (brandy)
One-half cup heavy cream, whipped
Three egg whites, stiffly beaten
Three cups sifted flour (about)
Powdered sugar

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Combine sugar, cinnamon and cardamom seeds; gradually add to egg yolks, beating until very light. Add lemon rind and brandy; fold in cream and egg whites. Gradually stir in flour until dough is just stiff enough to handle. Chill thoroughly. Place about one-third of dough at a time on lightly floured board and roll very thin. Cut in diamond-shaped pieces with cutting wheel or knife by cutting in two-inch strips lengthwise, then crosswise on a slant. Cut a slit one inch long in each piece at one end and slip point through. Fry in hot, deep fat (365 degrees F.) until delicately browned, turning them once. Drain on unglazed paper. When ready to serve, dust with powdered sugar. Approximate yield: 100 cookies.

GERMAN CAKES in ST. LOUIS HOMES

GERMAN CAKES SIMILAR TO THESE WILL BE MADE IN THOUSANDS OF ST. LOUIS HOMES DURING THE HOLIDAY SEASON.

Many Will Be Baked by Housewives Here for Christmas Season; Recipes Are Offered

By IRMA S. ROMBAUER

IN Germany so many varieties of Christmas cakes are produced that their number is bewildering. Every section of the country has its special bake and some cities dignify a cake by its name.

For a long time after their large immigrations to this country, the Germans clung lovingly to the traditions of the Fatherland. The Christmas tree and the celebration on Christmas eve did not give way to the stocking on Christmas morn, nor did the fruit cake and plum pudding supplant the Christmas cakes.

In the United States, the customs of all nations are readily amalgamated and sectional and even national lines soon disappear. In the course of time, the Christmas tree was adopted by the Americans and some form or modification of the German Christmas cake is now to be seen in every bake shop.

Hansel and Gretel houses of Lebkuchen (with dolls to represent the old brown witch and the children), square white anise cakes, called springerle, honey or molasses cakes decorated with almonds, and the delicious cinnamon star, are known to all of us and frequently in homes where there is no trace of German ancestry, a plate of German Christmas cakes is passed to visitors at holiday time.

This is what the kitchen at home in my childhood invariably produced. First of all, the honey or molasses cakes. These were later arranged on the bottom of the cake plate. Over the Lebkuchen, we placed springerle and little flat anise cakes made with the left-over yolks (as were also the butter cakes formed by the letter "S"). Then came the more delicate and decorative nut cakes. The plate was decorated with some chocolate mice or some bonbons in bright wrappings and topped with a piece of holly.

Are you ready for the feast? Begin with German honey cakes for the dough for these must be made in advance.

German Honey Cakes

Honey, like molasses, is apt to be troublesome. Old German cooks insisted on its being more than a year old. Very good cakes are made with fresh honey, but then the amount of flour is a little hard to gauge. These cakes will keep for six months and longer if placed in a closed tin.

Heat slightly in a large saucepan: six pounds honey or molasses.

Add and melt: one cup butter.

Sift and add sufficient: Bread flour to make a semi-liquid dough.

Add: one pound almonds, blanched and shredded
One-half pound chopped citron
Four cups sugar
Four tablespoons mixed spices (cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg, mace, allspice)
Four teaspoons grated lemon rind

When dough is nearly cold add:

One ounce carbonate of powdered ammonia (hartshorn), dissolved in one-half cup water, wine or rum.

Sift and add sufficient: bread flour to make a dough that will stick to the hands. The dough may be baked at once, but the cakes are better when the dough has been aged for several days.

It will keep for weeks in a cool place. Roll out the dough (it may be necessary to warm it) and spread it to the thickness of one-fourth inch in shallow greased pans. In doing this, use as little flour as possible or roll the dough between sheets of waxed paper. Bake it in a moderate oven 350 degrees. Cut the cake into squares and ice them with:

Lemon Icing

Whip until stiff:
Two egg whites
One-eighth teaspoon salt

Sift and add sufficient: powdered sugar and grated rind and juice of one lemon to make the icing a good consistency to spread.

If these cakes have a tendency to become hard, place an apple in the cookie jar. If you wish to soften only a small number, put them in the bread box for 12 hours. This applies to all cakes although it is rarely necessary to soften the nut cookies.

Christmas Chocolate Bars

Soft two and three-fourths cups (1 pound) of brown sugar. Beat until light, six small eggs or five large ones. Add the sugar gradually and beat these ingredients until they are well blended. Grate and add four ounces (squares) of chocolate. Combine and sift three cups bread flour.

One tablespoon cinnamon.
One and one-half teaspoon cloves.
One-half teaspoon allspice.
One teaspoon soda.

Add the sifted ingredients to the egg mixture alternately with one-half cup honey or molasses. Chop and add one cup citron, one-half to one pound broken nut meats (preferably blanched almonds, shredded).

Spread the dough with a spatula in two 9x13-inch pans lined with waxed paper. Bake in a moderate oven 375 degrees. When the cake is cold ice it with:

Chocolate Butter Icing

Melt over a very low flame, two ounces (squares) chocolate. Add and melt two teaspoons to three tablespoons butter. Add one-fourth cup hot water, cream or coffee, one-eighth teaspoon salt.

Remove these ingredients from the fire. When they are cool add one teaspoon vanilla.

Sift and add gradually two cups powdered sugar. Slightly less sugar may be required. Stir the icing until it is a good consistency to spread. One-fourth cup cocoa may be substituted for the chocolate. In that case, combine it at once with the hot water and butter. One egg may be substituted for the water, etc. Remove the icing from the fire before the egg is added. When the icing is firm, cut the cake into bars.

Cinnamon Stars

Sift two cups sugar; whip until stiff six egg whites; one-eighth teaspoon salt. Add the sugar gradually. Whip these ingredients well. (The old recipes say for 45 minutes.) Add one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon lemon rind, two tablespoons lemon juice (optional). Whip constantly. Reserve one-third of the mixture. Fold into the remainder: One pound unblanched almonds, ground. Flour a board lightly. Pat or roll the dough to the thickness of one-third inch. Cut the cakes with a star or other cutter. Glaze the tops with the reserved mixture. Bake the cakes on a greased tin in a slow over, 325 degrees. This recipe requires no flour.

Hazelnut Cakes

Sift two three-quarters cups brown sugar.

Whip until stiff six egg whites. One-eighth teaspoon salt.

Add the sugar gradually. Whip constantly.

Add one teaspoon vanilla.

Fold in the ground nuts. Shape the batter lightly into one-inch balls. Roll them in granulated sugar.

Bake them on a greased tin in a moderate oven, 325.

Christmas Pretzels

This rule is for rich, crumbly, white cakes with blanched chopped almonds. They are variously shaped and flavored.

Sift one cup sugar.

Beat until soft one cup butter.

Add the sugar gradually. Blend these ingredients until they are very light and creamy. Beat in two egg yolks, two eggs, one-quarter cup sour cream.

Sift and stir in four cups bread flour.

Shape it into long thin rolls and twist these into pretzel shape. Place the pretzels in a greased tin. Brush them with the Yolk of an egg.

Bake them at once in a moderate oven, 375 degrees.

Yolk Cookies I.

This and the following recipe are good rules for utilizing the many yolks left over from baking Christmas nut cakes. In Germany the dough of No. 1 is invariably used to form the letter "S." I have used it successfully for engagement parties—shaping the initials of the betrothed. The letters are very dainty. This amount makes about 250 letters. Don't worry, they will all be eaten.

Sift one cup sugar
Beat until soft
*One cup butter
Add the sugar gradually.

Blend these ingredients until they are very light and creamy.

Add one-half teaspoon grated lemon rind
One and one-half tablespoons lemon juice.
Beat in eight egg yolks
Stir in four cups bread flour

Chill the dough for one hour, then roll it into sticks one-fourth inch in diameter. Shape these into letters.

Brush them with the yolk of an egg
Sprinkle them with sugar
Bake them on a greased tin in a moderate oven, 375 degrees

Colored sugar may be used.

Yolk Cookies II.

(Gelbe Plaettchen.)

This makes about 200 one and a half inch cookies. They are very light, not at all rich.

Sift two cups powdered sugar

Beat until light, one egg, eight egg yolks

Add the sugar gradually. Beat these ingredients until they are creamy.

Add one teaspoon grated lemon rind

Three tablespoons lemon juice

Sift and stir in one and one-fourth cups bread flour.

Add two tablespoons crushed anise seed (optional).

Beat the dough well. Drop it from a teaspoon well apart on a greased tin. Permit the cookies to dry for 12 hours. Bake them in a slow oven 325 degrees.

Tomatoes in Winter.

Keep tomatoes on the menu even if it is the hot house season for them. They needn't always be fresh when the price is high. Tomato jelly salads made with a gelatine base and canned tomatoes are good and a colorful addition to any table. You can vary the tomato jelly salad with as many combinations of seasonings as you can devise. Try lemon gelatine with a tomato soup for a salad of unusual flavor.

A Menu With Veal Cutlets, Chicken Soup

GLORIFIED CHICKEN SOUP

PUT through the meat grinder, using the finest blade, one cup of blanched almonds and the breast of a boiled chicken. Throw all the skins and trimmings into two quarts of water in which the chicken was boiled. Add a slice of onion, stalk of celery, sprigs of parsley and a small bay leaf. Simmer until the soup is reduced to one quart. Strain and set aside to cool. Remove all fat and reheat with one pint of rich milk and the ground chicken and nuts. Simmer for 15 minutes. Add seasonings to taste. Remove from fire and pour over the yolks of two eggs that have been beaten with one-half cup of cream.

VEAL PROVINCALE

Have two veal cutlets cut three-quarters inch thick. Pound to make tender. Dip in seasoned flour and cook slowly in butter until browned on both sides and tender. Simmer one-half pound of sliced mushrooms in butter with one finely minced clove of garlic. Add four large peeled and diced tomatoes. Season with salt, pepper and celery salt and let simmer about 20 minutes, adding some minced parsley and one glass of white wine. Pour over the cooked cutlets. Garnish platter with water cress.

FRIED OKRA RINGS

Select one and a half pounds of fresh okra and slice. Dip in a mixture made of two-thirds cup of milk and two beaten eggs; then dip in corn meal to cover, seasoned to taste with salt and pepper. Saute in butter until golden brown on all sides.

SCALLOPED POTATOES WITH LEEKS

Six leeks.
Two cups of sliced cooked potatoes.
One cup of cream sauce.
Salt and pepper to taste.

Cut the leeks crosswise in one-inch slices and wash in warm water. Cook, covered in a small amount of boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Arrange alternate layers of sliced potatoes, leeks, cream sauce seasoning with salt and freshly ground black pepper, having the cream sauce on top. Dot with butter and bake in a medium hot oven about 20 minutes.

SPICE CAKE RING

Three eggs.
One scant cup of sugar.
One cup of pastry flour.
One teaspoon of grated bitter chocolate.
One-half teaspoon of cinnamon.
One-half teaspoon of soda.
One-fourth cup of boiling water.

Dissolve the soda in the boiling water. Beat the egg yolks until very light, add the sugar gradually and beat until lemon colored, then add the water and soda. Sift the flour and spices three times, then add to the first mixture and beat hard. Lastly fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in a floured and buttered ring mold in a moderate oven about 30 minutes. Unmold and cool. Fill center with frozen apple sauce.

FROZEN APPLE SAUCE

To two cups of unsweetened apple sauce add four tablespoons of sugar and one-third cup of orange marmalade. Fold in one cup of whipped cream. Freeze to a mush in refrigerator tray or freezer.

Lemon With Lamb

Lemon and lamb are a culinary combination that should be inseparable. Maybe you don't need the lemon along in the spring with the youngest of baby lamb—but for all the rest of the year, don't omit it. Rub the leg of lamb with a slice of lemon when you prepare it for roasting, or squeeze over it the juice of a quarter or half a lemon, depending upon the size of the fruit. There'll be no mutton flavor to the lamb if you do this. The lemon juice gives a delicious tang to the gravy, and whether or not you are a mint with lamb addict, the lemon will help.

Shortcake

Shortcake needn't belong exclusively to the strawberry season. A grand winter dessert is a shortcake made with any canned fruit that pleases the family—peaches, apricots, and the like. Topped with whipped cream, or use with plain cream, it belongs on a winter menu, and solves many a problem for the woman who finds desserts "so hard to plan."

Hot Steamed Fruit Puddings During Holidays

HOT steamed fruit puddings, with foamy or hard sauce, have a way of giving a springtime enthusiasm to the holiday appetite. Try these and prove it to your own satisfaction.

One cup finely chopped suet, mixed with one cup sugar. To this, add two well-beaten egg yolks, one cup milk and two tablespoons brandy, or else flavor with a non-alcoholic extract. Take one pound of figs, chop fine or put through grinder. To figs, add one and one-half cup bread crumbs and three teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon nutmeg, and one-half teaspoon salt. Mix all these ingredients well, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs.

Use a mold or individual steaming cups. Fill greased containers only three-fourths full. Cover securely and steam for four hours. Serve with this sauce:

Make a paste of two teaspoons cornstarch and a little cold water. Then stir in juice of one orange, grated rind of two oranges, one teaspoon currant jelly, one-half cup grape juice and two teaspoons sugar. Place over hot water and cook, stirring constantly for 10 minutes.

Apple Pudding, Cider Sauce

Four or five medium apples, tart ones with the sap in them. Pare, cut into coarse cubes. Sift these dry ingredients together: two cups flour, two and one-half teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon sugar, one-third teaspoon salt. Sift again, then work into the mixture one-third cup butter. Add enough whole milk to make a dough.

Turn out on well-floured board. Cover with the prepared apples. Dust the apples with three tablespoons sugar, one-half teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg and one-half teaspoon cinnamon. Roll up and tuck in edges of dough. Place in a well-greased can and make sure the cover is absolutely water tight. Place can in large pot of water half up over the can. Bring to boil, and steam the pudding for one and one-half hours.

Make a regular butter and sugar hard sauce, but flavor it with two tablespoons hard cider.

THE STAMP REVIEW

By John Chamberlain

THE City of Adelaide, in particular, and all South Australia, in general, are having celebrations in honor of the hundredth anniversary of the arrival of some settlers from England who made their stay permanent. The celebrations are being supplemented by a stamp exhibition which was opened Oct. 20 under the name of the Seventh Australasian Philatelic Exhibition.

In connection with the centenary a set of three stamps was issued, the design of which has been criticized for its enormous amount of detail. It consists of a composite picture showing on the left the original site in 1836; on the right, King William Street, Adelaide, in 1936; and in the center the Old Gum Tree at Glenelg under which the proclamation of settlement was read by Capt. Hindmarsh, on Dec. 28, 1836.

JOHANN GEORG NAGELI is one of the persons whom philately honors who is so obscure that no mention is made of him in the Encyclopedia Britannica. Switzerland honors him by placing his portrait on one value of the "pro juvente" (for the children) anti-tuberculosis semi-postal issue of this year.

Students of music may know that Nageli, an eminent music publisher, was born near Zurich on May 16, 1173. He died there Dec. 26, 1936. In 1792 Nageli started a music business in Zurich and became immensely successful.

Nageli interpolated four bars of his own into one of Beethoven's sonatas, for which Beethoven later forgave him when they became very good friends. Nageli's compositions were vocal choruses for church and school use. He founded and was president of an association for the encouragement of music; and, also, was a great adherent of the system of education propounded by Pestalozzi.

● BRITISH EMPIRE collectors are undergoing a philatelic stock exchange scramble due to the surprise issue of the King Edward stamps overprinted of the International, French and Spanish Zone Agencies in Morocco.

The belated issue of the 4p surface printed stamps of King George has been followed by an unexpected overprinting of the short issues of the King Edward VIII. It has been stated that the stamps, by mistake, were sent to the printer for surcharging, and the 2½d brings $2.50 according to London quotations. Whether further printing of these stamps will be made is not known; and, if not, every subscriber to new issue service has received the best present since the one-piastre Egyptian Jubilee which now brings $15 unused and $25 used per stamp of original five-cent face value.

SYRIA IS supposed to receive its independent status some time next year, and will, of course, issue a new set of stamps instead of the ones now provided by the French Government. The airmail stamps, it is believed, will, however, remain much the same as those in what is now known as Syria, Latakia, and Grand Lebanon, as an air force will be kept there by the French to protect their interests; and the French will supervise the government much the same as England does in the kingdom of Iraq, which was declared an independent state by treaty between Great Britain and Iraq, Dec. 14, 1927.

● IN SPITE of the reports that the new Venezuela set scheduled to appear next January would consist of only six values, it appears from the Official Gazette that the airmail set alone will have 17 values of four different designs, and when issued will cost $15.25. The two high values will consist of only 20,000 copies, while the lower values will range up to 250,000 copies.

The designs were selected from a nation-wide contest, and the design of the airmails is reported to be allegorical.

REGARDLESS of the British ban against Scott's catalogue, British customs authorities have released the invoice of the catalogues. This is believed to be a courtesy to stamp collectors, and not an admission by the authorities that they erred in their finding of their right to prohibit the importation of these books.

THE DESIGN of the most jovial of Australian birds, the Kookaburra or Laughing Jackass, was copied from a drawing by R. A. Harrison, the stamp showing the bird perched on the limb of a gum tree. Four plates were made and the engraving was done by T. S. Harrison.

The stamps were printed on medium white, wove paper, unwatermarked, and were hand gummed. The official color is described as claret, but most copies show a strong inclination toward brown. A total of 960,000 stamps were issued, but the vast majority of them were used on telegrams; and it is estimated that about a fourth of the copies saw postal use. The mint stamp is generally conceded to be greatly undercataloged.

MRS. SIMPSON'S SEPARATION From SPENCER

By EDWINA WILSON

CHAPTER SIX.

When Lieut. Spencer was ordered to Washington, D. C., he and his wife both thought that the change, perhaps, might mean a new start. Wallis was anxious to see her mother again, her aunts and cousins in Washington. Perhaps, there, she and "Win" would find some of the happiness together that they had known during his visit the summer before their marriage. Perhaps they could leave the past behind——

They said farewell to California and arrived in Washington. Later it was Lieut. Spencer who departed, alone. He was ordered to sail for Shanghai. Wallis remained in Washington and their farewell had the solemnity with which men and women face important decisions in their lives. It was, each believed, a farewell that was to be permanent.

Presently, as the days passed, Wallis Spencer began to pick up the threads of her life before her marriage. Her mother was living at Chevy Chase, Md., where she was hostess and manager of the Chevy Chase Club. Wallis saw her aunt, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, frequently and visited the Barnetts at their country estate, "Wakefield Manor."

Rhoda Fullam and her sister, Marianna Sands, were back in Washington, and at their home Wallis Spencer's circle of friends was considerably widened. She met the younger members of the army and navy set and the diplomatic corps. She began to be seen about at dinner parties, at teas and receptions at the Embassies and Legations.

It was the time when the "Soixante Gourmets" held a prominent place in Washington social life. The "Soixante Gourmets" was a luncheon club, composed of 60 of the younger foreign diplomats — the charge d'affaires and secretaries from the various Foreign Offices—who met each mid-day at the Hotel Hamilton. Each member was expected to bring a woman guest, and a huge table, extending entirely down one side of the dining room, was reserved for the club.

The talk at "Soixante Gourmets" luncheons invariably was lively and entertaining, conducted in three or four languages—French, Spanish, Italian—all within earshot. A young woman fortunate enough to be a guest might find herself seated with young Baron von Plessen on one side and Don Gelasio Caetani, Italian Ambassador, nearby. Across the table might be Pete de Sibour, one of the founders of the club, and Jules Henry of the French Foreign Office. Harold Sims of the British Embassy was almost sure to be present. So was Felipe A. Espil, today the Argentine Ambassador.

Wallis Spencer appeared at "Soixante Gourmets" luncheons frequently. She was often seen, too, with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Neilson. For a time when the Neilsons left Washington to return to their home in New York, Wallis Spencer took their apartment. The Neilsons' friends thought it amusing that so many people made comments on the fact that "Freddy" looked so very much like the Prince of Wales. The resemblance, as a matter of fact, was striking.

IN Washington, too, began Wallis Spencer's friendship with Ethel Noyes, daughter of Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, and sister of Frances Noyes Hart, the author. Ethel Noyes married Willmott Lewis, later knighted by King George V, and she is known today, both in America and Europe, for her wit. No beauty, out-spoken, Lady Lewis said of the honors conferred upon her husband, "Well, it took King George to make a lady of me!"

Wallis Spencer and her friends frequently were guests at dinner at the home of Harold Sims, who, a bachelor, had an imposing house and gave many large parties. His reputation as a host was enhanced by the presence of an ultra-English butler, Jones, about whom stories are still current in Washington. Harold Sims' home was one in which lady guests were never served any beverage stronger than wine. He disapproved of women drinking cocktails and highballs and, while the grog tray was brought about for the men, the ladies sipped their Barsac and water.

For a time Wallis Spencer shared a home in Georgetown with Mrs. Luke McNamee, whose husband, absent on duty, was chief of the naval intelligence office. Later Captain McNamee was naval attache of the American Embassy in London, and still later, as Rear Admiral McNamee, was ordered home to command the destroyer squadron of the battle fleet on the Pacific. For several years he was president of the War College at Newport, R. I., resigning in 1934 to become chairman of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation. Mrs. McNamee, daughter of Admiral Swinburn, is well known for her portrait paintings of children.

The little house where Wallis Spencer and Dorothy McNamee lived in in Georgetown was unimpressive, viewed from the street. Inside it was charming. Here, informally but attractively, the great names of Washington society were entertained. Here there was sure to be sprightly conversation of all that was new in politics and art and literature and events of the day, both at home and abroad.

In 1923 Wallis Spencer made her first trip to Europe. She went with numerous letters of introduction, and in Paris joined Ethel Noyes. On her return from this trip, Wallis Spencer announced a decision. Lieut. Spencer was still stationed at Shanghai. Wallis had made up her mind to join him and seek a reconciliation.

Her mother, married for the third time and now Mrs. Charles Gordon Allen of Washington, dreaded to see her daughter go. She said to a friend, "It's such a long way and such a strange place—Shanghai. But I've always let Wallis make her own decisions and I'm not going to try to influence her now. I wouldn't want her to stay because she thought I wanted her to. She mustn't know how I feel about it—but I'm afraid for her and I'm afraid no good will come of this trip.'

But Wallis had made up her mind to go to China. And so bags were packed and tickets purchased and, amid farewells and with characteristic composure, Wallis Spencer set off for the ancient land of the Manchus.

It was the beginning of a new chapter in her life.

—o-o—

THE YEARS 1925 and 1926 in Wallis Spencer's life were a tale of two cities. Cities as unlike as any two on this earth—Shanghai, China, and Warrenton, Va.

Shanghai, the Oriental seaport, with its million and a half population, its teeming harbor, its astounding mixture of poverty and opulence, of ancient civilization and modern commerce, of Buddhist temples and Hollywood motion pictures, "the most cosmopolitan city in the world."

Warrenton, where 1450 souls, comprising the population, go their pleasant, prosaic way, farming fertile fields set amid rolling hills, riding and hunting in season, and giving little thought to the rest of the world.

Shanghai and Warrenton—

Wallis Spencer knew them both, and made a place for herself in each.

In Shanghai, Lieutenant and Mrs. Spencer were entertained a good deal. The Army and Navy set gave parties. There were luncheons and teas and sight-seeing trips. The Spencers took an attractive flat and, from her maid, Wallis learned to speak a few Chinese phrases — enough to make shopping easier and to give directions when she rode in rikshas.

And, for a time, it seemed that the purpose of her trip had been accomplished. There is no doubt that the lieutenant and his wife both made sincere efforts to patch up the raveled course of their domestic life. Older, wiser, they did try—both of them—to avoid the mistakes of the past.

Lieut. Spencer was obliged to be away much of the time. When some new friends, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, asked Wallis to visit them in Peiping, she accepted the invitation. The Rogers are Americans who spend their time in whatever part of the globe seems most attractive. Their friendship with Wallis Spencer has continued through the years. They were to meet later on the French Riviera. Still later—in September, 1936—when King Edward VIII, returning from his summer cruise on the "Nahlim," entertained a group of friends at Balmoral Castle, the names of his guests were flashed around the world by news services. The list included—besides the King's brothers, the Duke of York and the Duke of Kent, and their wives, the Duchess of York and the Duchess of Kent, and other titled guests—Mrs. Ernest Simpson, the former Wallis Spencer, and Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers.

That visit in Peiping was a pleasant one. At the American Embassy there were friends Wallis Spencer had known in Washington, others with whom she had mutual acquaintances. She went to "at homes" in Chinese gardens that looked like picture postcards, to Legation receptions where Japanese, German, Scandinavian and Italian ministers and attaches bowed and paid courtly compliments and sandalled servants passed trays of food. The Rogers took their guest to visit ancient temples and palaces, to the cinema that, in Peiping, is as important as the opera or theater, to shop in the "silk street" and "jade street."

The influence of that year in China was to stamp itself indelibly on Wallis Spencer. An indication of this is the famous photographic portrait of her made by Man Ray, the French artist. In this photograph, she wears a coat of Chinese cut. She is standing against a dark background and her face, turned slightly, has the dignity and fragility of a Chinese princess, pictured on a priceless bit of porcelain.

TODAY, in her London home, there are numerous reminders of her stay in China. There is a handsome screen, standing in the entrance hall, and, in the drawing room two beautiful porcelain fishes. There are lacquer and porcelain boxes and bits of brocade. In China, too, Wallis Spencer began her collection of "lucky" elephants—tiny figures carved of ivory and jade and turquoise and a dozen other substances. Her favorite colors are the Chinese shades—unusual blues, jade, amber, soft browns, flame and the pink of rose quartz.

From Peiping Wallis Spencer returned to Shanghai, and the months drifted on. At the end of a year she and Lieut. Spencer faced the conclusion that was inevitable. They decided that, for each, it was best to end their marriage.

They said farewells, knowing that, this time, they were to be final, and Wallis sailed for America.

THE WARREN GREEN Hotel in Warrenton, Va., is a rambling structure where life moves complacently, seldom with needless energy. From its windows, there is a view of Warrenton's two principal thoroughfares, and, beyond, the rolling Virginia landscape.

Wallis Spencer arrived there June 10, 1926. A year later she said, in answer to questioning by Judge George Latham Fletcher, "I came to Warrenton to be near my family. I knew some people here. All my family are in Washington."

At the Warren Green Hotel she unpacked her trunks with their steamer labels. She took out her screens and brocades and lacquer boxes. Presently—she has a decided talent for making her surroundings reflect her personality—the two-room suite became colorful and homelike. Visitors who were entertained in that living room remember that there were always flowers in profusion. They remember the display of "lucky" elephants—and some of them added to the collection.

Wallis Spencer had no servants at the Warren Green Hotel, but Jake, the grizzled old colored porter, could not do enough for her. Jake used to wash her dog, "Sandy." "Sandy" had been acquired by adoption and had other owners, but as long as Wallis Spencer was in Warrenton, he remained with her.

Warrenton is in a section of Virginia where there are many country estates, where hunting and racing are subjects of the keenest interest and several families own their own packs of hounds. Each year the outstanding event is the Warrenton Gold Cup Race in which gentlemen jockeys from all over the country ride.

The day starts with luncheon at one of the large country homes. House and gardens and grounds are always overflowing with guests. Then there is the race, laid out over a course crossing "Clovelly," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin Spilman, who keep open house for the day. At night there is the dance at the Warrenton Country Club at which the men wear the pink coats of the hunt and the women their smartest formal gowns.

Wallis Spencer soon found herself very much at home in this life. Among her friends were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hasrick and Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Larrabee. Occasionally she drove over to Middleburg to visit Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White. She was friendly, too, with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Winmill and Mr. and Mrs. John Buchanan.

SHE made a trip to New York that year—a casual visit that was unimportant except for a single event. She went to dinner at the home of an old friend, Mrs. Jacques Raffray, who, as Mary Kirk, had been one of the bridesmaids at the Spencers' marriage. Two of the other guests that evening were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Simpson. Ernest Simpson, a tall, well-set-up man with English coloring—blue eyes, light brown hair and mustache—was employed by the ship-chartering firm of which his father was a member. Mrs. Simpson, the former Mrs. Dorothea Parsons Dechert, was the daughter of Arthur Webb Parsons and a great-granddaughter of a former Chief Justice of Massachusetts. The Simpson had been married in 1928 and had a daughter.

Wallis Spencer saw the Simpsons once or twice after that. She met a number of other people in New York, did some shopping, saw some plays, and returned to Warrenton.

She had not intended, when she went to the little Virginia town, to make it her permanent residence. But she enjoyed it there. She found she liked it better the longer she stayed. Frequently she saw her old friends from Baltimore and Washington.

She went to Baltimore for the Maryland Hunt Cup Race, joining a group of friends from Pittsburgh. One of them was Elizabeth Key Lloyd, now Mrs. Morgan Schiller, and later the group drove to Wye House on the Eastern Shore, owned by the Lloyd family.

Wye House is a famous pre-Revolutionary country house. The original house, built in the seventeenth century, was burned and rebuilt before the Revolution. Some of the smaller buildings, still standing, are of seventeenth century construction. The orangery, back of the house, is said to be one of the finest examples of Georgian architecture in America. Wye House is famous, too, for its box hedge labyrinth. All of the furnishings in the house are original colonial pieces, and lighting, by night, is by means of lamps and candles.

The place abounds in traditions and has rooms that are believed to be haunted. There was a good deal of discussion, on Wallis Spencer's visit to Wye House, about the "haunted" rooms and who should be assigned to them. The week-end passed, however, without ghostly visitations.

On Oct. 25, 1927, S. Davies Warfield died in Baltimore. His niece attended the funeral, Oct. 27, at Emanuel Protestant church. It was at three o'clock in the afternoon and at that time all trains of the Seaboard Air Line railroad were stopped for a period of five minutes.

One Dec. 6, in the Circuit Court of Fauquier County, at Warrenton, the hearing of Wallis Spencer's divorce suit began. Judge George Latham Fletcher presided. The charge was desertion and, on Dec. 10, the decree was granted.

Wallis Spencer left that courtroom in Warrenton free of marital bonds. It was the ending of one chapter in her life. . . . A chapter that had stretched from Baltimore to Florida and California and Washington and Paris and Shanghai. . . . It was the beginning of a new chapter . . . and even Wallis Simpson scarcely could have dreamed what distances this new one was to take her.

LATE AFTERNOON lights glowed in the New York apartment living room. There was a fire burning on the grate and a tray on the low table before the davenport. Ice tinkled in glasses and twisted spirals of cigarette smoke rose, blending with the scent of roses in a silver bowl against the wall.

Two women and a man sat near the fire. Others, across the room, were looking out at the Manhattan skyline, beginning to sparkle, here and there, with its nightly radiance.

The low hum of voices was interrupted by a man standing before the fireplace.

"But there's a fortune in it!" he exclaimed. "It's the biggest thing in years——".

"What is, Morgan?" one of the women at the window demanded.

"Why, this thing I've been telling you about. These construction elevators. I've gone over the whole proposition. It's sound—absolutely 100 per cent!"

Another voice, not loud but receiving instant attention, spoke then. It was a woman's voice.

"Why, that's marvelous!" she said. "Here you have this new business you're so enthusiastic about and here am I, wanting a job. There must be something in such a big business that I could do."

"You—a job?"

"Why, Wallis!"

—o-o—

THERE were other protests. "What on earth do you want a job for?" "What could you do?" "Honestly I never heard of such a thing."

"Do you really mean it, Wallis?" the man asked doubtfully.

"Certainly I mean it. Why not?"

"By George, I believe you do!" The man before the fireplace turned, studied the face of the woman who had spoken. "You could do it, too!" he announced, snapping his fingers. "By George—of course you could. You've got personality, appearance, enthusiasm!"

"But she's never done anything like that in her life," said one of the others, coming forward. "Wallis—you can't be serious. You don't mean that you really want to go to work!"

Wallis Spencer smiled. "Other people get jobs, don't they?" she said. "Then, why can't I? I do want a job, it's the one thing I do want."

The man beside her took out a cigarette case, offered it and struck a match.

"You'd be splendid at any job you made up your mind to undertake," he said quietly, "but somehow I can't think of you in connection with anything as ponderous and ugly as construction elevators. What do you plan to do about them? Demonstrate them——?"

"She could sell them!" the other man cut in abruptly. "It's a great idea. Why, Wallis could hypnotize anyone into buying anything in the world. Maybe she hasn't had business experience, but she won't need that. Wallis, it's a great idea. It's better than that; it's brilliant. I want you to come out to Pittsburgh and talk this over. We're going to go through with it!"

Wallis Spencer made the trip to Pittsburgh, but she did not sell even one construction elevator. Later judgment prevailed and she gave up the venture.

Perhaps, as a business woman, she would have made a success—even in such an unusual field. After all, it was her grandfather, Henry M. Warfield, who persuaded directors of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to build their first grain elevator, said to be the first one in the country. The episode is interesting because it is one more adding insight into the character of this unusual woman.

Calling All Dogs

By Albert Payson Terhune

THERE is a strange lure, to most dogs, in going for a ride; in a motor or in any vehicle; from a rowboat to an airplane. I have tried to study out the reason. But I can't. All attributable causes, put together, don't explain to my satisfaction why the average dog is so daft about a ride. Many a dog, at various airdromes, races wildly cross the field to scramble aboard a plane that is about to take off. One such dog (a fox terrier) hung up a record of "117 consecutive hours of dual flight."

Two of my collies, Bruce and Sunnybank Gray Dawn, were veterans of numberless dogshows. At such shows they sat or lay majestically on the benches; or went through their ring paces, in the presence of hundreds of other pure-bred dogs. Not one sign did they give that they were aware of these animals' presence. They ignored them and behaved with lofty dignity. But when, riding on the back seat of our touring car, they chanced to see some dog trotting past along the roadside, Bruce and Dawn roared and screeched at him for perhaps half-a-mile.

A rider gloating over a common pedestrian—or what? To me the whole thing is an unsolvable canine mystery.

NEXT in vital importance to teaching him to lie down at command, is making your dog obey the order, "Heel!" In other words, he must be taught to walk at your side or directly behind you; and to remain so until you give him leave to go ahead. At the word, "Heel!" he must turn back from wherever he is going; and must march sedately beside you or just to the rear. This is a needful achievement. It is almost impossible for you to lose him or for him to lose you, in the most crowded street, if he has mastered this. Nor will he get into trouble with other dogs or with people, nor be run over.

When he is only a few months old, start in on it. Take him out for a walk, in some secluded place, with a very long leash or chain fastened to his collar. Say to him, "Heel!" at the same time steadily and slowly drawing him back toward you by the leash. (Draw, don't jerk). All this time, keep repeating, "Heel!" Praise and pat him when he has been drawn all the way back to you. Do this, over and over again. At last he will drop back to you at the mere command and without the reminding tug of the leash at his collar.

Some dogs learn this almost at once. It takes longer to teach it to others. All can master it soon or late, if they be rightly taught.

Holiday Gifts For the Man Who Smokes

List Includes Pipes, Tobacco Humidors and Cigarette Cases.

By Esquire

THE smoker is fair game for the gift giver. Whether he favors cigars, cigarettes or pipes, there are many gifts, smart in appearance and fascinating in their ingenuity that will please him. If he smokes, your gift problem is pretty well solved. Check his favorite form of the weed and give him a generous supply of the particular brand he swears by, or give him something with which he can light, puff through, carry or store it.

A chrome pipe rack that the late Chic Sale might have called a "four holer" will please the pipe smoker.

There is a modern crystal and walnut pipe tobacco humidor which also provides room for four pipes.

A modern cigarette case of metal and enamel is smartly personalized by three initials on its cover.

Traditionally smart is the pigskin seal or morocco cigarette case that is fairly flat and carries 20 cigarettes.

A desk lighter has been combined with a clock, and a cigarette lighter and case which is particularly appropriate and practical for use with formal clothes.

Will Black Lose Daytime Appeal?

WILL black lose some of its appeal for daytime wear in town now that designers of sports clothes are giving it so much attention?

This is a question which women are asking and which has set the style world wondering. No one seems to know the answer, but there obviously is an increased interest in black for all sports needs, from skiing clothes for St. Moritz to beach attire for Palm Beach. Complete snow outfits of black woolens and furry fabrics were launched in greater numbers this winter than ever before. Occasionally the creators added a flash of color, but many of the most interesting ski costumes have been of black or black and white.

Now comes the news that black is taking precedent over white and colors for wear at the winter resorts. All of the fabrics usually associated with vivid coloring are employed—linen, muslin, broadcloth, coarse silks and synthetics—for all types of sports ensembles.

Ice Box Rolls

Ingredients:

Two cups boiling water.

One tablespoon salt.

Three tablespoons lard.

One-half cup sugar.

Method: Heat the above ingredients. When cool, add two well-beaten eggs and one cake of compressed yeast. To this add seven cups of flour. Put in ice box in covered bowl for 24 hours. Make into rolls of any desired shape, let rise for two or three hours. Bake in quick oven and serve at once. Part of the mixture may be used and the rest kept in the ice box for another baking.

Expressive Lines

The forehead is a rich field for expression lines. Just what do they express, did you ask? What a question. Frown lines express irritation, cross lines suggest the "you surprise me" disposition. Squints come on the face of women who are easily puzzled. A little more of the subdued spirit, if you please, girls. At any rate, while the hair-do continues to back up.

THE Defense Problem

By Ely Culbertson

THE problems of defense are equally clear to defenders on a given hand of the defenders almost always in a better position than the to make decisions. This "better sition" may result from knowledge concerning his own hand it may spring from the fact partner has supplied vital information by means lead or signal card. The immaterial. The fact knowledge or information translated into direct action patently ridiculous to "pass buck" when you yourself only key to the secret door South, dealer.

The bidding:

SOUTH.	WEST.	NORTH.
1 heart	Pass	2 no trump
3 clubs	Pass	3 no trump
4 clubs	Pass	5 clubs

North's three no trump highly questionable, despite that it probably would have fulfilled against the normal opening by East. He should bid four clubs. It then would cost nothing for South to made the obviously tentative of four hearts, which bid would intimate only a fair five-card and would put it up to North whether four hearts or five should be the final contract.

● IT WOULD have required gage on North's part to have mitted four hearts to stand, fact that his doubleton was posed of two honors should influenced that decision. He have been more optimistic ten-trick major suit contract the necessity for winning tricks at clubs.

Against the actual five-club tract West made a lucky opening the four of diamonds rather than a spade. The lead, which theoretically was as good as the diamond opening would have made matters easy declarer and, in fact, would have resulted in twelve tricks, since diamonds in declarer's hand have been discarded on dummy's spades before the lead was considered. Dummy played the ace of diamonds and East won with king, declarer dropping the deuce spot.

Now, it should have been the easiest thing in the world for West to count that declarer had a singleton diamond. West's opening lead, the four spot, with the deuce in sight in dummy, has established beyond a shadow of doubt that declarer's suit was no longer than five cards, since he could have only one card lower than the four.

● EAST DID NOT have to think about the blank ace of spades in declarer's hand in order to realize that he should cash his other diamond trick immediately. On South's two-suit bidding it was obvious that if West held a heart trick it would not get away. Apparently, however, East gave no thought to all this. After winning the diamond he switched to a heart and now, when he won with the ace, he was in a quandary.

He knew that East could not have from the opening lead and nine cards holding whether the declarer started with two diamonds, three or four. East apparently had pointed out that there were no more diamond tricks available to the defenders. From West's point of view declarer's heart suit now was established. If he ruffed a diamond continuation he could draw trumps and discard all of dummy's spades on his good hearts. Thus if East had the ace of spades he would beat it. West, on this flawless reasoning, shifted to a spade and the party was over!

As mentioned in the first part of this article, here was a case in which the defender who actually could count the cards "passed the buck" to the one who was in the darkness.

THE Defense Problem

By Ely Culbertson

THE problems of defense rarely are equally clear to both defenders on a given hand. One of the defenders almost always is in a better position than the other to make decisions. This "better position" may result from his knowledge concerning his own holding or it may spring from the fact that partner has supplied him with vital information by means of a lead or signal card. The reason is immaterial. The fact is that knowledge or information must be translated into direct action. It is patently ridiculous to "pass the buck" when you yourself hold the only key to the secret door.

South, dealer.

The bidding:

North's three no trump bid was highly questionable, despite the fact that it probably would have been fulfilled against the normal spade opening by East. He should have bid four clubs. It then would have cost nothing for South to have made the obviously tentative rebid of four hearts, which bid would intimate only a fair five-card suit, and would put it up to North as to whether four hearts or five clubs should be the final contract.

IT WOULD have required courage on North's part to have permitted four hearts to stand, but the fact that his doubleton was composed of two honors should have influenced that decision. He should have been more optimistic about a ten-trick major suit contract than the necessity for winning eleven tricks at clubs.

Against the actual five-club contract West made a lucky guess in opening the four of diamonds rather than a spade. The latter lead, which theoretically was just as good as the diamond opening, would have made matters easy for declarer and, in fact, would have resulted in twelve tricks, since both diamonds in declarer's hand could have been discarded on dummy's spades before the lead was surrendered. Dummy played the deuce of diamonds and East won with the king, declarer dropping the nine spot.

Now, it should have been the easiest thing in the world for East to count that declarer had another diamond. West's opening lead of the four spot, with the deuce in sight in dummy, has established beyond a shadow of doubt that West's suit was no longer than five cards, since he could have only one card lower than the four.

EAST DID NOT have to know about the blank ace of spades in declarer's hand in order to realize that he should cash his other diamond trick immediately. On South's two-suit bidding it was obvious that if West held a heart trick it could not get away. Apparently, however, East gave no thought to all this. After winning the diamond he shifted to a heart and now, when West won with the ace, he was in a real spot.

He knew that East could count from the opening lead and his own holding whether the declarer had started with two diamonds, and East apparently had pointed out that there were no more diamond tricks available to the defenders. From West's point of view declarer's heart suit now was established. If he ruffed a diamond continuation he could draw trumps and discard all of dummy's spades on his good hearts. Thus if East had the ace of spades he would lose it. West, on this flawless reasoning, shifted to a spade and the party was over!

As mentioned in the first part of this article, here was a case in which the defender who actually could count the cards "passed the buck" to the one who was in total darkness.

—o-o—

QUESTION: Dealer opened with one diamond. Second hand (my partner) doubled. Next hand bid one heart. I held ♠ Q J 10 8 5 2 ♥ 8 ♦ 9 8 3 ♣ 10 5. Should I have shown the spades?

Answer: Yes.

Why Grow Old?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

WOMAN'S life is the permanent battleground of nature against the easy chair, and the prize at stake is her youth and beauty. Nature has given the body the ability to repair itself, to throw off poisons, to stay elastic and vital, but modern habits of living and the instinctive love of woman for the physically lazy, inactive life make it a guess as to whether personal vanity or personal ease will win out.

A few weeks ago I wrote about the neck and chin. Today I am going to discuss the face. There are many parts to the face. We have two eyes, two ears and one mouth. Perhaps nature planned it this way so that we can see and hear twice as much as we can tell. By looking at a face we know a great many things about a woman. We know how she eats, how she exercises, how she rests, how she sleeps and a lot about the way she thinks and feels.

Longfellow once said of faces: "Some of them speak not. They are books in which not a line is written save, perhaps, a date." How terrible it would be to have a face which revealed nothing but our age.

—o-o—

WE CANNOT all have faces that would "launch a thousand ships," but neither need we have faces that would stop a thousand clocks. The radiant beauty which shines from a truly beautiful face lies much deeper than mere regularity of feature. Let us consider some of the factors that give the face charm.

First, animation, health, "pep," tone.

Next, the complexion has worlds to do with the charm of a face. If its skin is marked with pimples, or if it is rough, it is penalized from the start. Do you know that often a dry skin is caused by poisons in the body? No one can have "a skin you love to touch" unless it is fed by a pure blood stream.

Often habits in facial expression tend to age the face. Some people indulge in such grimaces while talking that I have at times held my breath for fear the speaker might dislocate her jaw. Frowning is responsible for many lines. Try to overcome habits in facial expression which cause ugly lines.

Fatigue and poor health mark themselves unmistakably on our faces. In the discouraged, ill-tempered, pessimistic individual, the mouth droops and sags at the corners, while nature moulds the happy person's face with lines of charm and youth.

If you have a dry skin it is wise to use some cream or oil to lubricate it. If you do this you will not so soon form those happy lines which come from laughing and smiling because the skin will be kept soft.

—o-o—

NOW WE come to the question of exercise. Actually all of the exercises I have given you affect the tone and beauty of the face, but there are specialized exercises which will improve its contour unbelievably.

We do not use the facial muscles very much, and it is essential that we work them and bring a flood of blood to them every day. After you do this group you will feel the blood tingle in your face.

I should have given you these exercises around Hallowe'en because if you do them correctly they will teach you to make faces more frightful and funny than any you can buy.

Watch this column this week, for I am going to give an exercise each day which will help you "save your face."

If you haven't all of the neck and chin exercises send a self-addressed 3-cent stamped envelope in for them so you can do them along with your facial exercises. Address your request to Josephine Lowman, in care the Post-Dispatch.

Interest in Copper

An increased interest in copper ware has prompted the collectors and the antique dealers to gather together a variety of objects made from this metal. There is little distinction between the new and the old, as the most modern of pieces are given an aged appearance.

Coffee sets are among the most attractive and popular items, especially desirable now as gift merchandise. Most of these are four-piece sets, as there is a round tray to match. Separate pots to be used for coffee, water or a bouquet of flowers are noted in collections, as are handsome jugs, ash trays and bonbon dishes.

You Can Gain Your Goal, If You Pay Price

Life's Prizes Never Given Free, Patri Reminds Boys and Girls.

By Angelo Patri

DEAR boys and girls: If you could tell your own fortunes, what would you want most to have happen to you? Oh, the other way about, what sort of person would you like most to be? You can be just that sort of person. Begin being him or her right now.

Maybe you want to be a Queen of Beauty. That is within your reach. Beauty is deeper than your skin. It goes down to the very roots of your being and rises to greet the world through your eyes, your voice, your manners. Beauty is not pink skin, golden hair and blue eyes. It is the something that lights those eyes and puts the sheen into that skin and those eyes. You can have it simply by being it day by day. You can win beauty by living with it, practicing it in your daily occasions. Some of the most famous Queens of Beauty were homely women with beautiful souls, souls which they cultivated by taking thought of what they did and how they did it. If that is what you want, take it.

DO YOU wish you were famous? You can have that wish, too, but be sure you really wish it. Just get to work today, and for every day afterward, and do the thing you can do best to the very best of your ability and keep telling the world about it. By and by the world will hear and see, and you will be famous. I didn't say happy. Maybe you will be happy, but certainly you will be famous. All you have to do is to work at your business and shout loud in the market place. The thing is yours.

Would you be rich? Good? Beloved? What is it you ask of life? It is yours for the asking, provided you pay its price. Everything is for sale—not for money; money buys only material things that perish, but for the golden hours of your youth. With them you buy good or ill, according to the wisdom that is yours. Choose, then be what you wish; keep on being it in your imagination, in your attitudes, in your actions. Live like the person you would be, think yourself into that mood and place, and you will either arrive at being that sort of person, or stop wanting to be.

I TELL YOU this to let you know that your fortune is in your own hands for the most part. Daily I hear you wishing: "I wish I got A's. I wish I could win the medal. I wish I could talk like that. If only I could be a dancer. I wish I was popular. I wish people liked me. I wish I could be a famous person."

Then I see you forgetting to study, neglecting to practice, skipping classes, and shirking whatever duty bears down on you. I see the one who wishes he was famous lying down on the job, refusing to help anybody, refusing to do an hour's extra work of any sort—just shirking. And I see the one who wishes he was popular shoving his way ruthlessly through a group of smaller children to take a short cut to the bus. I see you longing and wishing and yet doing the very things that cost you your desires.

Life's prizes, whatever form they take for you, are never given free with a label of an empty box. They have to be paid for in terms of sweat and pain and sacrifice. Nobody ever got anything worth having by wishing and then sleeping on it. Want anything? Go after it. Keep after it; don't slumber until you get it. The way to be somebody is to begin being him today. That's how your pattern did it. That's how you will do it, too.

Cordially yours,

KAY THOMPSON'S RISE TO RADIO STARDOM

with the result that one time, on a coast-to-coast flight, I was two days late in reaching here for a new series of programs. But the series of programs was even later, and didn't start for a week. That's what the radio business is.

"But I love it. In fact, I love it far too much. My chief joy is hearing my own creations played by the orchestra. I get an acute pleasure out of the realization that my own work, my own ideas are being executed by the boys and girls and orchestra, and are being sent out over the network. I get more pleasure out of this than I do from my own work."

BY now the correspondent had recovered her breath. "Some of the fan magazine stories," he said, "would have us believe that you become a success only because the boys wouldn't notice you when your sisters were around. Others insist that you have turned down at least 200 would-be husbands. Another says you are an ugly duckling, but prints pictures that make that hard to believe. And they all have some story about your having appeared with the St. Louis Symphony. Would you mind telling me how many, if any, of these are true?"

"My press agent," she replied, "tells me they are good publicity, so I suppose they must all be true. I'll have to admit, though, that some of them tell me things about myself that I never suspected. One of the funniest stories ever to appear, for instance, is the one about my broken nose. One imaginative writer had me breaking it not only three times, but for that the purpose of attracting attention.

"After all, that's too high a price. As a matter of fact, I did break my nose when I was a small child, but it was a serious accident, and one which I have regretted all my life, as it did no good whatever to my appearance."

"There is only one thing I ask, and that is that you don't say I am a 'good sport' or a 'regular fellow.' There are too many of them in the world now for me to intrude my version."

Kay likes her present job, which began last May.

"I am very happy with the program I am doing now," she said. "Mr. Kostelanetz is a charming gentleman to work with and a fine musician. And the choir with me now is an even more accomplished and willing aggregation than the first one. And there are three young men in this one, too. They do a lot for it."

Kay wanted to know about the latest developments at Washington University, West Presbyterian Church and Soldan High School. "Is Miss Cunningham still at Soldan?" she asked. "I was in her Latin class, to her sorrow. I remember that once I got a grade of 19 on a Latin examination, which didn't surprise me, until the paper was returned and I discovered that I had absent-mindedly written it in French. Perhaps it was better so, for my best friend wrote hers in Latin and was rewarded with a grade of 15."

Asked what advice she would give to girls hoping to embark on a radio career, Kay did her best to look like Dear Aunt Bella. She wasn't very successful in this, but she did propose as follows:

"A girl could do lots worse than to go to work for a local radio station. That way she may find out if she is fitted for the work without losing her railroad fare and her happy home. Of course, local stations, at least those in St. Louis, do not pay much. Anyway, if you've it in you, a local station is better than no station at all. I got my microphone training at KMOX, but my real start came when they laughed at me for suggesting they pay me more than $25 a week."

Kitty Fink's early history is built on a pattern familiar to St. Louisans. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo George Fink, 17 Parkland place, and attended Dozier School, West Presbyterian Church, Ben Blewett Junior High School, Soldan High School and Washington University, with summers at Minnewonka Lodge.

Kitty began taking music lessons when she was 5 years old, and gave them up at the age of 18, when a recital and a radio program conflicted. In grammar and high school she played for music classes, then started playing for sorority rush parties at Washington. She wrote the music for a skit in Pralma Vodvil, played for a Quadrangle Club show, and began to feel pleased when orchestra leaders asked her to play solos.

While she was in Washington a friend called and offered Kitty her first paying job, playing for a dancing class. Kitty said she would take it, but for not a cent less than—she did a little quick thinking, remembering her piano lessons had cost $6 per hour—$3 an hour. When the dancing teacher regained her aplomb, she expostulated the figure was ridiculously high. "Three dollars an hour," said Kitty, who had never earned a nickel in her life, "is the very bottom figure. I can't take a penny less." She got the job and she and the dancing class prospered.

With a couple of girls from Washington, she organized a trio which sang nights and Sundays over KMOX until Kitty had the audacity to suggest she deserved more than $25 a week, and got a laugh from the management.

There was only one answer to that, and Kitty took a job she had been offered as counsellor at a summer camp on Catalina Island. Summer ended, she decided to look around Los Angeles before going home. Someone told her about an advertising man who was hiring radio talent, and she went to his office.

He was pretty bored after a day of interviewing young hopefuls, but listened to her glowing account of her own talents.

"Can you really do anything," he asked when she had finished, "or are you like the rest of these girls, hoping to get a chance and make good by accident?"

"Show me a piano," she replied, "and I'll show you what I can do." She went to work the next day at $75 a week.

She sang on a Los Angeles station for a while, then made a hurried trip back to St. Louis to see her father, who was ill.

When she returned to Los Angeles, she found that she was no longer Kitty Fink. Her sponsors had decided to feature her and build up a new personality, as they put it, for her. Also, she was to find a new name for herself.

She chose "Kay Thompson," and her success, she maintains, dates from that change. She sang for another Los Angeles station, appeared on a string of programs with Bing Crosby, made some records, and got a job in San Francisco that required her to commute between there and Los Angeles.

—o-o—

SOMEONE started a new network in New York, and sent for Kay. She took the job, and about the time the new network slowed down she met Fred Waring.

As this was an important event for her career, we shall let Kay tell about it herself:

"It appeared Fred had tried to get in touch with me, to offer me a job, the year before. 'What's the matter with this year?" asked the friend who had introduced us.

"'Nothing,' said Fred. 'Here's the thing: I want to get a choir together, a girls' choir, on the order of the Glee Club' (Fred always refers to his glee club in capitals), 'and have them do backgrounds for your voice. The whole responsibility will be yours. You get the girls, train them, make their arrangements, then bring them up here.'

"I didn't know a soul in New York," said Kay, "except my two sisters, who are visiting. But they were glad to be drafted, and so we started out to get 13 more. Well, we got them, all right. But it was a task, as Fred wanted a certain type of untrained voice.

"After I had been with Fred Waring for six months I got an offer to become the feature in the Hit Parade, with Lennie Hayton and later Fred Astaire.

"Fred Waring didn't like to have me singing on another program besides his, and neither did his sponsor. The upshot was that the Hit Parade featured me and I left Waring to be exclusive for the Hit Parade."

The Hit Parade program involved a number of things, including a trip to Hollywood by the whole cast, because Fred Astaire had to make a picture.

Later, in New York again, Kay was offered her present job with Kostelanetz, first sharing the program with Lily Pons and later taking her place. So there she is, on the Columbia Network (KMOX) at 7:30 p. m. every Friday.

Kay is unmarried, as she does not consider her career conducive to a successful married life. The gossip columns have it that she is not without gentlemen friends, and this statement may easily be verified by anyone who visits the night clubs where she is frequently to be seen of an evening.

Also, she has a sense of humor, which is frequently a help and almost as often a liability. Once, for instance, some years ago, when she was singing with one of the country's best-known bands, the maestro made a solemn announcement.

"Now," he stated to the microphone, "we are going to render a beautiful little ballad which has given a great deal of pleasure to our listeners in the past, and which I hope will continue to do so in the future. The title is 'This Little Pig Went to Market.'"

As the orchestra broke into the dolorous strains of the song about how this little piggie stayed home and it has always been my favorite pome, something strangely like a combination snort and giggle came from Kay.

The orchestra leader stopped rehearsal long enough to fix her with an icy stare, and admonished, "Certain people may think this is funny, but personally, I like to think I can make my listeners cry."

A Vital Need For Honesty And Sincerity

By Elsie Robinson

TOUGH times, these, for the Opportunist Tribe. You know—the synthetic lads and lasses who drift along, waiting for things to turn up, doing anything—or anybody—that Lady Luck brings their way.

Until recently, the woods were full of 'em. Smart numbers—they certainly presented a convincing front. You'd have sworn they were the Real Goods. Tackle them on any subject—journalism, art, travel, society, interior decorating, drama—and they had the right answers.

But when it came down to actual performance—they weren't there. Yet, in between times, they had usually managed to connect with a considerable amount of your cash, time and energy.

Always made me think of these modern cowboy songs—written and executed by Two Gun Hombres who've never been west of Harlem.

Nevertheless, the Big Boy managed to do plenty of business, for he had all the scenery—silver mounted saddles, wooly "chaps," big Stetson and jingly spurs—everything!

Maybe, before 1929, he was short on production, but he had a wonderful line, and that was what counted most. In fact, it counted so well that, until recently, nine out of ten of the younger generation thought that was all that mattered.

Get the line . . . a smart line . . . a snappy comeback . . . know the answers and beat the other fellow to it . . . and you had the world by the tail! Never mind whether you had the goods or not. Never mind whether you could produce results. Just look the part . . . go through the gestures . . . that's all that's necessary. Such was our pre-depression philosophy. And it certainly went over big.

But times have changed. Phoney folk as well as phoney stocks and bonds went out with the Big Wind. We're fed up with Harlem cowboys whose "legs ain't bowed." We're sick of synthetic copies of the big shots. We're through with the posers and pretenders. Today the world's demanding the genuine article and refusing to take anything else but.

How does this apply to you? Plenty! For, regardless of who you are or what you're doing, you want to be part of the big parade. You want—and you should have—your place in the spotlight.

But you can no longer get that place by "having a line." The world's too crowded, too busy, too grimly in earnest, to listen to make-believes. If you want attention you must have more to give than smart looks, clever answers, dashing manners. You must be real in yourself . . . you must give REAL SERVICE.

Sincerity—never has a sick world needed it so frantically, or valued it so highly. The era of the smartie and the slicker has passed. We've been played for suckers too long, too often. We want people who are something—who mean something—people who can perform.

So, whether you're a lonely oldster or an ambitious youngster, take a tip—

If you want to be wanted, cut out the scenery and produce sincerity. Be real! Honesty—in yourself and in the thing you do—is the Best Policy today.

JOAN CRAWFORD . . . BUSY WITH CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

HOLLYWOOD'S PACKAGES

this time except that she just didn't show up for work when called, sending word that she had hurt a finger.

—o-o—

JOAN CRAWFORD'S dressing room looked like a substation of Mr. Santa Claus' when I dropped in. Joan is so busy with "The Last Mrs. Cheney" that she finds it almost impossible to count on any time which she can definitely set aside for doing up her Christmas gifts. And as she is one of the most persistent and generous of gift-givers, wrapping packages is for her almost an endless occupation.

"I could, of course, have all of these packages wrapped for me at the stores," said Joan, "but that is a very real part of the fun of Christmas to me. I always select all my gifts and I also tie them all up myself. And that is why you see all these things here. I find that in between shots on the picture I can really accomplish quite a lot of wrapping."

OLIVIA DE HAVILAND'S Christmas cards may have been inspired by her voyage at sea in "Captain Blood," though there is nothing of piracy about them, I'm sure. But at any rate, your ship comes in with Olivia's gift. For she is wrapping them with tissue paper as blue as the sea on a clear day and tops each package with a little cardboard ship in full sail, covered with silver paper. A chubby and adventurous little Santa Claus is at the helm and Olivia attaches her card to the mainsail.

Tyrolean Influence

After so much hubbub about the Tyrolean influence in sports clothes it would seem that every phase of the subject has been exhausted, but another example of the trend has appeared in the shops. This is the vogue of bright-colored initials on sports bags. Although the initials are cut in metal they are covered with patent leather of calf grain in vivid shades. Most of them are quite large and are reminiscent of the bold lettering on children's blocks. When strung across the flap of a white or pastel bag they add a striking note to a resort costume.

"Without the Bible We Are Lost"--Newton

By The Rev. J. F. Newton

ONCE upon a time, so runs a famous short story, England woke up and found that the Bible was gone. Not only the book itself, but all trace of its influence, and every echo of its teaching, had been erased from the life of the nation. The result was appalling.

A great literature became suddenly almost unintelligible. Shakespeare was well-nigh unreadable. The gorgeous pages of Ruskin looked like a moth-eaten tapestry. The noblest poetry in the world was all ajangle. Everyday speech stammered and faltered. Many words, and meanings of words, were lost. A change passed over the whole temper of the nation.

Life became hectic, hurried and vulgar. Old restraints were thrown off, leaving instinct to run wild. The higher values were blurred and life itself became little and mean, not so much tragic as tedious, trivial, frivolous, or else drab. Something fine and high and fair had gone out of it, leaving it a shell and shadow of what it ought to be.

Well, something like that has happened in America, and it is the greatest calamity of the last hundred years. The Bible is not actually lost, as in the story, but it is unknown. Our people do not read it; they do not even hear it read. Few have any notion of what it means, or how to read it. They even think it smart not to know it.

It fills one with dismay to see a generation growing up who know almost nothing of the Bible. If they have taken it as a lesson in school, it has been quickly forgotten. It is no longer a book either of comfort or of command, as in days of old. We are faced with an amazing spectacle—a generation without the Bible!

IT NEEDS no prophet to tell the result; it is before our eyes. It is ghastly! Law has lost its power, life is cheap, literature is filthy—every other story one tries to read stinks. Our most brilliant writers—many of them—tell us that life itself is a disease; its activities just so many forms of dope to deaden the pain, or the folly, of living!

Our fathers were folk of one book, and that book was the Bible; but it is not so of their sons. The Bible is still a best-seller, but because so many Bibles are sold does not mean that they are read. Like other classics, the Bible is honored, even praised, but not read. Even church folk who would be ashamed of not having a Bible in the house, seldom read it.

Why is the greatest of all books left in neglect? Lack of time, for one thing. The Bible is a library of dim, crowded, gray pages, and this is a swift age when everything must be brief, bright, breezy. A deeper reason is that the Bible as a whole is not easily understood.

Stung by shame, a man starts out to read it through, and gets stuck in the middle of Leviticus. He tries the New Testament, and goes on the rocks in Romans. He cannot make out what it is all about, except in a few great passages. No one could induce him to try it again.

—o-o—

LONG AGO Jowett said that the Bible must be read as we read any other book, since that is the surer way to find that it is unlike any other book. It must be broken into pieces, and its books mastered one by one. Like the plays of Shakespeare, the books of the Bible belong to one family, but each is different. Each must be studied in its own setting and situation, if we are to know why it was written and what it means.

This asks for time and hard work, but it is worth it. The historical study of the Bible is little known yet, though it gives the old Book to use in a new binding and with a new meaning. After we study it book by book, it is a great experience to read the Bible straight through.

For there is a spirit in the Bible which, if it gets into a man, makes him tall of soul, tender of heart, just, gentle, patient, faithful in life and fearless in death. It will fare ill with us and our civilization if the music of this mighty Book is hushed among us.

Nothing can take the place of the Bible as guide, prophet and friend. We cannot go on without its sense of God, of moral law, of the worth and dignity of life. It is the mother-book of our literature and the manual of our religion. It tells us not only what man has thought of God, but what God thinks of man and what He would have each of us do. If we do not find the lost Bible, we and our children are lost!

Bolder Prints

PRINTS are getting bolder, now that the winter resort season is getting nearer. Not only are the smartest shops displaying vividly patterned fabrics but an occasional brave woman appears in a striking material at the hotels and clubs. Printed satin is a favorite for December dancing and may be selected with a variegated flower motif on a white or black background. This same material also is advocated for winter street dresses to wear under winter coats. Black, navy and green are the background selections, with flowers both large and dashing.

Hand-blocked prints of a crepey texture also are appearing in the stores. While some of these have small all-over patterns, the scattered design of unusual type is seen more often. Black and gold, navy and scarlet and brown and green are three alliances to consider—all of them selected with the needs of winter coats in mind.

Clever Jackets With Skirts of Daytime Length

THE cleverest and most practical little jackets are arriving in the St. Louis shops in time for holiday festivities. While the majority of them have been designed with the idea of transforming a formal frock into one that is suitable for the cocktail hour there are many which can be worn with skirts of daytime length.

Especially attractive are the coats made of upholstery brocades in subtle color combinations. There is one in two tones of green which has a double-breasted front and fits well down over the hips. The collar is tailored and notched and sleeves are long. The same type of jacket may be obtained in other colors, among them a creamy damask effect.

A broacaded metallic fabric which has attained considerable popularity this winter is the material used for another group of these jackets. Some have short sleeves but the majority adhere to the demand for the wrist-length sleeve. One version has a basque styling and buttons snugly to a high, standing collar with tiny covered buttons. Another with a mannish collar, fastens at the front with crystal buttons and loops and has rounded corners. Shoulder fullness is a feature of the sleeves.

Water Goblets

When you're selecting crystal goblets for your best usage, don't be too carried away by the length of the stems. A tall goblet is graceful and decorative in itself, but it can be clumsy in that it is so easily tipped. Glasses of conservative height will give more lasting satisfaction.

A Discussion Of Chilblains By Physician

This Is the Time to Think of Precautions, Says Dr. Clendening.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

WHEN YOU think about pain in the feet or legs, it is instinctive to suppose that it is due to some trouble with the nerves or the muscles, or the bones and joints but, as a matter of fact, there is a large group of disorders of a more or less painful kind that is due to derangement of the blood vessels of the extremities. These have been studied quite extensively recently and, in fact, there is almost a speciality in medicine, which is that of vascular diseases of the extremities.

The subject is pertinent at this time of year, because one of the forms, namely chilblains, is very likely to be due to cold and exposure. Persons who ever have been subject to chilblains should begin about this time of year to take every precaution to prevent it during the winter weather that is ahead of us.

CHILBLAIN A PERNIO occurs only in certain groups of people whose blood vessels are not extremely responsive. The temperature and nutrition of the foot are due to the ability of the small arteries and capillaries to respond to changes of temperature. If you could see a foot undergoing an attack of chilblain (this is practically impossible, because the first stage occurs while the foot is covered up), you would see that in cold, wet weather the vessels respond by extreme contraction so that the foot is very pale. Very little blood is brought to the capillary vessels and the blood in them stagnates, leading to the second stage in which the foot is blotchy and purplish and somewhat sensitive.

It is also tender so that the owner of the feet goes indoors, takes off shoes and stockings, and puts the feet before a radiator or fire. This causes the arterials to open up, but since their nervous control is not normal they overdo it, and the dilated capillaries become flushed with blood. Some of this blood is forced out into the tissue spaces so that the foot is now red and swollen and tender. Sometimes this transudation of fluid causes enough pressure so that the skin is broken, leading to a slight ulceration, which is known as broken chilblain.

MILD AND BRIEF attacks of this do not cause any permanent changes, but if the exposure is prolonged or repeated there is some fibrosis around the blood vessels and calloused spots occur, particularly behind the heel.

The condition runs in families, which emphasizes the fact that it is primarily due to poor nervous control of the blood vessels. It is definitely related to other diseases of the vessels of the extremities called Raynaud's disease, Berger's disease and erythromelalgia, as well as to the condition of lameness and pain which occurs on exertion in middle-aged and elderly people with recognized hardening of the arteries, called intermtitent claudication.

Face-Revealing Hats

Whether your new hat is large or small, whether it has a high crown or a fairly low one, it must make the most of the trend to reveal the forehead. With hair arranged so that it sweeps away from the ears as well as away from the brow, a hat is expected to do its part toward throwing a face into the limelight.

Some of the new hats achieve the face-revealing silhouette by being perched on the back of the head. Others acquire it by brims which roll upward or are so diminutive that they need not roll at all. Draped turbans which fit snugly to the head are much in demand at present, especially when they appear in a bright color to match accessories.

Many Practical Ideas in New Travel Gifts

Men as Well as Women Have Been Considered in New Selections.

IF all of the travel gadgets in the shops find their way into Christmas stockings half of the city's population will be inspired with the wanderlust. Men, as well as women, have been considered in the assembling of these gift items, all of which have been created with the idea of combining practical features with handsome appointments.

All sizes and shapes of rubberized bags to hold toilet articles are on exhibition, a popular type of gaily striped tie silk being sufficiently large to hold all beautifying equipment and having sturdy handles with which to carry it. Leather toilet kits may be had in any preferred covering, the kit of brown cowhide being considered quite swanky this season, although the bright-colored calfskin is interesting.

A folding hanger holds a taffeta bag which can be hung in a Pullman. This bag is fitted with compartments so that it will contain practically everything that the traveler needs to have handy. A traveling hot-water bag is another new item this year. Its detachable fabric covering gives it a style emphasis. Taffeta envelopes for lingerie and handkerchiefs, knitted shoe bags in favorite colorings, cellophane shoe bags, sewing kits that open up to reveal the entire contents at one glance, travel clocks, manicure sets that fit into travel cases and first-aid kits are among the gift suggestions intended to please those who are always eager to be on their way.

Hostess Gowns

● Those princesse-styled nightgowns with their puffed sleeves and swinging headlines looked so much like formal evening frocks, their appearance in the shops caused considerable confusion, but they were not as perplexing as the hostess gowns which resemble evening wraps and frequently are worn as such.

Rich satin brocades are the fabrics of which these novel double-duty garments are made most satisfactorily, although metallic materials and heavy failles are good posers, too.

Fitted waistlines, little collars which may be buttoned snugly are permitted to roll toward the shoulders, long sleeves that puff at the top and headlines which trail at the back are features proving as popular for evenings "at home" as for use over a formal frock en route to ball or theater.

Add Smart Appearance

Salt and pepper shakers that are cylindrical in shape add such a smart appearance to the modern table that they are being featured in many different metals and wares. Among the novelties is a set made of bakelite and cromium plated metal. A boat-like tray holds the shakers side by side, while a little dog keeps watch at the other end of the boat. Equally unusual is a silver-plated ball divided at the center, the pepper occupying one-half and the salt and scoop the other.

Crystal Candlesticks

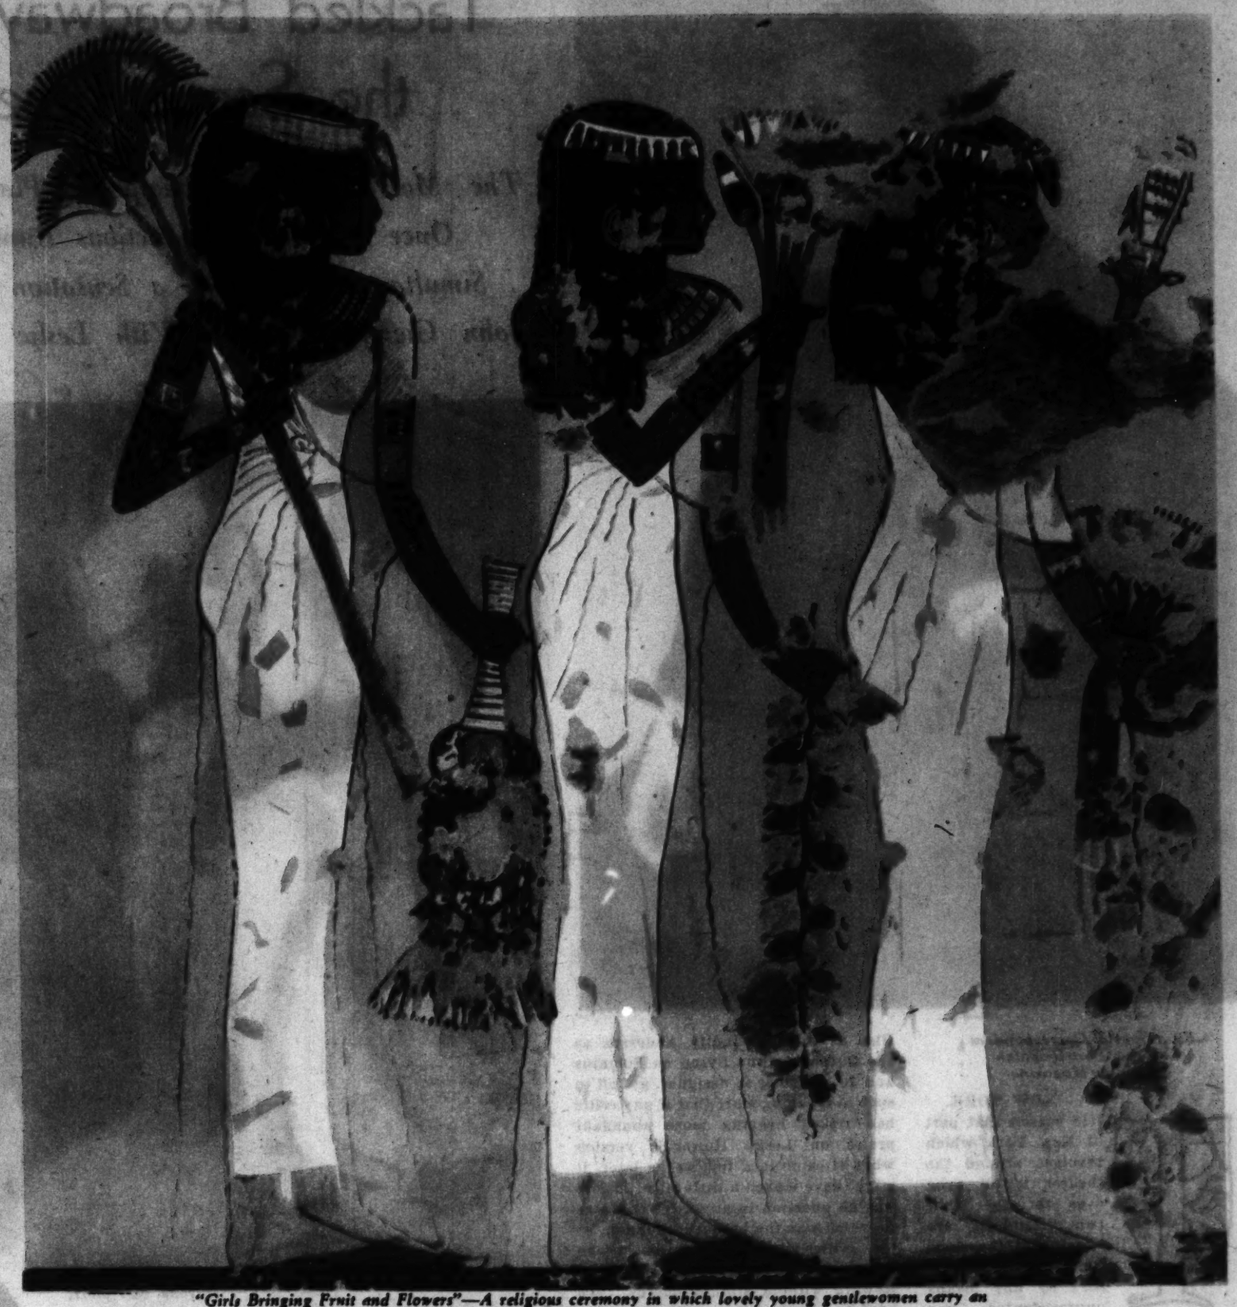

Clear crystal, which has been designed to resemble the flame of a candle is most appropriately presented in candlesticks for Christmas gifts. Besides the pairs of candlesticks which are quite low, there are bowls suitable for flowers or fruit to complete a table decoration. The sets are being shown of delicate azure tint as well as the clear glass.

THE Egyptian wall paintings reproduced herewith are from a set of 104 plates just brought out as a portfolio by Oriental Institute. Each is a product of the meticulous craftsmanship of Nina M. Davies, who has spent more than 25 years making free-hand copies of Pharaonic tomb decorations. Her conclusions on the subject of Egyptian painting constitute a valuable guide for those who see in this branch of art only superficial similarities to the contemporary styles it has influenced. The Egyptian paintings cover a period of years ending about 1000 B. C.

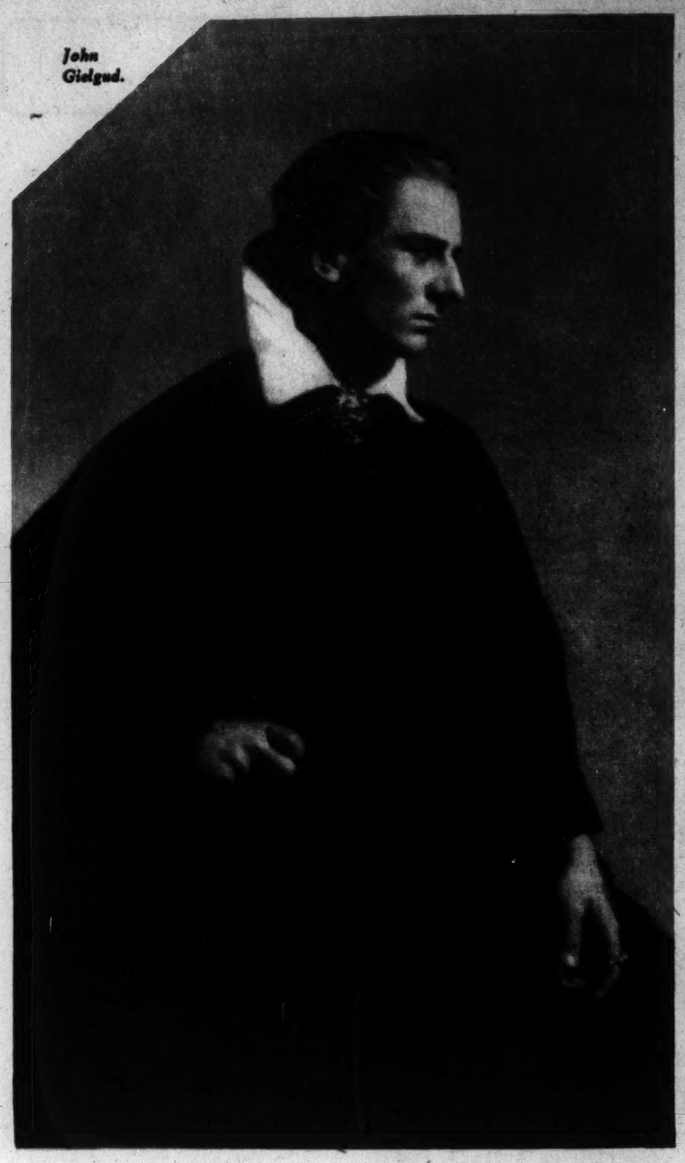

"It must be realized," writes Mrs. Davies, "that Egyptian paintings are in the first instance informative, and only secondarily impressionistic in intention. The conception of art as the revelation of individual and inspired ways of seeing the world around us was wholly alien to ancient thought. Its purpose was to show things, not as the artist's eye saw them, but as they are in reality. And this was achieved by delineating the separate parts one at time, each as accurately as possible, but not co-ordinated with one another nor as seen from one and the same angle."

In Mrs. Davies' opinion the oldest period in Egyptian art is the finest. Representative of this period and dating back to 2700 B. C. (before the building of the pyramids) is the exquisite panel called the Medum Geese. Taken from the tomb of Itetat Medum, this work is now in Cairo Museum. The other paintings reproduced here are of later periods.

For a more comprehensive understanding one must turn to the portfolio, "Ancient Egyptian Paintings," and its accompanying 200-page text. Credit for the publication goes to many. Mrs. Davies selected, copied and described the paintings. Alan H. Gardiner was her editor. The Chiswick Press undertook the delicate task of making the facsimilies. The Oxford Press printed them. The University of Chicago Press published them. Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago supervised publication. And John D. Rockefeller Jr. fonted the bill. Needless to say the project is not self-liquidating.

How Two Rival Hamlets Tackled Broadway at the Same Time

The Most Popular Shakespeare Play, Which Once Had Six Productions Running Simultaneously, Again a Sensation With John Gielgud Battling With Leslie Howard.

John Gielgud.

Leslie Howard.

Vaivey Irving.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

THIS season that part of New York which revolves around the theater is all agog over the fact that two "Hamlets" are running at the same time. While this isn't by any means unprecedented, one of the two came in with such an air of fanfare and festival and the other, featuring a popular movie star, had been so long heralded, that the pair have almost monopolized the conversation of playgoers all fall. Anyway, there are no old-timers still vocal with long enough memories to hark back to the year when six Hamlets, including Edwin Booth and Charles Fechter, strutted their hour simultaneously. Today the concurrent appearance of two fairly elaborate productions is an almost unheard-of luxury. Critics and audiences have been making the most of it. One hears almost nothing else.

For one thing Guthrie McClintic's production with John Gielgud (pronounced jeel-good) as Prince, Lillian Gish as Ophelia, Judith Anderson as the Queen, Arthur Byron as Polonius and Jo Mielziner as designer, got off to such a sweeping start that if any critic had risked heaping more abundant praise on Leslie Howard's version when it came in a few weeks later, it might have looked a little silly. There was no question in anybody's mind as to which was the better production, so the critics decided unanimously to take a safer course. They panned Howard without stint or mercy. It's hard to recall when any actor has received such a fulsome drubbing. The torrent of abuse probably reached its summit in Gilbert Gabriel's acid statement to readers of the New York American: "It is quite the weakest Hamlet, the most flaccid Hamlet, the most rice-paper-thin Hamlet, I've ever seen or heard."

Naturally a great many people were not dissuaded by all this vituperation from going to see both and drawing their own conclusions. Inevitably some found the Howard version satisfactory. Moved to superlatives by the actor's natural charm, they even crowded into the aisles, stamping and cheering and applauding interminably to take the sting out of the rude words that had been written by the critics.

Basil Sydney and Walter Kingsford in the gravediggers' scene from the modern dress Hamlet.

HOWARD may not be a great Shakespearean actor. Almost certainly he isn't. But he has been equal to such heart-warming occasions. On a recent evening he stepped up to the footlights armed with that irresistible diffidence of which he is master, looked mildly at his turbulent admirers a moment, and said:

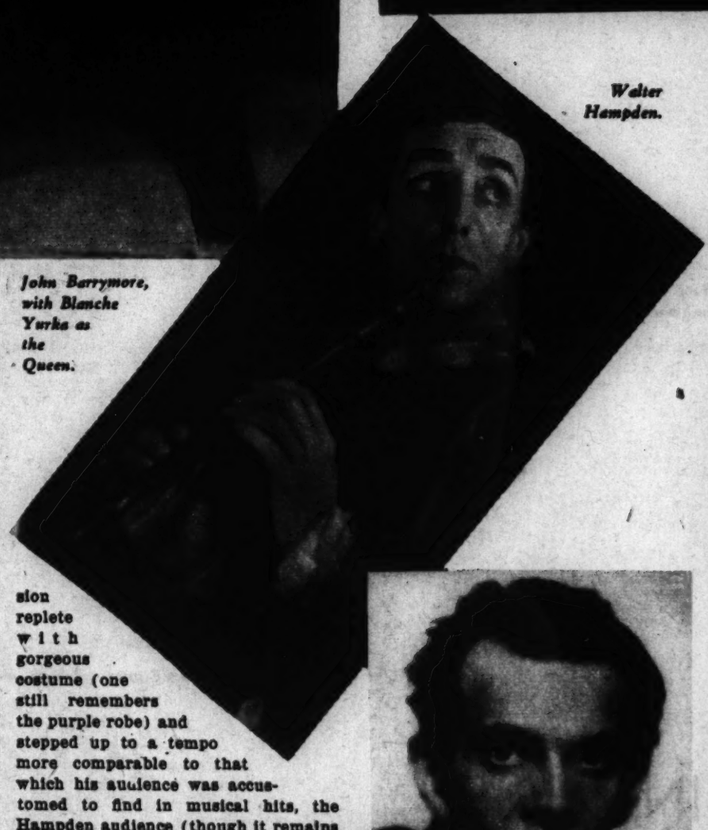

"It wasn't so terrible after all; now, was it?"

The almost religious intensity with which enthusiasts have argued the merits of these two productions is probably more largely a matter of poor perspective than of genuine conviction. "Hamlet" may be the most popular Shakespearean tragedy, but it has been too flagrantly tampered with in the past for any average playgoer to feel so strongly about its purity today. Even Guthrie McClintic, who puts all his emphasis on faithful adherence to the text, has cut almost one hour out of the performance time by one device or another. And if Leslie Howard has simply produced another "version," his sin in doing so seems less inexpiable by comparison with what New York Shakespeare fanatics have been willing to take on in the past.

Since 1761, when Lewis Hallam put on the first American "Hamlet," there has been an average of about one performance of the play (in English) every year, to say nothing of the number acted in Flemish, High German, Japanese and Yiddish. They have represented every type of artistic vagary. There have been woman Hamlets—culminating in that of Sarah Bernhardt, who pronounced it "Amlay." There have been numerous clown Hamlets. There has been at least one production in modern dress. And the number of styles of elocution and acting which have necessarily to be classed as normal versions is too diverse to describe.

Even in so short a period as the post-war, the times have altered tastes so frequently that there has been room for a handful of diametrically antithetic versions, none of which resembles in any way the styles in acting popular during the last half of the nineteenth century. One exception there may be. Walter Hampden, who first took the role in November, 1918, has a much stronger affinity for the Victorian than for the post-war approach. His original production included pauses of five minutes each after the great soliloquy and after the death of Ophelia—to let the emotional effect sink in. Today any normal audience would be much likelier to use the first 30 seconds of such a pause to get well out of the theater. Hampden kept the play on Broadway 23 nights.

That was a feat. In 1922, when John Barrymore brought on his version replete with gorgeous costume (one still remembers the purple robe) and stepped up to a tempo more comparable to that which his audience was accustomed to find in musical hits, the Hampden audience (though it remains faithful to this day) was no longer representative. "This Hamlet," Heywood Broun wrote ecstatically in the World, "this Hamlet is as modern as the most recent disciple of Freud. We learned for the first time that he did not have the courage of his complexes." Only yesterday that was written, yet today Leslie Howard finds critics contemptuous of modern versions—or any "versions"—and has to depend on an audience recruited from his movie following to save him from the catastrophe of trying to compete on equal ground with straight Shakespeare in five acts.

Raymond Massey.

JOHN BARRYMORE'S production, very likely the best artistry of his career, was modern in a less objectionable sense than several of its predecessors have been. As a matter of fact the most revolutionary thing about it was that it attempted to be natural and realistic—without loss of sonority. Barrymore broke Edwin Booth's record; his run lasted 101 afternoons and evenings and from New York he went to London to continue it.

The revolutionary element in Barrymore's interpretation—that to which Heywood Broun referred in his laudatory comment—was the element of Freudian psychology which critics found in it. It will be recalled that in the scene of mutual recrimination between Hamlet and his mother, the atmosphere was that of a lovers' quarrel, the implication being that Hamlet was governered by an Oedipus complex.

By 1925 such an approach became not revolutionary, but inevitable. That year Horace Liveright brought out his "Hamlet" in modern dress—culmination of the tendency to interpret all the past as a somewhat trivial preamble to the 'twenties. Basil Sydney, the Prince, wore knickers and a tweed cap. Helen Chandler, the Ophelia, wore short skirts and an evening dress. Polonius was slain with an automatic. And strange to say many discriminating playgoers found that the absurdity wore off almost immediately as they became engrossed in the timeless magnificence of the lines. The modern dress version may have been nothing more than a tour de force, but it had enough attraction at the time to encourage Robert Mantell to imitate it in San Francisco. Numerous stock companies and non-professional groups joined in the experiment with the appalling results one might have expected.

The next production did not come out for several years. It was the rather undistinguished one by Fritz Leiber. Then the British actor, Raymond Massey, came to New York in 1931 to take part in Norman Bel Geddes' piece, an experiment in staging which reduced scenery to a severe minimum and put all the emphasis on levels and lights. The acting was considered superb and the lighting experiments were successful, but this was only another "version." The play took only two and a half hours, which implies that a great deal had been left out. And while it is unquestionably true that Shakespeare is far from pure gold, no play as miraculously fine as "Hamlet" can escape serious damage when it is practically cut in half.

It has been necessary to devote so much space to post-war productions largely because they illustrate most simply how the interpretations vary with and express the times. The 'twenties are a recent memory. Farther back there were many variations, some more abnormal and others more serious. A hundred years ealier began an erratic series of burlesque versions, some with music of a sort. The only one worthy of attention at this long range was George Fox's travesty, which appeared during 1870, the season of the six productions. Fox is said to have been a truly great comedian. So great an actor as Edwin Booth called Fox his favorite, and doubtless the tragedian did not resent it when this impertinent clown announced that he was putting on a burlesque of the Edwin Booth Hamlet.

IN THE first act Fox appeared in a dowdy variant of the traditional black and purple costume, but when it was time for the gravedigger scene he decided to suit his accouterments to his idea of a chilly night in Denmark. A huge sealskin hat, enormous fur gloves and flapping "Arctics" were enough to set off his audience and prepare them for a screamingly outlandish enunciation of the "Alas, poor Yorick," lines.

"Of the female Hamlets," writes Allen Churchill in November's Stage, "the wonder is, to paraphrase Dr. Johnson on the dancing bear, not that they should do it well, but that they should do it at all. At least 14 women have played Hamlet in New York." The four ladies who made the effort between 1819 and 1849 were accepted so casually that newspapers didn't even trouble to comment on their metamorphosis. Perhaps, being journalists of another age, they simply didn't think it important. Conceivably it was even then considered as natural for Hamlet to be a masquerading woman as for Ophelia (in Shakespeare's own day) to be a boy. Subsequent lady Hamlets were necessarily more limelighted. The year 1850 saw a female Prince who was also an evangelist and a messiah of total abstinence, as well as what seemed in that day a decidedly fast woman, a divorcee. This picturesque thespian, Charlotte Crampton, was the same Mrs. Crampton who a dozen years later marched from Wheeling to Washington to beg Lincoln to spare her son. If memory serves, she appears later in John Drinkwater's dramatic biography, "Abraham Lincoln," the occasion for a particularly fine line to the effect that being shot at sunrise will teach the boy not to sleep at his post. Another female Hamlet, also a militant teetotaler, was afterwards to run for the Presidency—Anna Dickinson.

The final apparition of this anomolous phenomenon was the aforementioned Bernhardt. By her time nobody could take the idea quite for granted. In England there was an animated critical duel in print. In

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LONDON, England.

IT HAS taken Gef a comparatively short time, as careers are measured, to become the most famous mongoose since Kipling's Rikki-tikki-tavi. Five years ago no one knew of him except the family of J. T. Irving on the Isle of Man. Today Gef is a public figure throughout the British Isles—partly because a book has been written about him and he has been made a matter of record by the University of London Council for Psychical Investigation, but principally because of the notice just accorded him by a majestic English court in a case which is scheduled to cost a titled and distinguished British subject close to $50,000.

Of course no ordinary mongoose, content to spend its life trouncing cobras in defense of sahibs, memsahibs, ayahs and such, could hope to attain such prominence. Gef makes no pretense of being an ordinary mongoose. According to his intimates, he deviates so far from the norm of his kind as to talk—in several languages—sing, read, dance and play pranks. He is generally termed in print "the Talking Mongoose."

Among persons who haven't been able to make Gef's acquaintance the opinion seems to be rather common that this mongoose is different from others in quite a different way; that is, that he doesn't exist. Their impression is that he, like Rikki-tikki-tavi, is strictly a product of the imagination.

To make clear the importance which Gef, real or imaginary, has lately achieved in the affairs of men it is best to recount what is known or been reported of his career on the Isle of Man.

In the fall of 1931 Gef is said to have taken up his abode with the Irvings, who live on a farm known as Cashen's Gap, perched on the shoulder of a wind-swept down more than 700 feet above the sea. The family consists of James T. Irving, a white-haired but vigorous man of 65; his wife, a dignified woman of 61 with a leaning toward Victorian modes in dress, and their daughter, Voirrey, light-haired and rosy-cheeked, now 19 years old.

Accounts differ as to how Gef first made his presence known to the family. One version is that the yellowish, weasel-like creature was noticed, one day, going about among the barn yard fowls, imitating the clucking of the hens. Pretty soon it was imitating the cries of other domestic creatures, and then the calls of the human beings it saw. Not long afterward it was heard in the house, barking and growling and making a commotion. After a period of such disquieting conduct it began to talk.

According to another account, Gef was heard by the Irvings before he was seen. One night the farmer heard a voice, very high-pitched but human-seeming, coming, apparently, from a wall of the house. Then there was a fall of stones on the roof and pictures were banged about on the walls. After a time the voice began to repeat things said by members of the family, particularly the words of young Voirrey. Uneasy, Irving spoke of moving his daughter to another part of the house, but the voice angrily announced, "I'll follow her wherever you move her," and a pot of ointment was hurled against a bedstead. Some months after that the strange intruder in the family circle quieted down, got on good terms with the family, gave an account of itself and allowed itself to be seen.

However the thing started, there was soon a good deal of interest in the goings-on at the Irving farm, and newspaper reporters and investigators of abnormal phenomena began visiting Cashen's Gap. There is no available information that any of the visitors ever actually saw Gef, but several heard what was said to be his voice. And the Irvings readily told about him. This is, in substance, their account of his activities after he became chummy with the family:

Gef—they called him that with his approval—told them he was an Indian mongoose and 83 years old. He spoke English and Hindustani, and also could repeat Spanish and Russian phrases. The girl, Voirrey, taught him nursery rhymes. He sang songs, including hymns, in a voice about two octaves above the human scale. He danced to phonograph music. He could read and understand the sign language of the deaf and dumb. He killed rabbits for the family—by strangling them. He shook hands with Mrs. Irving once, and she noted that his paw had three long fingers and a thumb. He posed for Voirrey long enough for the girl to take a sort of sketchy snapshot of him. Although friendly, Gef was impudent; once when told to shut up, he snappily retorted "Nuts!" He was not seen very often even by the Irvings, usually, when in the house, lying on a roof rafter or keeping himself somewhere behind the paneling of the rooms. Sometimes he absented himself for a few days and returned with lots of gossip from the nearest town. Irving described Gef as being yellowish in color, like a ferret, and having a body about three-fourth the size of that of a full-grown rat and a long, bushy tail tinged with brown.

A reporter who heard some of the talking attributed to Gef, had this to say in the report he wrote on his visit:

"Does the solution of the mystery of the 'man-weasel' of Doarlish Cashen lie in the dual personality of the . . . girl, Voirrey Irving? That is the question that leaps to my mind after hearing the piercing and uncanny voice attributed to the elusive little yellow beast with a weasel's body. . . .

"Yesterday I heard several spoken sentences and was told that these noises were made by the 'man-weasel.' The conversation was between the 'weasel-voice' and Mrs. Irving, who was unseen to me in another room, while the little girl (this was several years ago) sat motionless in a chair at the table. I could see her reflection, although not very clearly, in a mirror on the other side of the room. She had her fingers to her lips. I kept my eyes on the face in the glass. The lips did not move, so far as I could see, but they were partly hidden by her fingers. When I edged my way into the room, the voice ceased. The little girl continued to sit motionless without taking any notice of us. She was sucking a piece of string, I now saw."

Inevitably word of Gef reached Harry Price of London. Price is one of the foremost workers in the field of psychical research. For 30 years he has been investigating spooks, mediums and the like, and has devised many appliances for trapping fakes.

He is now honorary secretary of the University of London Council for Psychical Investigation.

Irving sent Price a voluminous report about Gef, and Price sent a Captain MacDonald, whom he regarded as shrewd in such matters, to investigate. The Captain heard the voice from the walls all right, but didn't catch a glimpse of Gef, and noted that, oddly enough, Mrs. Irving and her daughter were always out of the room when Gef talked. The investigation and a subsequent one by the Captain failed to produce evidence that Price regarded as conclusive. Some hair which Gef was supposed to have plucked from his hide and left on the mantel piece for scientific examination was pronounced by an expert to whom it was submitted as certainly not that of a mongoose, but probably hair from a dog. It might be mentioned here that the Irvings had a sheep dog.

In the summer of 1935 Price decided to have a try himself at unraveling the mystery of the talking mongoose. He took with him on the expedition to Man the editor of The Listener, journal of the British Broadcasting Company, as he wanted a witness to whatever might transpire. The editor was Richard Stanton Lambert, and with his entry into the story, the career of Gef begins to approach that of the titled and distinguished Briton who has just been ordered in court to pay out approximately $50,000.

Lady Levita.

Price and Lambert were welcomed by Irving and his wife. Irving impressed Price as an amiable and intelligent man. Irving was not originally a farmer, but had been a Liverpool business man before buying the farm at Cashen Gap to try his hand at raising sheep. Mrs. Irving Price described as "charming and dignified" and Voirrey as "very intelligent, shy and rather quiet."

The investigators spent two evenings at the Irving home, but saw nothing and heard nothing of Gef. They were told the talking mongoose had disappeared several weeks before when a letter had arrived from Price telling of his forthcoming visit. Gef returned, they were later informed, the night they left, and said he had been in the house when the visitors were there but didn't make his presence known because Lambert was a "doubter."

Although the investigation was pretty barren of evidence concerning Gef, it yielded a radio talk by Price for the B. B. C. and a book, "The Hunting of Cashen's Gap: A Modern 'Miracle' Investigated," by Price and Lambert. The impression made on these investigators may be judged by the statement made by Price in a later publication: ". . . . Gef is still exchanging wisecracks with Irving; still dancing to the gramophone . . . and, I am afraid, still impressing a number of rather credulous people."

That visit of Price and Lambert to the Isle of Man also had a result quite unforeseen and of a rather sensational character—a suit for slander which raised to a new height public interest in Gef the Talking Mongoose. For it appears that one person at least doubted that Lambert was as skeptical as he might well have been of the reported doings at Cashen's Gap. That person was Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Cecil Bingham Levita, Knight Commander of the Royal Victorian Order, Commander of the Order of the British Empire, Commander of the Legion of Honor, Commander of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, late of the Royal Horse Artillery, veteran of the Matabele War, South African War and World War and former chairman of the London County Council.

SIR CECIL, after talking with Lambert about his attempt to see Gef, went home and told his wife, "My God, he believes in it." His wife, Lady Levita, was a fellow member of Lambert on the council of the British Film Institute, a semi-official organization having to do with the distribution of educational motion pictures. A year or so before, Lady Levita and Lambert, theretofore in harmony concerning matters coming before the council, had seriously disagreed on a question of policy.

In February of this year, Sir Cecil had a long talk with W. Gladstone Murray, who was an official of the B. B. C., and spoke critically of Lambert. The conversation was reported to Lambert and he sued Sir Cecil for slander, alleging that his critic said he (Lambert) had expressed belief in the talking mongoose and had moved his abode because of fear of the "evil eye," and indicated the editor was a bit "cracked," implying he was unfit to hold his job. Lambert, whose salary was £1300 a year, attributed his failure to get an increase to Sir Cecil's criticism.

The case went to trial last month before Justice Swift and a jury. Sir Cecil's defense was that he did not speak the words complained of; that if he did speak them, they did not have a defamatory meaning, and were true; that the occasion was privileged. He was represented by Tristram Beresford, K. C.; Sir Patrick Hastings, K. C., was the chief of Lambert's counsel.

Lambert denied he had ever moved because of fear of the "evil eye," and denied that he ever believed in Gef. He said that before suing Sir Cecil he demanded a retraction but failed to get it.

The book "The Haunting of Cashen's Gap" was shown in court, with Lambert's preface, in which he described it as "An Essay in the Veracious but Unaccountable." Said Justice Swift to defense counsel: "I wish you would show me anything in the book which suggests that the writer believed what he was writing."

The Judge's charge to the jury included the sentence: "If you pour poison into an employer's ears about a person you must justify it or take the consequences." The magistrate also commented acidly on the alleged effort by Sir Cecil to cause Lambert to drop the suit through fear of being fired if he persisted in it.

In its verdict the jury answered as follows five questions set before it by the Judge:

1. Did Sir Cecil speak the words complained of in the statement of claim?—Yes.
2. Were the words true?—No.
3. Was there a duty on the defendant or had he a right to communicate as he did to Mr. Gladstone Murray on February 17?—No.
4. Were the words spoken maliciously?—Yes.
5. What damages, if any?—£7500.

So Justice Swift awarded Lambert judgment for £7500 and assessed, in addition, against Sir Cecil the costs of the case, which were expected to amount to £3000 or more.

The evening of the day on which the case ended, a London reporter called at the Irving farm house on the Isle of Man and sat until late on the chance of seeing or hearing Gef. But there was no sign of the talking mongoose. Irving, however, despite the attitude taken toward Gef in court, was quoted as saying that Gef "unfortunately does exist. He is a cross we have to bear."

The DEPARTMENT of DEAD ENDS

A New Series of True Life Murder Stories

"Percy fired the target pistol at the wall near the safe."

The Department of Dead Ends is a little known section of England's famous Scotland Yard which serves as a catch-all for data and clews connected with unsolved crimes. It is also the repository of various odds and ends that the police pick up from time to time, which have no evident connection with a crime but which conceivably might have some connection if all the facts were known. Most of these Dead Ends remain dead. But occasionally one of them is called to life by some apparently innocent happening and serves as the final, damning bit of evidence against a criminal who had been living for months—or even years—in the belief that his guilt would go undetected for all time.

It is these cases which form the basis of the remarkable series of true life murder stories now running in this magazine. The author is Roy Vickers, an English writer who has gained an enormous popularity in Great Britain by reason of the fascinating way in which he builds up both his plots and the mental and emotional characteristics of the principal characters. This is the eighth story in the series.

THE PARROT'S BEAK

By ROY VICKERS

IT IS impossible to measure the skill of a criminal until he has been caught. Pure chance has saved many a burgler from the gallows. Similarly, pure chance has hanged many a murderer who has successfully outwitted the organized intellect and resources of society. And the Department of Dead Ends was really nothing else than a device for allowing pure chance to operate. In this case the plum fell right into their open mouths.

Florence Hornby was, in sporting parlance, another fox who had got away from hounds. No amount of cleverness on the part of the detectives, no amount of thoroughness of police organization, could have convicted her of the murder of her husband.

Her case has another unusual feature in that she, like the Marchioness of Roucester and Jarrow, was another of the very few women murderers in England to use firearms.

Further, like so many male murderers, she made her victim help to set the stage—to put himself just where she wanted him to be found by the police.

Percy Hornby was the son of a timber merchant of Barking. His mother died when he was 14. The family had lived on a very modest scale, although the father was making a small fortune. Percy had attended the Board school (as it was in those days) and had been considered a very backward pupil.

A year after his mother's death his father suddenly dropped the habits of a lifetime and bought a large house at Richmond-on-Thames, with a garden of three acres that ran down to the river.

It was a home singularly ill-suited to their requirements. An elderly slatternly woman, their general servant, migrated with them from Barking. No further attempt was made to educate Percy, who seems to have spent the next four years idling in the garden, depending for companionship upon the errand boys who came to the back door.

When he was 18 his father died, leaving to his son an estate valued at £80,000, unprotected by anything in the nature of a trust. A guardian had been appointed who seems to have been content to leave Percy in the charge of the elderly slattern.

At 21 Percy came into his property —which merely meant that every time he went to the solicitor, who had been his guardian, to ask for money, it was given without question.

Percy did not, as might be supposed, "paint the town red." He was probably too undeveloped for that, having the tastes and mental outlook of a boy of 12. He merely led a disorderly life —in the literal sense of the word— that is, a life without any kind of order.

He would feed when the elderly slattern, now a confirmed drunkard, happened to think of getting a meal ready. He would sleep when he felt sleepy, rarely going to bed for the purpose. He would keep a number of gold sovereigns in a drawer in the dining room and when money was wanted, there it was. If it was not there, it would merely mean that he must get the slattern to tidy him up and then go to ask his solicitor for more.

At any hour of the day or night a casual stranger might have come upon him in the big dining room, stacked with the heavy furniture that had been bought with the house from the previous owner. Grouped about him would be a dozen or more of the young wastrels of the town. On the long mahogany table would be a vast litter of dirty and broken plates. On the mantel piece, the sideboard, the chairs, innumerable glasses and on the floor countless empty bottles.

As a matter of fact, a casual stranger—a woman—did come upon such a scene as this—at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. She was a canvasser for an insurance company; she had heard about him and had called in the hope of insuring him.

For the rest, she was 35, rather more than moderately good-looking, her somewhat stern face softened by big, hazel eyes. She might even have been considered a bit of a beauty, but for the fact that when you looked at her again you saw that the white of her left eye was speckled with pigment.

She stood in the huge French window, a little confused, while the hobbledehoys guffawed. But the confusion did not last long. She must have grasped the full situation almost at a glance and with it came an iron determination to seize her chance.

The iron determination was so effective that in six weeks she had married Percy Hornby.

She did not find it necessary to deceive Percy at the outset. She told him truthfully that her name was Florence Hornbeck (an odd echo of the name she was about to assume), that she was a widow and that she had lived in America for some years.

NOR did Percy deceive her. He gave a truthful, if muddled, account of himself and his fortune, in so far as he understood either, which was not far. Of course, the facts about himself did not matter. As to the facts about the fortune, Florence seems to have been unaccountably careless. She did no more than verify his story of his inheritance by inspecting the will at Somerset House.

She did not interview his solicitor until the day after the wedding. (They seem to have dispensed with the formality of a honeymoon.) Then she learned that the fortune of £80,000 had shrunk, by a process she imperfectly understood, to an approximate value of £7000, yielding an income for the two of them about the size of that which Florence had earned in insurance.

She promptly asked her late manager to recommend a solicitor whom she could trust to investigate the conduct of her husband's affairs. The inquiry resulted in a report to the effect that there had been no fraud. Two companies had gone bankrupt, two or three parcels of shares had proved valueless—and so on. There was, in short, no hope.

At this stage, ignoring subsequent events, she presents a picture of a brave woman making the best of a bad job. She dismissed the elderly slattern and set to work to make her husband and his house presentable.

Amongst many little improvements in the house was the installation of a telephone in the hall, with an extension to the "best bedroom"—which latter Florence does not seem to have regarded as an extravagance.

Under the regime of the elderly slattern Percy's health had deteriorated. Florence took him to Harley street to be overhauled and devoted the next three months to the task of building him up.

She made him take rowing lessons and saw to it that he put in regular practice.

She encouraged him in manly sports. She bought him a shotgun and cartridges and urged him to practice in the garden—also a target pistol, but in these directions Percy showed no ambition.

At the end of three months she decided that it was time to resume consideration of their financial affairs.

From the first she had taken control of expenditure—we are given to understand at his request. True that he signed the checks, but she kept the checkbook.

He kept the household keys, but there is no record of his having dared to use them.

It was his wish, we are told, that they should each make a will in the other's favor. After all, he still had the remnant of a fortune (now very little more than £6000) and the freehold of his house. Florence, for her part, had vaguely "a little property."

The next step in financial prudence was to insure his life for £15,000. This presented no difficulty. Thanks to his wife's care he was now bronzed and in excellent condition and passed easily as a first-class life.

Florence developed a positive enthusiasm for insurance. She insured, as it were, everything she could lay hands on—in particular a collection of old miniature portraits that had been acquired with the furniture. We find a correspondence with two leading insurance companies each of which declared that the miniatures were artistically valueless. Finally, she insured them with a small company for £400—against fire and theft.

And here it must be admitted that Florence was no financial genius. Out of a gross income of £300 she was spending £225 on insurance alone.

It is difficult to draw any clear impression of their brief married life—the woman of 35 and the half-idiot boy of 21 alone in that great white elephant of a house except for the intermittent presence of one general servant.

One incident only stands out during the next four months. Percy contracted a mild form of pneumonia and Florence nursed him. Suddenly the doctor, for no stated reason, refused to go on with the case and made it clear that, unless the patient were taken at once to a hospital, there might well be trouble.

What the doctor saw we do not know. We can be reasonably certain that he could prove nothing from the fact that he did not do so. But we may guess that he suspected her of trying to help the disease.

Within a fortnight Percy was home again and in a week or so regained his normal health. Then it was that Florence broke it to him that they were desperately poor. They could no longer afford to keep even the one general servant, who must be given immediate notice.

Percy did not mind—until he was made to realize that he would have to do the housework. Florence did such cooking as there was—Percy did everything else. Florence, he discovered, was very particular. She wanted the whole house to be kept clean.

For six weeks he endured a state of virtual slavery. It did not occur to his feeble intelligence that his work had not previously been done by the general servant—nor by anyone else. Just as he approached breaking-point, Florence propounded her scheme.

"Percy. These miniatures are insured for £400. If burglars were to steal them we should get the 400—and then we could have a servant and you wouldn't have to do any more housework."

"I wish a burglar would steal them."

"I see what you mean—you mean we might pretend the place has been burgled. We could burgle it ourselves—and throw the stuff in the river—and get the money."

"Cor, Florence, that's a good 'un! Let's do it tonight as soon as it's dark."

"Not tonight—but soon. It will have to be done very, very carefully. If you want me to help you with this clever idea of yours, Percy, you must promise to do everything I tell you."

On the chosen night, Florence, wearing a pair of Percy's boots, stole a boat from its moorings by Richmond Bridge, rowed until she was in line with the house, then tied up.

Percy was waiting for her in hiding near the water's edge. He gave her a sack containing the miniatures and numerous other small articles "stolen" from the little safe in the dining room.

SHE put the sack in the boat, whereupon he walked back to the house, entering it by the dining room window. In Percy's simple mind the sack was already at the bottom of the river by the time he arrived—for that was a part of what he believed to be the program.

Actually the sack was carried by Florence to the middle of the lawn and left there—to suggest, on the following morning, booty dropped by burglars in their haste to escape. Florence, you see, had no real intention of taking all this trouble for the paltry insurance of the miniatures.

She had worn Percy's boots in order to provide man-size footprints. When she rejoined her husband she took off her boots; then, without bustle or flurry, proceeded to clean and polish them.

Then, leaving the door of the safe open, they went upstairs, undressed and got into bed. Almost as soon as they had done this, Florence reached for the telephone and put an urgent call through to the Richmond police station, some mile and a quarter distant.

"Is that the police?" she cried. "Oh, I think burglars are in our house downstairs! Wait a minute! My husband will speak to you."

"I'm sure I hear burglars," said Percy, carefully repeating the lines in which she had rehearsed him. "I'm going down to see. I have a pistol to protect myself, but will you please come along at once?"

Percy then put on his dressing gown (one of the many little refinements in his personal life introduced by Florence), took up the target pistol, previously loaded and placed ready to his hand, and went downstairs.

"Wait till I come and give the word," cautioned Florence.

As soon as he had left the room, she slipped on a pair of gloves and dragged from under the bed an old cabin trunk that had been hers long before she had met Percy.

From the trunk she took an old double-barreled shotgun—not, be it noted, the shotgun she had bought for Percy, which was in its place behind the cupboard in the "morning room."

Then she hurried downstairs.

Percy was waiting for her in the dining room, a candle in one hand, the target pistol in the other.

"Now!"

Percy, as previously arranged, fired the target pistol at the wall near the safe—as if he had aimed at a burglar and missed. As soon as he had done this, Florence slipped in front of him, let go the two barrels of the shotgun and blew his brains out.

Then she extracted the cartridge cases, dropped the gun on the floor near the safe and hurried back to her bedroom. She locked the door, removed the key and put it, with the empty cartridge cases, in her dressing gown pocket. It was a duplicate key. The other key had been previously placed in Percy's dressing gown pocket.

THEN in a well simulated state of hysteria, she rang the police station again, told them that she had feared the worst, that she could not get out of her bedroom because her husband had locked her in for safety. Would the police, in pity's name, hurry up?

From the first, the case was watertight. When the police arrived they released Florence with the key taken from the dead man's pocket. They did not know, that night, that the deceased was heavily insured in his wife's favor. By the time they heard this, Florence, we know, had contrived to get rid of the duplicate key and the spent cartridge cases.

If the police ever held the theory of her guilt they were compelled to drop it as there was not the tiniest particle of evidence against her. Florence had staged a burglary and had had the good sense to "act" it so that it was complete in all its objective traces.

Every new line, in fact, brought them back to the burglary. The safe had not been forced, but opened with a key. How had the burglars obtained a key? Investigation showed that some three weeks previously Percy had lost his bunch of keys. But as the prudent Florence had insured them they had been returned by the insurance company. While they had been lying about, no one knew where, a burglar might have taken an impression.

The shotgun was the most valuable piece of evidence. Trace the shotgun and you have traced the murderer. And at first sight the shotgun seemed remarkably easy to trace.

It was about 30 years old and, when new, had been very expensive. It bore the name of a well-known London gunsmith—and a number. Further, on the stock there was a deep jagged scratch making the rough outline of a parrot's beak. Further still, on the butt end were the engraved initials "R. O."

The makers were able to say that it had been supplied to a West country landowner. Following this up, the police learned that, shortly after the purchase, the landowner had given it to his gamekeeper. The gun was next heard of as being sold by an itinerant market dealer in Exeter to a farmer named Odium who, however, sold it

CARL VON OSSIETZKY
KOCHIKI MIKIMOTO

Why Hitler's Prisoner Got the Nobel Peace Prize

PRIZE awards are almost sure to stir up differences of opinion, Nobel prizes perhaps more certainly than others. The Nobel Peace Prize probably enjoys greater prestige than any within the gift of living men. It cuts across every line and boundary and is respected wherever civilization is. It shares the reverence and desirability accorded peace itself.

Carl von Ossietzky was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize in 1934. The award is in the hands of a committee selected by Norway's Parliament, the Storting. These gentlemen have no political responsibility to Norway, but Scandinavians have a habit of caution in these matters. It is hard for them to risk offending the bristling armed Powers so near them to the South. Carl von Ossietzky spent 1934 in a Nazi concentration camp and the committee, sorry to inform those who nominated him that the name had been put up too late, gave the prize to Britain's Arthur Henderson, a less controversial citizen.

There was an international uproar about this. Everywhere the committee's choice was condemned by those most interested in the peace movement. The name of Ossietzky was almost unanimously proposed, they say, in 1935. That year the committee could not bring itself to make an award. Subsequently two members, Norway's Foreign Minister and a former Liberal Premier, resigned. Frankly it was explained that they were unwilling to allow their membership to confuse the issue or to lead anyone to think the committee's actions even semi-official. They even admitted they feared their presence on the committee might give Germany an excuse for making official representations to Norway should Ossietzky be selected.

When the 1935 award was finally given to Ossietzky the other day many considered it the most eloquent gesture of contempt any group of private citizens has ever had the privilege of administering to the distasteful government of a foreign nation. Germany's answer was almost a vituperative scream; it was an incredible diplomatic paper. To give the Nobel Peace Prize to a man "sentenced by the highest court of his country as a traitor" was no less than "a challenge and an insult" to Germany. But if the Reich was astonished and displeased, as its Minister at Oslo proclaimed, the impartial world was no less astonished by such a bald intemperate answer.

Who was this Ossietzky? How had he become such a storm center of protest and counter-protest? What sort of man is he and how has he made his mark? Wherein lay his treachery?

Even some who applauded the committee's choice are a little shaky on these questions. And no wonder. Despite the publicity which has focused so assiduously on him, virtually nothing has been published about the man himself. And this for two reasons: First of all, his enemies have made every attempt to shroud his name in black mystery, hoping it would soon be forgotten altogether; secondly, Carl von Ossietzky is about as selfless a man as ever lived. He makes it a cardinal principle never to refer to his own record—either his achievements or his sufferings. He has never desired any publicity for himself, fearing this might distract attention from his ideal and his ideas.

He has never belonged to any political party. He has never espoused anyone else's system of thought. On the other hand he has never been afraid of ideas, never feared to associate his name with unpopular causes and names that are anathema. Even the most incorrigible red-baiter would hesitate to throw such a stalwart independent into any arbitrary classification or over-simplified system of partisanship.

Ossietzky is a nobleman of obviously irreproachable background and antecedents. Although he was a pacifist before the war, he spent four years at the front. He was born in Hamburg. He was 27 when war was declared; he is only 49 today. It may be taken for granted that his career and ancestry have been microscopically examined by his enemies. He is not, even according to the Hitler definition, a Jew. He is not a Communist. He has never been a spy.

IN 1927, after becoming a leader among Germans and foreigners interested in world peace and after having established himself as a writer, he became editor of Die Weltbuehne (World Stage), a mildly liberal independent magazine published in Berlin. Ossietzky quickly became recognized as the most able editorial writer in Germany. His style has been described by a former subscriber as "light, elegant, fluent, witty and above all simple German." A vein of earnest devotion lay beneath the surface. He was considered detached, sane and single-minded to a degree. He hated war. He detested militarism. "There is nothing more devastating," he wrote, "than the omnipotence of generals."

Like most representative intellectual leaders, Carl von Ossietzky had not, at first, been willing to think in terms of unlimited and industrial democracy. He was idealistic, but his faith in the people (a people so long accustomed to take orders) was limited and he believed in gradual progress and slow liberation. His liberalism was never suspect. He fumed against the slaughter of German Communists by the police. He was equally incensed by the Soviet Government's actions against Trotzky and his followers.

It was the realization that the Social Democratic Party was becoming saturated with reactionary elements favorable to a return to pre-war militarism that forced Ossietzky to the left. Even in this, however, he was putting all the emphasis on pacifism. He began to realize that militarism and war were inseparable from a capitalist-imperialist system of government. The freedom to manufacture armaments was returning in Germany owing to the pressure of heavy industrialists on the Government. Germany was secretly rearming largely in response to the efforts of what might be called a "steel trust lobby" abetted by those who were openly militarists.

Carl von Ossietzky.

The people must be made audible, he said.

Carl von Ossietzky was the first member of the so-called bourgeois left, if not the first man in Germany, to preach the united popular front. He proposed an alliance between Socialists, Liberals and Communists, saying that he was forced to the conclusion that this was the only way to stave off Fascism—the last stand of embattled reaction.

"Resistance is still possible," he wrote in 1932. "Fascism has not yet come into power. . . . The man who is named Leon Trotzky and who has performed such historic labors has a right to hate, and it would be absurd to try to pour even a thimbleful of cold water on his passionate appeal to arms at a time when everything seems to point to violence."

That statement is reproduced not only to show the scope of Ossietzky's thought and the power of his words, but also because it was published a year after his imprisonment for treason. The series of articles which brought about this charge exposed with exact and minute detail Germany's secret rearmament program and the formation of the Black Reichswehr, an unheralded supplement to the known army of 100,000 which Germany was permitted under the Versailles Treaty. Although Germany was then supposed to be a democracy and freedom of the press was guaranteed under the Constitution, he was charged with a capital crime. It was hoped that he would fly the country. The case was held over and he was given every opportunity to escape, even at the last minute. A friend who drove him to Leipzig for his appearance before the Supreme Court urged him to cross the Czechoslovak border. Not only was his case hopeless, said the friend, but he could best serve his cause by being more discreet, less foolhardy.

"No," said Ossietzky serenely. "A writer must remain in his own country to be heard. A man speaks with a hollow voice from across the border."

His conviction on the charge of giving away military secrets was a black and white substantiation of the charges in his articles. If Germany's rearmament was no secret, then to describe it was not to betray a secret. He was sentenced to 18 months in the penitentiary, in the teeth of a petition signed by some 50,000 sympathizers.

While he was imprisoned an associate on Die Weltbuehne wrote an article exposing the method by which Germany was building up an air fleet in the guise of an improved nationally subsidized air line. It was rather absurd, but Ossietzky was named as conspirator and co-defendant in the ensuing treason charge, simply because he remained nominal editor of the magazine. This was while Germany was a "democracy." Back in the Supreme Court he seemed perfectly at ease. "I have never stood before a court of law with greater pleasure than on this occasion," the Manchester Guardian quoted him as saying. "The article completely represents my opinions." Whereupon, this being an open trial, unlike his previous one, Ossietzky proceeded to elaborate his opinions.

Altogether he spent more than a year in prison. When he was released (under a general amnesty) he went back to writing precisely the same sort of articles he had been imprisoned for. He made not one reference to his "treason," his "trial," or his punishment. Already Hitler was on the threshold of power. There was no time to spare on fear, no words on invective or reproach.

The last signed article by Carl von Ossietzky and the last issue of Die Weltbuehne appeared early in 1933, only a day or so before Hitler was made Chancellor. The article was headed "Savior," and it was a mildly satirical editorial to the effect that each past messiah had brought Germany nothing but fine illusions and more grief.

ONLY a few days previously, against all the arguments his friends could use, Ossietzky had stood up at a meeting of the German Writer's Union begging the journalists, playwrights, novelists and poets who were its members not to run away when Fascism came in, but to stand fast and put up a united front against tyranny. He tried to live up to his own code. On the night of the Reichstag fire, February 28, 1933, he was arrested without cause or explanation and hustled to Columbia House, the Gestapo headquarters, now notorious as the "examination" house where barbaric cruelties are practiced on political prisoners.

He has never been tried, but up to a very short time ago he has never been out of prison. Those who knew him at Columbia House, at Oranienburg Concentration Camp, at Sonnenburg Concentration Camp, at Esterwegen Concentration Camp, say that during all that time he never compromised. He could recite a biting diatribe against fascism while ostensibly carrying on nothing more harmless than a discourse on modern music. His knowledge of history, of economics and of politics, stayed with him.

Other men succumbed, miserably. A party leader, as prominent there as a Democratic leader in our Senate, obeyed an order to crawl into a dog house and bark affirmation to humiliating questions. Ossietzky, even when unable to answer back, kept his self respect. Wherever he went he was singled out for particularly brutal surveillance. The most vicious torture his warders could devise failed to break his spirit.

In recent months rumors of the hideous torment he was undergoing induced a group of English writers to insist on an interview, which they finally obtained. "How are you?" he was asked.

"Well."

"How are you being treated?"

"Well."

"How is your food?"

"Good."

"Have you anything to read?"

"Yes."

"Is it permitted to send you books?"

"Yes, without any trouble."

"Have you any preferences as to books?"

"I want only one thing. Please send me some literature with description of medieval torture methods."

AT ESTERWEGEN, his last prison, he became so ill with heart and nervous disorders that it was believed he could not survive. He had been put at hard labor in the peat bogs and singled out for abuse on his arrival. It is dangerous to break down while at work in this camp, where they dip prostrate men in alternate baths of scalding and icy water—to see if they're faking. Ossietzky broke down frequently. For periods of a week or so he would be allowed to go to the hospital, where he was attended by a 26-year-old Storm Troop physician-officer. When released from the hospital in the spring of 1935 and detailed to menial work in the dormitories (much lighter jobs than he had ever had before) his companions wouldn't allow him to work at all. In spite of which he relapsed almost immediately. So they put him in the incurable ward ("Light Illness Barracks") and left him in peace, interrupted only by frequent calls from the commandant. He was continually summoned at any hour of the day or night to be examined about a voluminous correspondence which kept arriving for him. He never was allowed to see a letter. It is not known whether Ossietzky was ever subjected to the public floggings popular at Esterwegen, but he suffered every indignity and inconvenience a very sick man can be made to undergo.

When released and sent to West End Sanitarium, Berlin, where he recently received news of the peace prize award, he was a very sick man indeed. Official news sources gave out flat misinformation about him, even to the extent of saying he would give the prize money ($39,303) for anti-Communist activities. Belatedly he accepted the honor. He would like to go Oslo to accept, if the Government allows it, he said. He was still a pacifist and intends to continue one. Ossietzky's physician told reporters (who spent over three days trying to reach his bedside) that the former prisoner is much sicker than he seems to realize.

Correspondents said nothing to refute official rumor that he has lost his sanity. The latest official refutation the Post-Dispatch has received dates from last spring. At that time his health was at its worst, but his mind was still as clear as a bell.

MAX PUTZEL.

The Japanese Pushcart Boy Who Became Pearl Maker to the World

TOKIO, Japan.

THEY say Kochiki Mikimoto never even heard of pearls before he was 18 years old. He hadn't much time for school, let alone for jewels. A merchant's son, born at Toba in the prefecture of Miye, he was pushing a persimmon cart in the streets of Tokio when other boys his age were in their classes, learning of the world and its treasures.

He prospered, and in time he graduated from the peddler's cart, but not to jewelry. He became a macaroni manufacturer. It was 1890, and he was 33 years old, before, at the Third National Industrial Exposition in Tokio, he learned that about pearls which has made him now, at 78, "the most popular millionaire in Japan."

And what he learned, curiously, was not a fact, but a question, a doubt, a hope that somewhere a fact existed for the man with a mind and a will to seek it out. Mikimoto had heard about pearls, now. At the Industrial Exposition he saw the finest in the Orient. He asked many questions. And it happened that there at hand were two men from the Imperial University who knew most of the answers—all of the answers, it seemed, but one.

Professor Sasaki and Professor Mitsukuri could tell him a great deal about the formation of the pearl in the living oyster. The pearl, it seemed, meant that the oyster was "sick," in a way; at least, some irritant, a grain of sand, perhaps, had got into the oyster, and the oyster gave it the lovely iridescent coating which made it a pearl in order to smooth it over and stop its irritation.

And so, said Professor Mitsukuri, it seemed that one ought to be able to plant a grain of sand in an oyster, put it back in the sea, and have it produce a pearl to order. But it didn't work that way—although the Chinese had been known to implant a tiny Buddha and have it coated over. When attempts had been made to produce a regular pearl in that fashion, the oyster had sickened and died, or the irritant had become an unsightly lump on the shell, or something equally unfortunate had happened. Nobody knew quite how to go about it.

That was what really fascinated Mikimoto—that "nobody knew." He did love pearls. And the true pearls that most caught his fancy were quite beyond the macaroni business. Suppose he could find a way to grow them?

He planted a tiny mother of pearl bead in an oyster, between body and shell, and returned it to its bed in Toba Bay. And for four years he made macaroni and waited.

In 1894 he hauled the oyster up again and looked inside. The bead was beautifully covered, but it was attached to the shell. It looked like a "blister pearl," and Mikimoto felt it was no good at all. So he went on making macaroni, and went on trying to make pearls.

The process made him a scientist, in his way, long before it made any pearls—that is, if a scientist is one who attempts to arrive at fact by observation and experiment. By experiment he established that not all the cells of the oyster body had the power to make pearly secretion; the function was reserved for the epithelial cells—those of the "skin" inclosing the oyster body inside the shell. When a pearl was formed around an irritant inside the body of an oyster, it was because the irritant, in entering, had carried in with it some of these "skin" cells. He, and, separately, a professional scientist, proved that these cells could produce the pearly substance without any irritant at all. Independently, each showed that a bit of the living epithelium of one oyster, transplanted to another oyster, would produce a pearl—irregular in form and consequently worthless, but identical in substance and internal structure with the finest known to the connoisseurs.

Kochiki Mikimoto.

The macaroni manufacturer did something with that knowledge. And in 1913, at 56, after the expenditure of many years and many yen upon a hobby, with the greater part of his life gone, he was on the threshold of a new career. Now he could quit making macaroni. He could have all the pearls he wanted for himself. He could "cultivate" pearls for the world. He could match a $50,000 necklace of genuine pearls at a price of $10,000 or less—and in consequence, after little more than two decades, he owns 42,000 acres of oyster beds in 14 bays and inlets, controls some 10,000,000 culture pearls an does an annual business of $2,000,000.

He built a monument to the oyster from which he took his first perfect cultured pearl.

Daily he goes to his temple from his home—on Pearl Island in Toba Harbor—clad in native costume plus umbrella, patent leather slippers and bowler hat, to give thanks to his gods. Frequently he reads them notes that have caught his eye in the day's newspapers, and he does not forget his debt to the oysters which give him such magnanimous service.

Occasionally he makes a special event of thanksgiving. The most recent was a memorial service for the souls of thousands of oysters martyred to his fortune. The Buddhist Jodo sect conducted chants and prayers for the molluscs sacrificed in 30 years. And 42 members of Mikimoto's family held rehearsal for his funeral service.

In the 17 years between his Imperial patent for the fundamentals of his process and his first "perfect" product in 1913, Mikimoto had learned volumes. The result was that the early hostility of jewelers and experts alike met an unbroken succession of defeats. There were all sorts of complaints about the quality and appearance of his pearls. But, unfortunately for the complainants, they were unable to distinguish between Mikimoto's and the genuine article.

Mikimoto's exclusive patent has run out now, and others are getting into the field, but he has a running start. A few years ago he is said to have destroyed 700,000 pearls to keep up both quality and price, and yet the price today is a fraction of what it was only two years ago.

Still, it returns a juicy profit to the former macaroni maker, with millions and millions of molluscs working busily for him on his "farms"—though they work only in the warm seasons.

THE oysters that produce the best pearls are not the "sick," Mikimoto found in his years of experiment, but the healthiest. They are selected as "infants"—the experts call them "spats"—and placed in indivdual cages in beds 40 to 50 feet under water. The cages are changed for larger cages once a year and cleaned twice a year. When the oysters are three years old, they have to go to work. And work begins with a delicate operation.

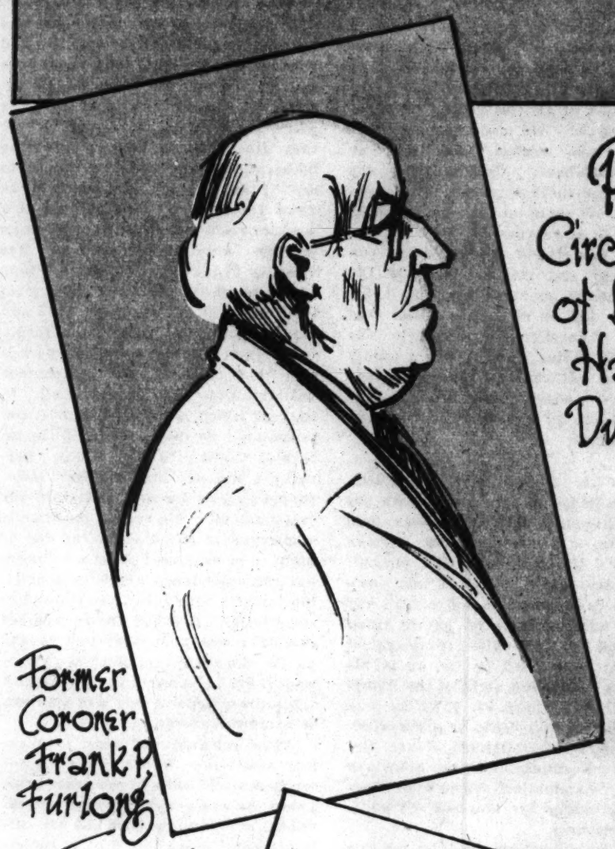

The shell is removed from one oyster, and a tiny bead placed on the "skin," which is dissected from its body, tied over the bead, and then inserted inside the body of another oyster. The graft is treated with astringents, the oyster returned to its cage and, if post-operative recovery seems satisfactory to the nurses, to its bed on the bottom of the sea. Thereafter, in each warm season, the oyster secretes alternately a layer of a protein and a layer of lime carbonate, and in seven years there is a pearl. For every worthy one, 19 are discarded as unfit.

COURTROOM FACES Drawn by a St. Louis Jurist

Pen and Ink Sketches by Circuit Judge Moses Hartmann of Some of the Hundreds Who Have Appeared in his Court During his Years on the Bench

Former Coroner Frank P. Furlong

Judge Moses Hartmann.

PRACTICALLY all judges fiddle with pen or pencil while presiding over the trial of a law suit—a result, possibly, of nervous tension incident to mental concentration. Some draw intricate and quite meaningless geometrical figures. Some put down precisely an endless succession of check marks. Some make row after row of sober straight lines. Some cover paper with fanciful curlicues. . . . Circuit Judge Moses Hartmann draws pictures.

Listening to testimony in his courtroom here, Judge Hartmann at the same time sketches faces he sees about him—faces of litigants and lawyers, of witnesses and jurors. With a block of paper on his knee and a bottle of ink in an open drawer beside him, he pens the portraits, the high desk of his bench screening the work of his hand from observation.

For 10 years or so the Judge has been making his courtroom sketches. At first they were rather aimless pencilings on a blotter or any scrap of paper that happened to be before him. After a time he realized that he was getting some pretty fair likenesses, and the interest he had always felt in drawing—although never formally trained in it—increased. He provided himself with pads of paper and drawing ink, and began to make rapid but careful sketches of actors in the sometimes exciting, sometimes tedious dramas unfolded in a court of law.

It takes the jurist only a minute to draw one of these pictures. And while his pen is moving his mind is fully attentive, he says, to what is going on in the courtroom. If the court reporter misses a few words of a witness's testimony, due to a noise or other disturbance, the Judge can, he says, repeat for him what was said.

In addition to affording occupation for restless hands, this sketching, Judge Hartmann thinks, is of some practical value. His study of a face in drawing it sharpens his impression of the owner, makes it easier for him to keep in mind that person's contribution to the case. This is particularly serviceable when ruling on a motion for a new trial; the Judge can get out his sketches of witnesses in the case—each drawing is labeled with the name of the case in which the subject appeared—and by looking over the pictures refresh his memory as to the judgment he formed of each of these witnesses at the trial, perhaps several weeks before.

Hundreds of the one-minute drawings have accumulated in Judge Hartmann's desk. Among them are informal portraits of persons prominent in the professional and business life of St. Louis, and studies of obscure men and women who came to public attention only during their day in court. A few of these pictures from the Judge's private, self-made gallery are reproduced on this page.

Judge Hartmann, now sitting in Division 18 of the Circuit Court of St. Louis, will retire to private practice January 1, after 18 years on the bench; he is one of the Republicans who failed of re-election in the Democratic landslide last month.

How Two Rival Hamlets Tackled Broadway

Paris the critics fought with swords. And in New York people were merely uncomfortable, though perhaps less so than when confronted by a bearded Bernhardt in the role of Shylock. Nevertheless Sarah Bernhardt could do as she liked. She first played "Hamlet" in New York during 1906 and she came back for more in the season of 1916.

From this sketchy history it may be gathered that most of the 117 bona fide New York performances before 1900 were more picturesque than subsequent ones, even when Bernhardt and John ("Freud") Barrymore and modern dress are taken into consideration. Veteran theater addicts alone are qualified to discuss comparatively the titanic reputations of several nineteenth century actors and the clay-footed celebrities of today. Mounet-Sully, Forbes-Robertson, Henry Irving, E. H. Sothern, and Edwin Booth, all gained prestige by their renditions of what was in their day as in this the most popular of Shakespearean roles so far as the actor is concerned. Only Walter Hampden survives as a representative of their school, the declamatory. And judging by the relative success of Hampden and his successors, Barrymore, Massey and Gielgud, the old order has changed—definitely. Even that is an unfair touchstone, for no one loyal to the old school would admit Hampden as a representative example of so distinguished a group as that listed above.

Most important in relation to the present discussion is the fact that this season, successor to the most exciting year Manhattan theater has seen since the crash, an entirely new standard has been set. Almost unanimously the critics have hailed Guthrie McClintic's production as nearest to the heart's desire. Why? Probably the producer expresses the answer best in his own curtain speech, printed in the November edition of Stage.

"Let me say right now," he writes, "I have made no 'version' of 'Hamlet.' I used Shakespeare and again Shakespeare; drama, story, plot, and all, step by step. The author knew his own business as nobody else does. If the producer disrupts the order of his going, he is looking for a fall. . . .

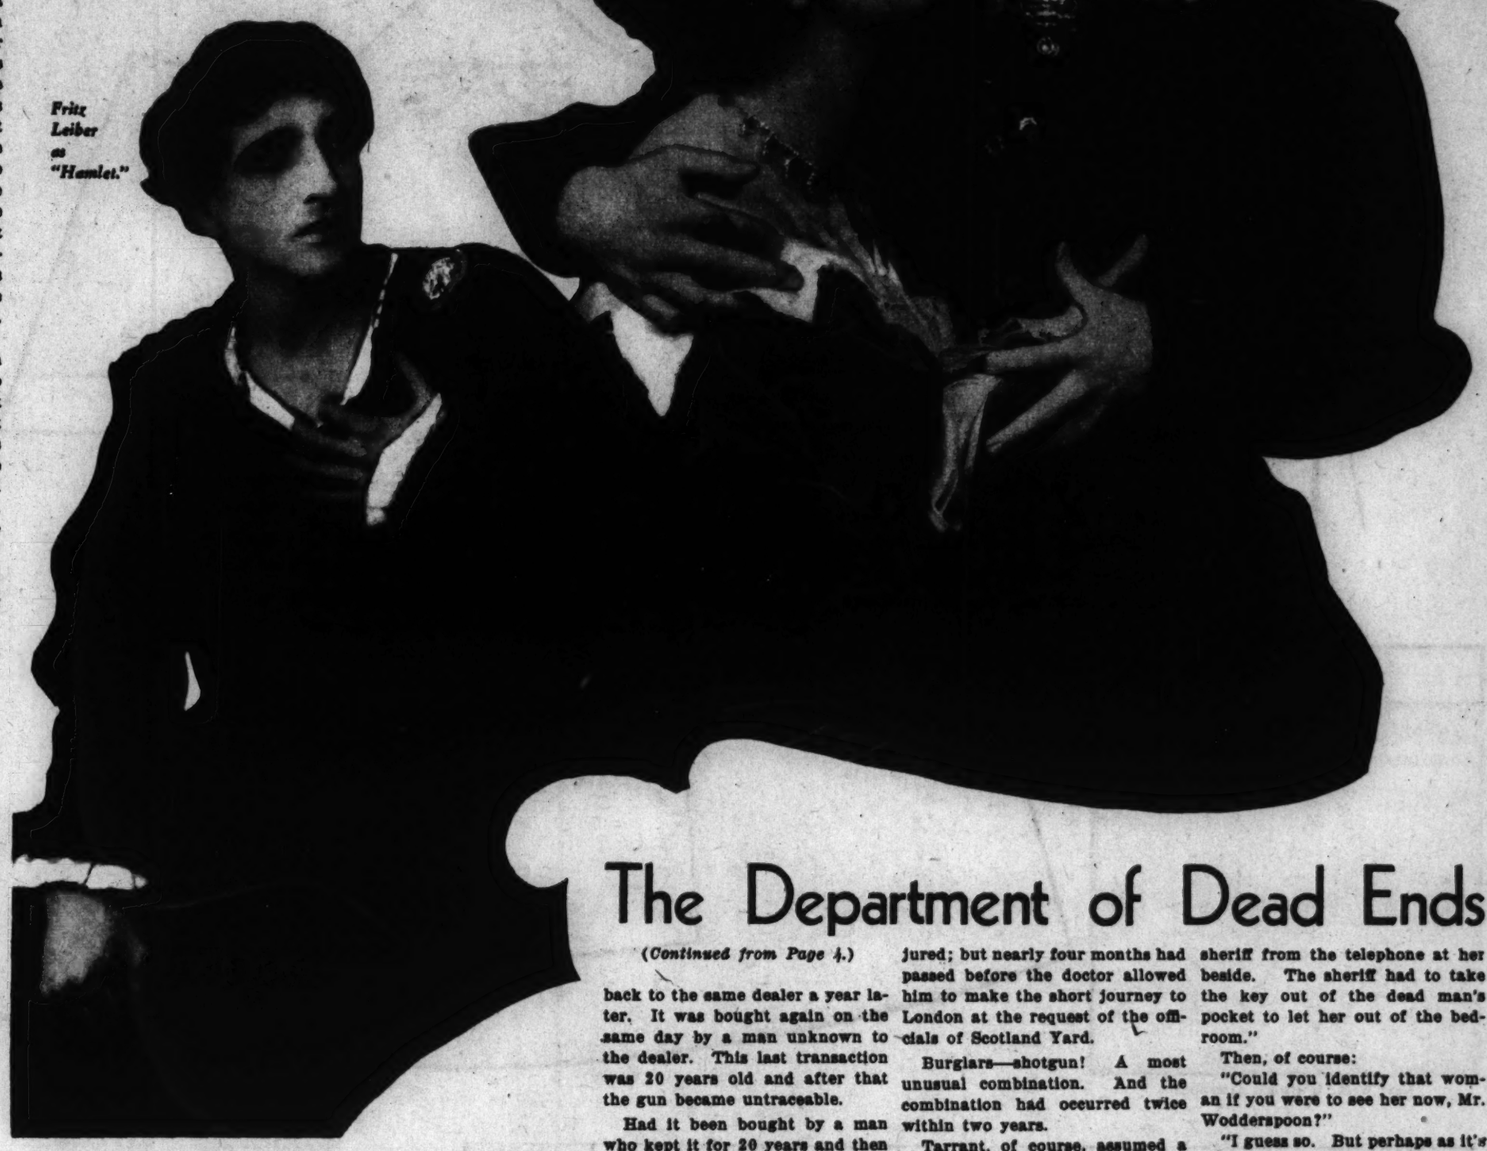

"If we could act the entire 'Hamlet' as is done occasionally in the Old Vic in London one problem before us would be eliminated, but audiences can't take four hours and a half for drama unless you make a festival out of it or do an O'Neill. So we have had to cut. . . . We have given only one intermission and cut the waits between the 19 scenes to a minimum. . . .

"In the study you can read a sentence twice, a dozen times; in the theater there is no time for this: The actors must always hurry on to the next line; so the dramatist must be sure his points are driven home. That is why it is so difficult to cut Shakespeare and so fatal when scenes are omitted bodily. . . . We have kept every scene of the text. We have cut lines, parts of lines, but always we remember that the theater is the place where there is a story to tell, and so not a single line of plot has been eliminated.

"THERE are 41 laughs in 'Hamlet' according to tradition. I hope I kept all of them in. . . . The public, it seems, still is in the dark ages about Shakespeare's own stage and its settings. I wish school teachers would forget the old legends about the bareness of the Elizabethan stage equipment, and learn of its employment of all sorts of devices. . . . I think Jo Mielziner has done a superb job."

That epitomizes the background John Gielgud, an excellent performer in the best British tradition, had to work with. He made the most of it. Against this competition Leslie Howard poses another "modern version." In the same journal, same edition, he writes, "When a modern actor, one who is completely lacking in the remotest form of classical training. . . ." The reader pauses there and, if he has just finished reading McClintic's sage and temperate lines, probably doesn't bother to start again. He glances briefly at Howard's chatty imaginary conversation with the playwright (labeled Me and Will), quivers involuntarily and phones his broker for two seats next Friday at the Empire.

The Empire Theater, where Gielgud opened October 8 before one of the most brilliant first night audiences since Ziegfeld, happens to be one of the favorite halls on Broadway. The audience that congregates there this season is prepared to see an actor everywhere proclaimed as THE Hamlet of our time. Leslie Howard's persistent charm is not a serious competitor for that, but it continues (at this writing) to draw a good house.

The Department of Dead Ends

back to the same dealer a year later. It was bought again on the same day by a man unknown to the dealer. This last transaction was 20 years old and after that the gun became untraceable.

Had it been bought by a man who kept it for 20 years and then himself turned burglar? A shotgun was not part of the normal burglar's outfit. Further, the burglar-murderer knew that the gun was untraceable, but feared that the cartridges might not be—for he had had the clear-headedness to take the empty cases with him. . . . A nice little logical tangle that led nowhere.

Organization did its best. A description of the gun was circulated in all the papers, but without result. And so, in due course, the dossier and the shotgun were sent to the Department of Dead Ends.

Florence collected the insurance and, when probate had been granted, sold the house at Richmond. With one thing and another she came out of her brief marriage some £20,000 the richer.

She went to live in a residential hotel in Kensington while, to occupy her leisure, she opened a one-room office in the city as an independent insurance broker—an enterprise she did not take too seriously.

But the business brought her in touch with a fairly wealthy broker who came to live in the same hotel. He seems to have shown a certain resistance to Florence's charms, for a year after he had installed himself at the hotel they were still spoken of merely as friends.

Whether she would eventually have brought him to the point of marriage can never be known. The ceremony had certainly not taken place when they went to Harrogate together—whither the detectives came to arrest her for the murder of her husband two years previously.

It is no reflection on Florence's skill as a murderer to say that she failed to guess that, some 20 months after her crime, Mr. John Wodderspoon, an American citizen, staying with English friends at Sevenoaks in Kent, might himself become mixed up in a burglary.

Mr. Wodderspoon, in defense of his host's property, had rushed upon a couple of burglars and had been knocked unconscious for his pains. And in a rather unusual manner. For they had begun by menacing him with a shotgun. And when he had refused to be menaced they had clubbed him with the butt, giving him a very bad concussion.

He was not permanently injured; but nearly four months had passed before the doctor allowed him to make the short journey to London at the request of the officials of Scotland Yard.

Burglars—shotgun! A most unusual combination. And the combination had occurred twice within two years.

Tarrant, of course, assumed a logical connection and promptly guessed that the burglars who had assaulted Wodderspoon were the burglars who had killed Percy Hornby.

To Tarrant Mr. Wodderspoon described them as "hoboes" which was not in itself very helpful. He was, in fact, of no use at all, but Tarrant was too polite to tell him so. He was, too, inattentive, obviously seeing Scotland Yard as a tourist, and thoroughly enjoying it. His eye kept straying to the shotgun. As it had been in that room for nearly two years before Wodderspoon had landed in England, even Tarrant did not expect him to be able to throw any light on it.

BUT here Tarrant was wrong. Here, in short, he was presented with a victory he had done nothing to earn.

"Say, that's remarkable, Officer! I guess I've seen that gun before. There's the parrot's beak on the stock that was made by my very own mule when my friend dropped it. Look in the butt end and you'll find the initials "R. O." If the regulations permit, I'd like to ask you what that gun is doing here."

We have, of course, no exact record of the actual words used, but the conversation must have flowed somewhat on these lines.

"You know the owner of this gun, Mr. Wodderspoon?"

"Sure! He was my friend—Ralph Hornbeck of Milton, Ohio. He bought the gun from a second-hand store when he was touring in Britain. The poor fellow thought the world of that gun."

"Do you know—?"

"You'll excuse me, officer, but it's a painful subject. My friend shot himself with that gun. He tied string round the trigger and took both barrels. I'm not saying it was done on account of his wife, mind. She was of British birth—and I dare say she had no fault, bar that of being 20 years younger than her husband. Anyway, she wasn't too popular. She just collected the $20,000 insurance and moved on."

Inevitably, in some form or another, Tarrant must have asked:

"Did any suspicion fall on the wife?"

"No. It was suicide right enough. He locked his wife in the bedroom before he did it. She heard the gun go off and rang the sheriff from the telephone at her beside. The sheriff had to take the key out of the dead man's pocket to let her out of the bedroom."

Then, of course:

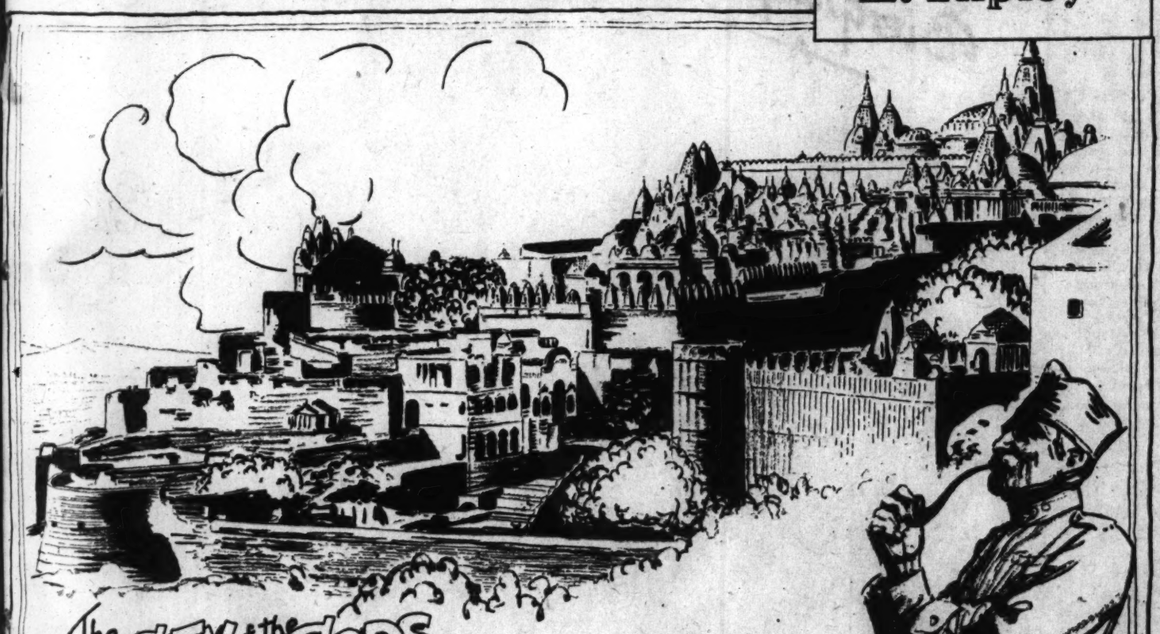

"Could you identify that woman if you were to see her now, Mr. Wodderspoon?"

"I guess so. But perhaps as it's a good many years ago—wait, she had little specks of color in the white of her left eye."

BLOND DOLL

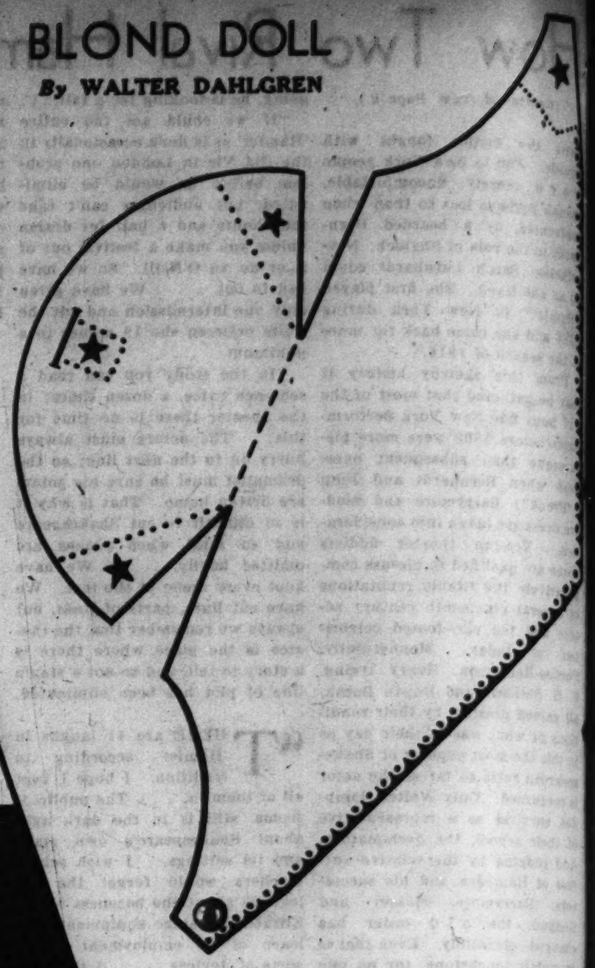

By WALTER DAHLGREN

DIRECTIONS ● First mount upon heavy paper, then cut out on outside lines. Fold on dotted lines and paste (stars indicate paste). Start with the figure. Now take the arm A and put paste along the edge bearing the three little stars. Then roll on a pencil beginning at the same edge, color side out. Paste the free end so that arm is cigarette shaped. Do the same with B. To put arms on body (see diagram) thread a large-eyed needle with string and knot the end. Flatten out the ends of the arms with the x on them about one inch. Now sew through x on arm A. Sew through x on body at one side and out through x on other side. Sew through x on arm B and knot securely. Paste hood together (be sure to cut slit for tab "C") and put on body as shown in diagram. The hood is held in place by tab "C" and also by a touch of paste on star between chin and apron. Now you have a little doll styled after an old Swedish doll made of birch bark.

"WE KNOW ENO"

RADIO SINGER

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.

"Three years ago I had a successful audition for radio. Of course, my friends gave me a party—and what a party! When I awoke my stomach was upset from too much rich food and my head throbbing from too many 'wish you luck' drinks. There I was with just two hours to get ready for my first appearance on the air. I started downtown and made for the first drug store. A lady customer heard me explain my predicament to the druggist and told me what I needed was ENO. That drink of ENO was more refreshing than the coolest water. By the time I reached the studio, I was feeling much better. Twenty minutes to wait—and during that time ENO settled my sick stomach, and the sluggish feeling and headache disappeared."—M. F.*

IT'S BEEN a long time since the first letter saying "We know ENO" came to us. Sixty-five years is a long time, and all that while our files have been accumulating tales of instances where ENO has proved itself a trustworthy friend. Some of these letters are packed with as much drama and excitement as a Five Star Final. Some are just simple stories of every-day occurrences, all are alike in their expression of appreciation for this gentle, reliable laxative with the pleasant taste.

Do you know ENO? It fizzes fast. It tastes good. ENO takes prompt, direct action against the ills that come from constipation. Why use anything harsh or evil-tasting when sparkling, wake-up-ful ENO is so pleasant and refreshing to take?

Know ENO! Your druggist has it in three convenient sizes, all economical to use. 25c, 60c, $1.20—or 10c a glass at the soda fountain.

Co-operative Relief Program in Utah

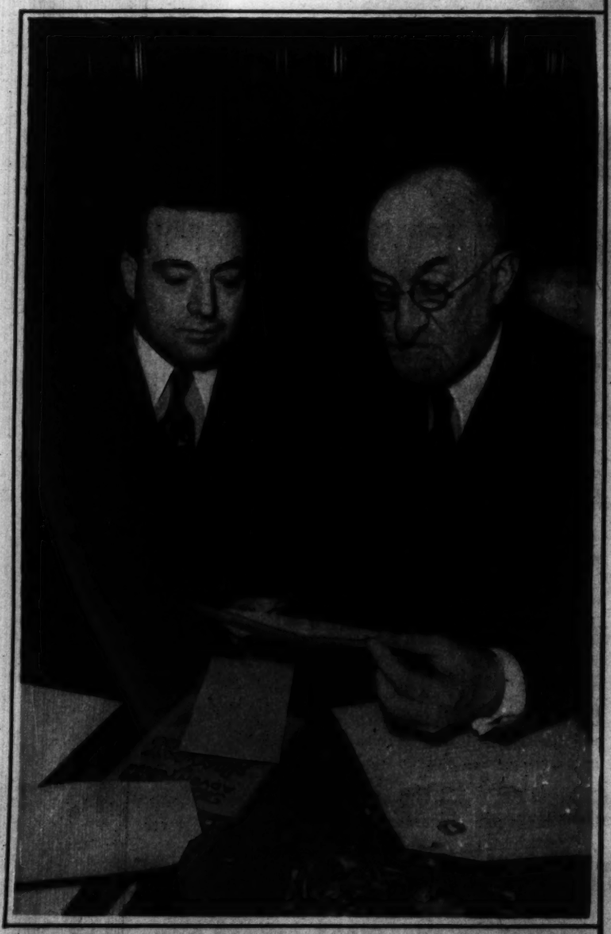

Food raised by farmer members (see left) is processed in canneries like the one above. Store houses now contain 400,000 items of tinned food, 82,308 pounds of flour, 11,860 pounds of meat, and other products.

The Mormon Church has taken some 15,000 persons off relief rolls and organized its own security program for them. Of the former dole takers 1000 have found employment in private industry; others are farming 2396 acres of land such as this, donated by propertied church members.

A women's sewing center in Salt Lake City is one of the 350 projects that have been undertaken. Mrs. Yates, its director, is shown with quilts made under her direction. A system of barter (with certificates as a medium of exchange) makes distribution to the membership possible.

Responsible for the Church Security Program are Harold Lee (left), its director, and Heber J. Grant, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints since 1918.

A drink so good away from home belongs in your refrigerator at home. Coca-Cola, pure refreshment, is good housekeeping always.

The pause that refreshes makes the world's work easier...and makes housework easier, too. The pause that refreshes with ice-cold Coca-Cola keeps busy homes running smoothly.

THEY'RE STILL TALKING About the World's First Vault Over Fourteen Feet

12-13

If you were lucky you were at Madison Square Garden in New York the night of Feb. 25, 1928, for the National A. A. U. indoor meet. You saw this great athlete in the best form of his career.

Only a few moments before he had electrified you by smashing his own world's indoor record of 13 feet, 9¼ inches set in 1927.

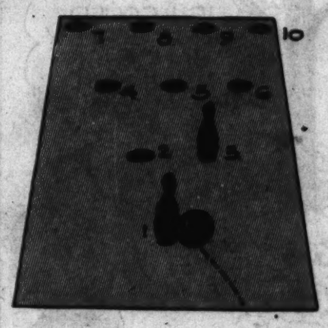

You saw this Yale university superman speed down the approach, poke his vaulting pole into the slot and swing upward in a graceful arch toward the greatest height a vaulter ever cleared.

And now you practically collapse with astonishment as his little body sails cleanly over that bar, which is set at 13 feet and 1 inch!

Sabin Carr of Yale, fans, the first man in the world to vault 14 feet or higher.

STRIKE BOWLING

This is what is known as bowling for the 1-3 pocket. The ball must strike the right side of the No. 1 pin and then smack the No. 3 pin.

Next Week-- Boxing

Spare Bowling

Using the hook ball here, you would start the hook at the left of the center of the alley and strike the No. 3 pin as it passes to the right of that pin.

The straight ball should be started at the right side of the alley and strike the No. 3 pin as it passes to the left of that pin.
